Federal Pay, Veterans Aid Compromise Seen; Senate Bill Faces Veto

Leaders Confer With President in Hope of Agreement.

Caucus of House Seeks Pay Accord

Chief Executive Will Push Fight to Keep Within Budget.

Belief that President Roosevelt will accept some compromise on the Congressional threat to restore Government salaries and a large part of veterans' benefits, in defiance of his budget, grew late yesterday after an extended White House conference.

That the President would veto the increased allowances voted by the Senate, however, likewise was clear, as House Democratic leaders left the White House to work out some solution at a caucus arranged a few hours later.

In advance of the meeting of House Democrats, conferees maintained complete silence, but it was understood various compromise proposals were discussed with the President, intent on maintaining his budget insofar as possible in the face of Congressional sentiment.

Talk for Hour and a Half.

For an hour and a half, President Roosevelt conferred with Appropriations Committee members of both Houses. At the conclusion members departed with instructions to work out some bill acceptable to the White House.

Increases amounting to $350,000,000 were contained in the Senate amendment to the independent offices appropriation bill, now before the House. While it was clear the President would not approve this amount, Government employes still had reason for hope a considerable part of the 15 per cent salary cut would be restored.

Although leaders indicated no definite plan was adopted at the conference, debate in the Senate intimated that the President might agree to a compromise on Government salaries whereby 5 per cent would be restored as of February 1 and an equal amount July 1.

It has also been indicated the White House would accept some modification of the economy legislation affecting veterans, but not to the extent embodied in the Senate's amendment, which was regarded as seriously upsetting budget estimates.

Action Undisclosed.

Pending the House caucus, however, it was apparent Democratic leaders would not disclose their hand in advance. Conclusions reached at the White House conference, members said, would be presented to the caucus, out of which was expected to come a definite course of action.

Attending the meeting were Vice President Garner, Senator Carter Glass (Virginia), chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee; Senators James F. Byrnes (South Carolina) and Richard B. Russell, jr. (Georgia), Appropriations Committee members; Director of the Budget Lewis W. Douglas, and the following Democratic members of the House Appropriations Committee:

James P. Buchanan (Texas), chairman; Clifton A. Woodrum (Virginia), W. A. Ayres (Kansas), William B. Oliver (Alabama), John J. Boylan (New York) and William W. Hastings (Oklahoma).

British, French Ready To Talk Quotas, Duties

London, March 8 (AP).—The British and French, who have been at loggerheads over quotas and import duties, have agreed to see if the matter can not be patched up.

A series of negotiations will start March 14 in London. The British government today replied affirmatively to a French query last night as to whether it was prepared to begin such conversations.

Veteran Federal Judge Resigns in Montana

Helena, Mont., March 8 (AP).—Judge George M. Bourquin, of the Montana Federal District Court, today announced his resignation and retirement from the bench effective May 17, after 22 years service.

Though regarded as a possible contender on the Republican ballot for the United States Senate in opposition to Senator Burton K. Wheeler, the jurist made no mention of any political plans.

Life in England Full of Surprises

London, March 8 (AP).—W. S. Soule, of Sudbury, Ontario, finds life in England full of surprises. Yesterday, as a student flier, he fell out of an airplane 4,000 feet up when his safety belt failed. His parachute worked.

Today a cat walked in front of his automobile, he swerved to avoid it and wrecked the car. Soule was only scratched.

Police on Cold Trail As Shoemaker Hides

Detectives, Told to "Bring Him In," Wait Outside House, but Legislator Sought on Assault Warrant Escapes and Disappears.

Assigned to the trail of Representative Francis H. Shoemaker, Capitol Hill's elusive legislator, two detectives, armed with orders of immediate arrest, faced a sequence of mysterious disappearances last night, and sought in vain to serve a much-talked-of assault warrant on the Minnesota lawmaker.

Indignant at Shoemaker's failure to answer the 2-day-old warrant, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett yesterday telephoned Police Chief Ernest W. Brown. A few minutes later detectives left headquarters with orders to "bring in" the Representative immediately.

Earlier in the day Shoemaker was informed officially of the warrant and indicated he would appear in court tomorrow—"if I am not too busy."

After Garnett's telephone call, Detective Sergeants Floyd Truscott and Howard Ogle were sent to apprehend him.

They went to the Capitol where Shoemaker was listening to debate on the floor of the House. Someone was said to have "tipped him off" that the detectives were waiting. He disappeared.

The policeman went to his office. A secretary greeted them. He said: "I'm sorry, but I don't expect Mr. Shoemaker back today."

From there the cooling trail led back to the Capitol. No one had seen the representative, but the detectives remembered their orders. Late last night the hunt was still on—with very little result.

The warrant for Shoemaker's arrest was issued Tuesday by Assistant U. S. Attorney David A. Hart, on complaint of Charles Newman, a taxi driver. Newman charged the lawmaker twice struck him in the face during a traffic argument.

Wednesday night Detective Truscott was given the warrant for service. After hours of searching

Driver Killed In Richmond Mail Robbery

Reserve Bank Truck Is Looted by 4 Bandits, Who Escape.

Richmond, March 8 (AP).—A Federal Reserve truck was held up here tonight, its driver killed and mail packages were stolen by four men in two cars who escaped after the shooting, leaving one car behind them. It carried New Jersey plates.

E. M. Huband, 46, of Richmond, was the driver who was killed.

State police immediately flashed an alarm for the other car, a small dark sedan also with New Jersey plates.

The robbery occurred near the Broad Street Railroad Station as the Reserve Bank truck was blocked on a bridge road leading from the express sheds.

A witness of the holdup, L. M. Palmore, said the two cars were parked so as to block the roadway. When the truck stopped two men jumped from shrubbery at the side of the road. They opened a door in the back of the truck and began shooting, Palmore said. Two other men remained seated in one of the cars.

An official of the bank said that nothing but "mail and canceled checks" were in the bags.

Old Greek Manuscript Is Sold for $14,000

Chicago, March 8 (AP).—A twelfth century Greek manuscript of the life of Christ, bought by the late Edith Rockefeller McCormick in 1928 for $25,000, is to go to the University of Chicago for $14,000.

The probate court authorized the sale today by the trustee of Mrs. McCormick's estate. Known as the Byzantine manuscript, it contains 90 miniatures of great value and interest to artists and historians.

Annam Emperor Picks Commoner for Bride

Saigon, Cochin-China, March 8 (AP).—Emperor Bao Dai, youthful Europeanized monarch of Annam, has chosen a commoner for a bride. His engagement to Miss Yuen Hu Hao, daughter of a wealthy Cochin-Chinese family, was announced today. The wedding is set for March 20.

Bao Dai, who is 21, succeeded to the throne of Annam, French protectorate, eight years ago.

Stock Market Control Bill To Be Revised

"Well Recognized Evils" Only to Come Under New Measure.

(Associated Press.)

Complete revision of the Fletcher-Rayburn stock market control bill was undertaken by its Congressional framers yesterday after a hint from the White House that it should be confined to "well recognized evils of the exchange."

Even before Senator Robinson, Democratic leader of the Senate, had emerged from the executive offices with this advice, a new draft of the bill was virtually completed by experts working under the direction of Chairman Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee.

Meanwhile, Secretary Morgenthau called a special Treasury press conference to deny published reports he opposed the regulatory legislation. He said he had "never read it," taken "no part in it," and had "no opinion of it one way or another."

"Inside Strategy."

Fletcher indicated the revised bill would contain modifications of many of the provisions which opponents of the legislation have contended would place business under the control of the Government and disrupt the exchanges. Shares rallied briskly in late trading in New York upon word of this development.

Meantime, the Florida Senator encountered a little "inside strategy" within his committee which blocked his plans to complete hearings on the bill yesterday.

Requests from Republican members for a flock of new witnesses forced Fletcher to extend the hearings into next week, but he announced firmly they would not be prolonged further.

Robinson, leaving the White House, said of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill, "It will be simplified as much as practicable so as to direct its features against well-recognized evils of the exchange."

Fletcher told newspapermen that among the changes already in contemplation were more flexible mar-

New York Woman Loses Gems.

Raleigh, N. C., March 8 (AP).—Mrs. W. M. Collins, of New York, today reported to police the theft of jewelry valued at between $4,000 and $6,000 from her room at the Sir Walter Hotel here.

First Lady Finds Virgin Island Housewife Cooking 'NRA Pork'

St. Croix, Virgin Islands, March 8 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt found time in a busy round of activities today to explore two native villages and add details of island cookery to her study of West Indian economic and social conditions.

In one of the villages—being remodeled into Federal nomesteads—she asked Hilda Benjamin, native housewife, what she was cooking.

"NRA pork," answered Hilda, who complained she got rained upon while going from the living room to the outdoor kitchen in her two-room home, built by Uncle Sam.

"Have your man build a gallery," suggested Mrs Roosevelt in reply.

The President's wife told other housewives they must keep flies out of the food. Later she had them show her how they used their crude utensils, and drank cocoanut milk.

She inspected farm projects along Lindbergh Bay, watched the building of roads, draining of swamps and repairing of schools, and untiringly asked questions.

Then, at 9:30 a. m., with her friends and Gov Paul Pearson, Mrs. Roosevelt hopped from St. Thomas for St. Croix.

They stepped ashore at the spot where Columbus is reputed to have landed from his first crossing of the Atlantic.

The party flew back to St. Thomas in the afternoon and departed immediately for San Juan, Puerto Rico, to spend the night, where they arrived at 5:30 p. m.

Britain Joins Paris, Bans Cut in Arms

London Points to U. S. Building, Increases Air Defenses.

France Serves Notice It Must Act to Hold Its Securities.

(Associated Press.)

Great Britain and France made it known yesterday that their desires for security have forced them to new attitudes regarding armaments.

Sir Philip Sassoon, British undersecretary for air, told the House of Commons the British government must have parity in aviation as long as other nations cling to their aircraft building programs.

Leaders of the French armed forces agreed it was impossible for France to disarm and permit Germany to rearm without further security guarantees.

On the other side of the world, in China, Japanese military chieftains questioned increasing Chinese orders for American airplanes.

Britain Acts to Build Up Air Defense Force

London, March 8 (AP).—Great Britain plainly served notice upon the world today that she is determined to have parity in the air as long as other nations cling to their aircraft building programs.

She is unwilling, Sir Philip Sassoon told the House of Commons, "to accept a position of continuing inferiority in the face of rapidly expanding air forces in the United States, Japan, Russia and other nations."

"The world has reached a critical point of extreme delicacy in the matter of disarmament," Sir Philip, undersecretary for aviation, said during debate on estimates for increasing the British air force.

Cites U. S. Building.

"Far from accepting our proposals, other nations have steadily increased the strength of their respective air armaments until they far outnumber our own.

"The President of the United States has recently sanctioned an additional expenditure of some £3,000,000 on new aircraft for American naval and military air services. Russia and Japan also are expanding their air forces largely."

Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council, immediately afterward declared that if negotiations for limiting air armaments are fruitless, the government "will see to it that the air strength of this country shall no longer be in a pos-

Cuba Will Use Army in Strike

Walkout of Employes at U. S.-Owned Telephone Firm Brings Crisis.

Havana, March 8 (AP).—With the island's most important communications system — the American-owned Cuban Telephone Co.—paralyzed by a strike of employes, a high government official announced tonight that all strikes will be broken "with full army protection," if necessary.

However, officials moved to put a quick end to the walkout of 1,100 employes of the telephone concern, and to settle the dock-workers strike by arbitration, if possible, without resorting to other means.

The government plans to use the army should a general strike develop.

The telephone walkout was sudden and without warning. It silenced 33,000 telephones in Havana, and another 6,000 in the provincial area. The six radio stations and wires serving brokers also were closed down. The corporation is valued at $28,000,000.

The company has been studying workers' demands, but the workers apparently decided not to continue dealing with the company's labor department.

Faced with the fact that a general strike was practically responsible for the downfall of the government of former President Gerardo Machado, the Mendieta forces called an emergency meeting of all parties involved in the dockworkers strike.

Convict Captured At Mother's Grave

Florida Trusty Fled Jail to See Ill Parent.

Miami, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Back in jail, William J. Donnely, 19, of Jersey City, N. J., today told officers of his recent escape from the county stockade here so that he might go to the bedside of his dying mother, and of his capture by police there as her body was being lowered into a grave.

Donnely, a trusty at the stockade, serving a six-month sentence for automobile theft, said he was advised by a friend here his mother was near death.

Escaping from the stockade, Donnely made his way to Jersey City, arriving at the bedside, he said, two hours before his mother died.

Air Official Lent Postal Aid $10,000

Henderson Tore Up Gove Notes, He Tells Senate Probe.

Col. Brittin Defends "Spoils" Conference Participation.

While Congressional legislators were rushing to put President Roosevelt's recommendations for air mail regulation into working form, the Senate Mail-Contract Investigating Committee yesterday uncovered two important bits of evidence:

Paul Henderson, vice president of United Aircraft & Transport, testified that he loaned $10,000 to Chace Gove, former assistant to W. Irving Glover, one-time Republican Second Assistant Postmaster General. Henderson said he destroyed Gove's note and never received the money.

Col. L. H. Brittin, ousted vice president of Northwest Airways, who has just finished a ten-day jail term for contempt of the Senate, said that the legality of the famous "spoils conferences" of 1930 was of no concern to the air line operators who had been called into conference by former Postmaster General Brown.

Expect New Laws Soon.

Based on the voluminous evidence taken by the committee, new legislation is expected to be introduced in the Senate within a few days. Postoffice Department officials spent the day conferring with Congressional committees to hasten putting the President's suggestions into legal form.

It was estimated that at least 60 days would elapse before the Postoffice Department could receive bids from the private companies destined to fly the mails. June 1 was mentioned as the earliest date that even a part of the mails could be taken from the Army Air Corps and returned to commercial lines.

The President's wishes were interpreted to mean that none of the air line officials who participated in the 1930 conferences could be connected in any way with the new bidding companies.

Since the Postoffice Department has decided that all contracts obtained as a result of these conferences, with the possible exception of the National Parks Airways route, were collusive and fraudulent, it is considered unlikely that any of the old contractors will be able to reorganize in accordance with the proposed legislation within several months at least.

All Payments Withheld.

The Postoffice Department revealed that no payments had been made to any of the air lines whose contracts were canceled on February 19, pending an investigation to determine whether any of them had been overpaid. This announcement followed Henderson's testimony Wednesday that United Aircraft had received no payments from the Government since January 1.

The President's drastic proposals for the new air-mail law were warmly supported by the Air Line Pilots

Ladeez and Gents! The Battling Brain Trusters Are Next

Richmond, March 8 (Spl.).—A threatened fist fight during debate in the Upper House recently between Senators John A. Lesner, Norfolk, and Henry T. Wickham, Ashland, nad its repercussion today in the House.

Delegate H. M. Bandy, Norton, introduced the following resolution:

"Be it resolved by the House of Delegates, the Senate concurring, that there be appropriated out of any unexpended balance that has not been heretofore appropriated by legislative expenditures a sufficient sum to provide a boxing arena, sufficient boxing gloves and other paraphernalia for the exclusive use of those gentlemen of the Senate who have a fighting disposition."

Bank Messengers Robbed of $50,000

Daring Greenville Holdup Staged in Jail's Shadow.

Greenville, S. C., March 8 (AP).—Two swift, quiet bandits, working almost in the shadow of the Greenville County Jail, today held up a pair of South Carolina National Bank employes and escaped with $50,000.

The robbery occurred as the two employes were returning by automobile from the postoffice with the package of currency.

Many citizens were witnesses as the light, fast bandit car forced the bank machine to the curb, took the money at the point of a pistol, and sped away.

Consumers' Group Silent on Wages

Johnson Pushes Ahead on 12-Point Plan of Revision.

By Raymond Clapper.

The Administration's wage raising plan encountered resistance yesterday from spokesmen for heavy, or capital goods, industries.

They countered with a plea for a Government policy that would encourage private investment funds back into their business, particularly by modification of the securities act and easing up of the pending stock exchange bill.

Spokesmen for consumers goods industries, while indicating sympathy with proposals for reducing working hours, were silent on the question of wage increases.

These developments left Gen. Hugh S. Johnson somewhat uncertain as to how to proceed in carrying out President Roosevelt's plan for immediate action to increase consumer buying power.

Favors Executive Order.

He favors a general Executive order which, before going into effect, would be modified after consultation with various industries to fit their individual circumstances. His final recommendations will await further conferences with committees representing the two basic types of industry.

Meantime, Gerard Swope, chairman of the business and advisory council for the Department of Commerce, announced that his group has given consideration to a permanent plan which might possibly succeed the National Recovery Administration, and to where the supervision of such work should permanently rest.

This appeared to be a revival of discussion over his own plan, suggested some months ago, whereby the Government would be less dominant in the plan of industrial self-government and with business, through its own chambers of commerce taking over more of the regulatory work.

"I am trying not to crystallize any definite plan," Swope explained.

Major Crum Ninth This Week Appointed to Recovery Job.

Maj. W. H. Crum, U. S. A., has been drafted from the service to act as NRA administration member of the supervisory agency of the machine tool and forging machine industry, it was announced yesterday.

Maj. Crum was the ninth Army officer this week to receive an NRA appointment. It is understood that other officers will join the organization as administration members of code authorities as soon as their release can be obtained from the War Department.

National Recovery Administrator Johnson is said to feel that the use of soldiers in these positions will help to solve a difficulty with which he has been faced for some time, in seeking men with technical knowledge of certain industries, who can be relied upon to give disinterested service to the Government.

Certain observers, who feel that there is the threat of Fascism in NRA, are said to feel uneasy at this recent trend. A remark made in a

End Tax-Free Bonds, Urges Morgenthau

Secretary Invites House Committee to Tap Huge New Revenue Source.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday revived an ancient legislative possibility with a statement before a House Judiciary sub-committee unqualifiedly indorsing income taxation on all future issues of Federal, State and municipal securities.

For years the proposal has lain dormant in Congress, occasionally obtaining some breath of life when Secretaries of the Treasury or others interested in blocking avenues of tax avoidance have expressed approval of the idea.

The House committee, now holding hearings on a variety of such measures to reach tax-exempt securities, called on the Cabinet officer for an opinion, particularly in view of the Treasury's present huge financing operations, which some thought might be adversely affected.

Asks New and Permanent Policy.

His unreserved approval, with the stipulation that Federal, State and municipal issues be treated alike, is expected to lend new impetus to the movement for opening this gigantic reservoir of capital to income taxation. Such a measure was approved, 223 to 101, by the House in 1923, but was defeated in the Senate.

Only by Constitutional amendment can tax-exempt securities be opened to Federal and State taxation, a long list of Supreme Court decisions have generally established, although some dissent from this view. Joint resolutions for such an amendment are before the Judiciary Committees of both Houses.

"The Treasury Department favors as a permanent policy elimination of the exemption from Federal income taxes now accorded to the interest on Federal, State and municipal securities, insofar as future issues of such securities are

Mrs. Pinchot Hits Johnson "Wisecracks"

Defies Him to Name Towns in Pennsylvania Where NRA Not Violated.

Philadelphia, March 8 (AP).—Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of Pennsylvania's Governor, tonight challenged Gen. Hugh S. Johnson to name "more than one town in Pennsylvania, with more than a dozen factories, where the NRA is not being violated 50 per cent or worse."

Answering the administrator's recent criticism of her in which Johnson asked who is Governor of Pennsylvania, Mrs. Pinchot said: "Allow me to point out that he is the man you said publicly was the first Governor in the United States to throw his whole-hearted support behind the National Recovery program."

Addressing a meeting of employes of the Budd Manufacturing Co., Mrs. Pinchot read a letter she said she had written to Johnson. In it she wrote that she "would appreciate an answer and not a wisecrack," to her challenge.

Asserting "big business has been allowed to strengthen its grip on the country" under the present NRA policy, Mrs. Pinchot's letter stated in part:

"I came to your forum last week in good faith, believing you were sincere in asking for suggestions for improving the NRA.

Recommended Change.

"I recommended a definite change of policy, saying that your present plan of allowing the steel trust, the automobile magnates and big business generally to flout the Government was un-American, utterly wrong and must inevitably lead to failure for the NRA.

"Your assistants, knowing the truth of what I said, stopped me several times to voice emphatic approval.

"That there are still many sweatshops can not be denied. That thousands and thousands of workers are still paid a fraction of the legal minimum can not be denied. That great numbers of workers have been dismissed for union activities can not be denied. That neither labor nor consumer is being adequately protected can not be denied. That small businesses are in many cases being forced to the wall while big business has been allowed to strengthen its grip on the country can not be denied.

Banker Flays RFC "Threat"

"Blacklist" for Refusal to Follow "Professors' Ideas" Charged.

Chicago, March 8 (AP).—Commenting on a report that a "black list" was being prepared of banks unwilling to make loans on responsible securities for the aid of industry and business, J. M. Nichols, president of the First National Bank of Englewood, who has kept his institution almost liquid, said in a letter yesterday to Jesse H. Jones, head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation:

"If so protecting the deposits of some 16,000 person, has become a felony, then we are eligible for the black list and proposed boycott. Turn on the heat, if you will, but not a dollar of our customers' money is going toward the support of busted industry and idiotic professor-born ideas. My first duty is to my depositors and not to you or the Democratic party.

"When I believe that our merchants can safely and profitably borrow money, with a reasonable assurance of paying it back, I shall tell them so. In the meantime we sit tight. It is not my money; neither is it yours. It is the depositors'. If they are not satisfied with the way we conduct a bank, they may withdraw it, put it in their sock or bury it where they will. Then possibly some of you political crooners can induce them to make these loans to industry themselves. I refuse to take this responsibility, as I do not believe this a safe time either to borrow or loan."

Chicago, March 8 (AP).—Somebody made off with $1,000 worth of rare liquors today from the National Wine and Liquor Show, despite the presence of 100 guards and detectives.

Cummings Denounces Jailers For Picture With Dillinger

(Associated Press.)

Attorney General Cummings sharply criticized Lake County, Ind., officials yesterday for the escape of John Dillinger, and the director of prisons ruled that no longer would Federal prisoners be confined there.

The action of Sheriff Lillian Holley and Prosecutor Robert G. Estill in posing for a picture with the desperado was characterized by Attorney General Cummings as "one of the most disgraceful episodes I know anything about."

In Crown Point, Mrs. Holley denied she had posed with the man who walked out of her jail after whittling a pistol from a block of wood.

"Naturally, considering my job, I was among those present when Dillinger was brought to Crown Point," she said. "Photographs were taken of a group of people, of whom I was one."

A little later Judge William J. Murray of Criminal Court at Crown Point arranged to call a new grand jury and appoint a special prosecutor to investigate the escape.

"This Dillinger case is beginning to smell," he said.

Cummings showed reporters a photograph, which, he said, was posed for by Sheriff Holley, Dillinger and others.

"This shows," he asserted, "a

Tariff Problem "Too Delicate" For Congress

Republicans at Hearing Bristle When Wallace Urges Treaty Bill.

By Robert C. Albright.

New Deal economic theories yesterday clashed with traditional Republican protective doctrines, as three stalwarts of the Administration—Secretaries Hull, Wallace and Roper—appealed to the House Ways and Means Committee for reciprocal tariff bargaining powers asked by the President.

In steady procession, Secretary Hull explained the President's policy of "gradual moderation" of tariff impediments by bargaining agreements, while Secretaries Wallace and Roper viewed foreign trade resumption through tariff concessions as the one hope of National recovery.

Repeatedly partisan differences welled to the surface as Republican members took issue with witnesses' statements, or committeemen wrangled among themselves over the merits of high versus low tariff policies.

Doughton Offers Change.

Earlier, an amendment was offered by Chairman Robert L. Doughton, which would have the effect of continuing flexible provisions of the present law on all items not covered by reciprocal trading agreements with foreign powers.

Confidently assertive that it "would be practically impossible" for Congress to handle the "delicate" matter to trading agreements, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, most colorful of the Administration trio, sooon was embroiled in debate with minority members.

"That's a pretty broad statement," observed Representative Isaac Bacharach (Republican), New Jersey. "We have been doing it successfully for years."

Situation "Different."

"But the situation today is materially different than it was in those lovely days before 1914," Wallace came back.

When the Agricultural Secretary outlined his theory of reducing the agriculture surplusage through export channels, by increasing imports of "efficiently produced" foreign foreign products, Representative Allen T. Treadway, Massachusetts Republican, declared the theory "too dense to get what you mean."

Treadway declared the plan would hit New England's smaller industries.

"Not if they are efficient industries," Wallace replied.

Sugar Held Inefficient.

When Representative Harold Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, complained of efforts to limit expansion of the sugar beet industry, Wallace said he considered that industry "inefficient from the standpoint of world competition."

"Its expansion would rob the wheat farmer of a market for flour and the hog farmer of a market for lard in Cuba," he said.

"It is important for Congress to realize that high tariffs cause unemployment just as surely as low tariffs; it is just a question of where the unemployment would be," the Cabinet officer insisted.

"With high tariffs, unemployment would be in the efficient industries that produce a surplus for export. With low tariffs, unemployment would be in the inefficient industries that do not produce a surplus."

He said the purpose of the Administration was to consider "human rights and not do anything barbarous" in handling this matter.

"The essense of the New Deal is to take account of human considerations," he said.

Boxcar Bride

Freight Train Raid Halts a Honeymoon.

Baltimore, March 8 (AP).—When a Pennsylvania Railroad officer raided a boxcar here last night, he discovered he was interrupting a honeymoon.

The honeymooners were Sam Groce, 21, and his 18-year-old bride. They had come this far via freight cars from Marion, Va., on their way to New York.

They told police that Groce had quit a CCC camp to be married February 9 and that they lived for a time with the bride's parents at Marion before deciding to go to New York, where the bridegroom's family lives. Police turned an investigation of the case over to a transient bureau.

Mr. S. Bernadotte, Once Prince, Weds Actress, Hies to Berlin

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

London, March 8.—Prince Sigvard, of Sweden, and his actress bride, like many less famous honeymooners, gave a romantic touch to their wedding tonight by departing secretly for Berlin just a few hours after their marriage.

"After Berlin, I can't tell you anything except that I hope to continue my chosen vocation as a film director," said the prince, who surrendered his royal rights by marrying the blonde Erika Patzek in the Caxton Hall registry here at noon.

"We did not want anyone to know about this," he said. It had been announced the couple would leave for Italy tomorrow.

The wedding ceremony was one of the most exciting civil marriages in London for a long time. It took only a few minutes, and was in strange contrast to the usual weddings of royalty.

Several hundred persons jammed the streets in front of the hall and twice broke through police lines. A municipal election almost disrupted the routine inside the hall, but the wedding was moved upstairs.

Sigvard is the Duke of Uppland and the grandson of the Swedish king. His bride is 22, and the daughter of a Berlin industrialist.

In taking his commoner wife, the 26-year-old prince gave up his claims.

A dispatch from Stockholm said that he would be known henceforth as Mr. Sigvard Bernadotte, and that the Swedish cabinet served formal notice he was deprived of his rights and title by the marriage.

Local Program To Follow CWA Will Be Drafted

Committee Meets Today; Funds for Materials Are Sought.

The District work planning and job assigning committee of the CWA today will plan projects to start when the CWA is discontinued March 31 and is succeeded by the emergency relief division.

A committee to determine wage scales and working hours will be appointed. Instructions from Federal headquarters require a minimum work week of 24 hours and a minimum hourly pay of 30 cents.

The "made work" program will be similar to that in effect before the CWA started. The difference, according to Capt. Howard F. Clark, in charge of both programs, is that "now we know where the money is coming from."

No allowance for materials in the new program will be made by Federal headquarters, and Clark will appeal to the House District Committee to insert an item in the District budget for materials.

'Restless Ones' Run the World, Ford Believes

Motor Magnate Sees More Machines as an End to Unemployment.

(Copyright, 1934, Associated Press.)

Fort Myers, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Henry Ford, 70-year-old automobile manufacturer, who made a fortune by sticking to one idea, and says he is willing to spend his fortune to improve that idea, believes that the world is run by dissatisfied people.

"Presdient Roosevelt is a dissatisfied man," said Ford. "If he was not dissatisfied, he would not attempt Herculean experiments to improve existing conditions. If we had not been dissatisfied with the first automobiles, they would have been discarded and the horse would have taken their places.

"When dissatisfaction leads to improvement in conditions and produces a better order of things, it is a good thing. That is why I am glad to observe that so many people are dissatisfied. Maybe they will do something about it. Maybe they will help the leaders with vision enough to try to build a better world for all people to live in.

"I am glad that people are getting over the machine-age bugaboo. The more we improve machinery, the more skilled men are needed to make and operate the machines. Better machines make better workmen. More skilled workmen receive higher wages and this improves the scale of living.

"Labor not capable of growing in skill with the efficiency of the machines has no place in modern industry. These men should go back to the country and learn to make their living—become independent and self-sustaining. The back-to-the-land movement will take care of unskilled labor. It will also bring more happiness to a skilled laborer who is dissatisfied with city life."

Senators Pass Bill Requiring Apartment Hea

Committee Gives Approval Despite Opposition by D. C. Commissioners.

Landlords must provide heat for apartment house tenants under provisions of a bill approved by the Senate District Committee yesterday.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, author of the bill, demanded it be favorably reported, despite opposition by the District Commissioners, expressed in a letter to Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, committee chairman, from Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Senator Copeland was sponsor of the first law of this kind, put into effect in New York City at the time he was health commissioner. The law has withstood court attacks and is effective there, he said in answer to suggestions that the measure was not Constitutional.

Property of the Daughters of 1812 is exempted from taxation under provisions of another bill ordered favorably reported by the committee. This mesaure has been repeatedly introduced and has been consistently opposed by the District Commissioners.

Kentucky Editor's Penalty Is Studied

House Committee Formed to Probe Contempt.

Frankfort, Ky., March 8 (AP).—Inquiry to determine whether any further steps to punish Vance Armentrout, newspaper editor, was ordered by the Kentucky House of Representatives today, following his brief stay in jail yesterday.

Armentrout went to jail for refusing to tell who wrote an article in the "Point of View" column of the Louisville Courier-Journal, but he stayed there only long enough to pay a 50-cent fine to the jail's "kangaroo court" before County Judge L. Boone Hamilton freed him on a writ of habeas corpus.

Today, on motion of the House investigating committee, a special committee of five was appointed to decide whether the editor was in contempt, and, if so, what steps should be taken.

Waiters (Really!) Want to End Tips, But Fear Public Habit

Straight Wage Is Favored in N. Y.; Patrons Must Be "Educated."

New York, March 8 (AP).—Hotel and night club operators are considering a plan to abolish tipping—and the waiters say they favor it.

One supper club has tried the plan for several days and announced tonight that both waiters and diners were pleased.

Now the only difficulty is to educate the public.

"It's going to be a tough job," said H. A. Lazner, the manager, "for American diners-out are so accustomed to tipping that they may keep on. But they'll get used to it—and it will be better all around when they do."

Union officials were enthusiastic over the plan, which involves raising waiters' wages and taking the difference out of the menu.

"All we want is from $35 to $40 a week straight pay and let the diner keep the tip. It's a degrading business, anyhow," said one union official.

Men-about-town in the habit of tipping the head waiters to get a ringside seat would have to take their chance with the rest under the plan, for head waiters would be included, and it would be first come first served at the tables.

Before the NRA began probing into restaurants, waiters depended almost entirely on tips for income. At some night clubs waiters in the pre-repeal era paid for the privilege of working.

Alart to Direct New Orchestra Of D. C. Center

Amateur Group Organized at Meeting Held at Franklin School.

The Community Center Department of the District of Columbia has its orchestra! The last remaining hiatus in the center's activities was closed yesterday when the organization committee for the Community Center Orchestra met in Franklin School and laid plans for the development of an adult amateur group, to furnish not only concerts of its own, but to provide musical danee and theatrical accompaniments to all center productions.

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center, the committee heard the optimistic report of Bailey F. Alart, director of the orchestra.

As the result of auditions during the last few weeks, Mr. Alart, who is well known in theatrical and musical circles here and in New York, stated that more than 30 musicians appeared last Tuesday for the first rehearsal. In about two months Mr. Alart hopes to have his players in trim for their first presentation, as yet not definitely worked out.

Rehearsals Every Tuesday.

Rehearsals are being held every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at Central High School auditorium. Mr. Alart is enthusiastic over the way his charges are tackling this latest civic project, but he is desirous of building a better and greater musical group. For this purpose additional violinists, cellists and French horn players are especially desired.

The orchestra, it was definitely pointed out, is not a beginners' organization, rather it is one for those who have progressed well beyond the tyro stage. All those who can play an instrument, and over 18 years old, are invited to become members. Unemployed members of the Musicians Union may participate in this orchestra, since, it was explained, union officials permit the playing in nonprofit, and especially civic-sponsored orchestras.

Fills Long-Felt Want.

With the formation of the orchestra the long-felt want for orchestral accompaniment in the summer music festivals, presented in the National Sylvan Theater, as well as in other Community Center activities, is eliminated, and Washington can look forward to a more enjoyable program of civic activities.

The committee, under whose guidance the orchestra is being developed, is, in part, composed of Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, chairman; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Gertrude McRae Nash, Mrs. Carey H. Brown, Mrs. H. G. Doyle, Mrs. C. Marshall Finnan, Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, Miss M. Edith Coulson, Mrs. Edith H. Hunter, Miss Bess Davis Schreiner, Mrs. Henry I. Quinn, Mr. Isaac Gans, Mr. E. J. Murphy and Dr. Edwin N. C. Barnes.

San Antonio, Tex., March 8 (AP).—George F. Sengle, of Kosair Temple, Louisville, Ky., was chosen president of the Shrine Directors Association at the annual convention here today.

St. Louis was chosen for the 1935 convention, which will be held March 6-8. Sengle succeeds Robert E. Osborn, of Hastings, Nebr.

Morgenthau Asks Taxes on All Bonds

Holds 3 Classes Must Be Taxed.

"I consider it very important," he added, 'that when the exemption is eliminated it should be eliminated not only in respect to future issues of Federal securities, but in respect to future issues of State and Municipal securities as well.

"The enactment of legislation requiring Federal obligations to be issued in the future on a fully taxable basis, in competition with wholly tax-exempt securities originating elsewhere, would be likely to react unfavorably on the market for Federal securities, to increase the cost of the Government's borrowing, and to complicate our financing operations.

"I am advised," concluded the secretary, "that a Constitutional amendment would be required to enable the Federal Government to tax th interest on Stat and municipal securities."

Favors Amendment.

In my judgment, such an amendment should be drawn on a reciprocal basis; the States should be permitted to tax the income from Federal securities, and the Federal Government to tax the income from State and municipal securities. I favor such an amendment."

No figures were available on the relative proportions of revenue which thus would be opened up to the States and the Federal Government. It was this point that aroused much of the opposition a decade ago, with chiefly Democratic members fearful the Federal Government would obtain more than their States, which in many cases lean to property taxation.

In this regard Roswell Magill, Treasury tax adviser, told the committee Federal securities now total in the neighborhood of $25,000,000,000, while issues of States and other local governments are estimated only at about $17,750,000,000. Of the Federal securities, $11,500,000,000 were wholly tax exempt at the close of last year, while $13,500,000,000 were subject to surtax.

While both Morgenthau and Magill inclined to the view that mutual taxation of Federal and State securities would not impede the Treasury's financing—in fact, would make it easier—the Cabinet officer estimated the Treasury would increase its revenue approximately $145,000,000 annually if such an amendment were ratified.

New Issue Causes Surprise.

Basis for this view is contained in reports before the House Ways and Means Committee, showing that small-income taxpayers—not affected by the surtax on Federal securities—have shown preference for United States securities, while the shift toward wholly tax-free issues of States and municipalities has been marked in the higher income groups.

Meanwhile, the Treasury will abandon its practice of closing its books on the first day of an offering, it was learned, since some objection has come from the Pacific Coast that this sectoin has not had adequate opportunity to subscribe.

The public reception of all of the recovery refinancing, by which $10,000,000,000 is to be sought by June 30, has delighted Treasury officials.

The latets offer of $460,099,000 in four-year 3 per cent notes—in exchange for an equal issue falling due March 15—was received with some surprise yesterday, since expectations were the Treasury would avail itself of the chance to increase its borrowing. However, with a cash balance of $4,874,000,000, there was no immediate need for more cash.

Adams Resigns Party Position; Third in Row

More Democrats in U. S. Jobs Expected to Join "Parade."

The third resignation from the Democratic National Committee in three days was acepted yesterday by Postmaster General Farley, Democratic National chairman.

He announced he had accepted the resignation of Jed C. Adams, National committeeman from Texas and a member of the Board of Tax Appeals. Adams submitted his resignation by telegraph May 10, 1933, when Farley declined to accept it.

The parade of Government officials and employes departing from their places on the National committee is expected to continue, as word was passed around that President Roosevelt expects every committee member on the Government pay roll to resign from the committee.

Conspicuous in his absence from the parade was Farley himself. He has expressed his intention to resign, but has not indicated whether the present situation will hasten his action. He left for New York yesterday, not to return until next week. He is expected then to announce that he has accepted other resignations.

Follows Mrs. Ross.

Adams' resignation followed that of Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, and Arthur R. Mullen, of Nebraska, who is not on the Government pay roll, but who is practicing law in Washington.

The telegram sent by Adams last May said:

"I am tendering my resignation as a member of the National Democratic executive committee from Texas, effective immediately. I do this with much regret, but believing that it would not be appropriate for me to hold a political position along with one somewhat judicial in its nature, I am impelled to take this action. Please express to the individual members of the committee my appreciation for the many acts of kindness and many courtesies extended to me during my service with them."

Farley Thanks Him.

Farley replied yesterday:

"I hereby formally accept your resignation of May 10, 1933.

"As I told you when you first tendered your resignation, I as chairman of the National committee and all the members of the committee desire to express to you our thanks for the splendid cooperation which you have given us during your 10 years as National committeeman from the State of Texas. You have rendered great service to the party and I count it as one of the pleasures of my chairmanship to be so closely associated with you."

Adams is the seventh National committeeman or committee official to quit. Besides Mullen and Mrs. Ross they are Robert Jackson, who resigned as secretary; Frank C. Walker, who resigned as treasurer; Bruce Kremer, of Montana, and Max Gardner, of North Carolina, who resigned as members

Others in Jobs Here.

Besides Farley, committee members who have Government jobs in Washington include, W. W. Howes, of South Dakota, first Assistant Postmaster General, and W. A. Julian, of Ohio, Treasurer of the United States. At least nine other men and women holding committee memberships have Government jobs in various parts of the country.

Another Government official, J. J. Thomas, member of the Federal Reserve Board, has announced his intention to resign as Democratic State chairman in Nebraska. The Nebraska Democratic committee will meet March 17 to name successors to Mullen and Thomas.

Greed, Not Science, Caused World Ills, Marconi Declares

Rome, March 8 (AP).—In defense of science and "its offspring, the machine," Guglielmo Marconi struck out tonight at "human selfishness" as one of the basic causes of the world crisis.

"The affirmation that science and the machine are responsible for the world crisis and unemployment must be definitely rejected," the inventor asserted in an address before Italy's most distinguished scientists.

"They have made it possible for man, with enormously reduced effort, still to have everything he needs for a life of comfort.

"It is not the machine or science that have provoked the ills from which we suffer.

"We have been cheated of the advantages they have brought by a defective distribution of the wealth and resources Providence has given us in abundance, and above all, by human selfishness."

In the audience was Premier Mussolini, who showed his approval with emphatic nods.

Doctors Consider Insull Condition

Heart Tested on Order of Greek Government.

Athens, March 8 (AP).—The determination from a medical standpoint of whether Samuel Insull should go or stay was considered by two physicians tonight.

Dr. Vladimir Bensis and Dr. George Livierator, on government instructions, devoted 23 minutes to listening to Insull's heart, tapping his chest and questioning him, and then retired to compare their findings.

Their report, it was said, will be submitted to the interior minister tomorrow. Rumors were circulated, meanwhile, that another period of grace may be given.

Insull was refused a Hungarian visa today.

-:- The New Dealers -:-

—The Low Down on the Higher Ups—

Dern Is New Deal's "Dear Old George"

Loss of Vice Presidency Failed to Wipe Off Genial Grin.

But Roosevelt Hopes There Won't Be War Right Away.

Publication of "The New Dealers" in The Washington Post does not necessarily imply editorial indorsement of its views.

By the Unofficial Observer.

IN 1929, the Governors' conference—that annual meeting of Governors which Theodore Roosevelt had instituted while he was in the White House and which had since led an irregular and insignificant career—met in New London, Conn. It was Franklin D. Roosevelt's first year as Governor of New York and he saw the political possibilities of these conferences. He was attracted by the genial wit of Gov. George H. Dern of Utah, and by their common point of view, that pleasant middle-of-the-road liberalism which looked like hot stuff in 1929.

For Dern was more than a machine politician. He had ideas (always rare in politics) and, although he was little known in the East, was one of the few really big men in the Democratic party at its low ebb. Better still, he was one of the few Democrats outside of the Solid South who had not been predigested by a Wall street which had already half absorbed Alfred E. Smith and which numbered John W. Davis, Newton D. Baker, James M. Cox, Owen D. Young, Albert C. Ritchie and most of the other "big Democrats" as captives.

"Dear old George" was easy meat for Roosevelt, who was playing Presidential politics with the Governors' Conference. With Roosevelt's help, Salt Lake City was chosen for the next meeting of the conference, thus enabling Roosevelt to get into the Far West in order to make a speech under friendly auspices. At Salt Lake City, the Dern-Roosevelt friendship was renewed and strengthened and Roosevelt delivered his speech on old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, which sounded pretty radical to conservative ears, but which had the effect of making Roosevelt the spokesman for Western Progressivism.

So Dern found himself reduced to serving as a Western outpost for Roosevelt; and when the time came to round up delegates for Chicago, he subordinated himself to Roosevelt in Utah and other Western States, on a Roosevelt-for-President and Dern-for-Vice-President basis.

Dern Loomed for Place On National Ticket.

It must be recorded that Dern was certainly encouraged to believe that he would be most acceptable as Roosevelt's running mate, and there is no doubt that Roosevelt would have been delighted to have him on the ticket. However, Dern probably thought that he would be preferred to any one else, as did several others, including Cordell Hull. If Roosevelt had been free to chose his Vice President, he might have picked Dern—and then again he mightn't. At any rate, it was a bitter moment for Dern when the Garner deal was put over, and his friends thought he had been double-crossed.

However, Dern was too fond of Roosevelt to sulk, and Louis McHenry Howe probably hinted that he would be rewarded with a Cabinet job, in Howe's inimitable way of suggesting a thing without promising it. In this case there was no deception, as Dern was one of the men F. D. R. wanted in his Cabinet, although he didn't give Dern the portfolio he wanted—the Interior. But when Roosevelt called him on the telephone about a week before inauguration and offered him the War Department, "dear old George" grabbed it, for by that time he had come to the conclusion that he was "out of the picture" after all.

He is no intellectual storm center, but neither is he a mental vacuum. He writes his own speeches, and they are good ones, and he made a far better speech than Roosevelt at the Governors Conference in 1932, although at that time Roosevelt's problem was to say as little as possible.

Dern boldly advocated a more equitable distribution of the National income and the "farm dollar"—a variation of Roosevelt's commodity dollar. As a representative of a silver mining constituency, he has always paid a high tribute to silver. However, Dern is no silver panacea monger and has never claimed that remonetization of the white metal would cure the economic heebie-jeebies. He knows what the New Deal is trying to do and he is for it, and to Roosevelt he is always "dear old George."

Pleased and Thankful For Cabinet Post.

"Dear old George" is both pleased and extremely thankful to have landed his present job. He is pleased because he loves his job and likes going around inspecting Army posts. His thankfulness comes from the narrow squeak he had when the Utah State banking department got into trouble during his last year as Governor. He escaped scandal, but the State banking superintendent had been too easy-going and it looked ugly. Moreover, there was a split in the Utah Democratic party in which Dern's side lost control, while Utah itself developed strong opposition to his Cabinet appointment.

Jim Farley thought this automatically disqualified Dern, but Roosevelt didn't care. He knew that Dern would add no political strength to his Administration, but picked him as a loyal friend who would go along quietly with the New Deal, and support him in the Cabinet. Roosevelt also probably prayed that there would be peace in Dern's time.

So "dear old George" bobbed up in Washington, with his wife and four of his five children, charming and good-humored, giving a good, honest, friendly tone to an Administration which contains more than its fair share of blue-jawed, iron-gutted men of action and ideas. Dern has few ideas and no taste for action, but he is broad-jawed. His jaw is not set in the famed "fighting face" of the political line-plunger, but is usually relaxed in a broad grin. God knows that there is always plenty in Washington to grin at.

If a nonexistent American College of Heralds were to devise a coat of arms for the New Deal, the crest would necessarily include a Phi Beta Kappa key and a five-pointed star. The secret of the Administration's tenacity, ingenuity and boldness depends to a great extent on four men who have nothing whatever to do with the Administration itself, two of whom happen to be Jews and two professors.

Four Act as Promptors For New Deal Show.

It is difficult to define the pervasive role of this quadrumvirate. They are scene designers, dramatic "ghosts," assistant stage managers and prompters for the New Deal show. They move behind the back drop and attend to off-stage business. They are codirectors with President Roosevelt of the production which is being offered under his name. They are the Eminences Grises of the New Deal, they are the charter members of Roosevelt's privy council, for the prosecution of his policies. Their loyalty, however, is to his political ideals and not to his political fortunes.

The United States has never enjoyed the benefits of the privy council system of government. Every President has his personal advisers and his technical experts, some official and some unofficial, but there has never been a systematic effort to conserve for the benefit of the Chief Executive the accumulated experience and dignity of the elder statesmen.

President Hoover fumbled toward the goal, but the height of his imagination was represented by assembling a small mob of business executives under the chairmanship of Owen D. Young whenever he desired to pass the buck. Under Roosevelt, the system is equally unofficial, but it is a dynamic contribution to the art of American government.

Roosevelt's political Privy Council is actually built around four men who have no actual responsibility for the formulation or execution of the New Deal policies. Hence, they are both disinterested and detached. The four, moreover, are nicely balanced both as to age and temperament and their views are by no means unanimous on any phase of the problems which Roosevelt must settle.

Justice Louis Dembitz Brandeis, of the Supreme Court, at 77, retains that vital spark of social liberalism which is the greatest single Jewish contribution to Western political life. Brandeis, however, is still essentially a "trust buster" of the vintage of 1912 and his solution for our economic and social maladjustments can only be described as based on a pathological horror of size. He would do for the country what his tribunal frequently does for the individual—condemn it to make little ones out of big ones—applying this purely mechanical and uneconomic process to the corporations rather than the rock pile. His link with Roosevelt is his judicial indorsement of the right of the State to engage in bold experimentation.

Berle Wins Dominant Role in Problems.

His psychological antithesis is found in that other privy councilor, Adolf Augustus Berle, jr., former brain trustee and now chamberlain of the city of New York, who at the age of 39 has dominated Roosevelt's handling of the railroad and the banking situation. Berle is a lawyer and Columbia University lecturer who happens to be an authority on the modern corporation. He has no horror of size per se and is willing to concede that the big corporation may eventually displace the political government as the focus of social as well as economic initiative. Accordingly, his concern is to formulate corporation policy along politically and socially sound lines, rather than to destroy it. Young, cocky and with an extremely level head, he is a counterpoise to Justice Brandeis' rather doctrinaire insistence that the small business man should be preferred to the big corporation as a matter of public policy.

A balance between Brandeis and Berle is possibly best represented in the person of Prof. Felix Frankfurter, that brilliant Austrian-born Jew who directs the Harvard Law School and who dominates the infant industry of legal liberalism. Frankfurter's specialty is supplying the Administration with young liberal lawyers, sufficiently ingenious to justify the New Deal to the courts and sufficiently radical to sympathize heartily with its purposes. He could have had any one of a dozen offices within Roosevelt's power of appointment but he prefers teaching—and perhaps sideline coaching—and is content to wait his turn for a New Deal appointment to the Supreme Court.

If Frankfurter provides the temperamental balance between Berle and Brandeis, Prof. Raymond Moley, Roosevelt's former Assistant Secretary of State and No. 1 brain trustee, provides the balance in policy. Moley comes from Ohio, is not a theorist or a lawyer, and has both an intuitive knowledge of Roosevelt's mind and a vigorous sense of nationalism, which offsets both the cosmic but diluted concepts of abstract social justice entertained by Brandeis and Frankfurter and the economic and legal preoccupations of Berle. Despite the success of the conservative claque in toppling him from office, Moley retains Roosevelt's confidence and is consulted by the President on major politico-economic moves by the Administration.

His Franco-Irish descent and his career in practical criminology give him an insight into the glandular background of politics, where his colleagues on the Privy Council concentrate on the cerebellum. The four of them make a good team and they are playing an unsuspected but tremendously important part in the formulation and application of the New Deal.

Brandeis One of Real Elder Statesmen.

If the country were ruled by an aristocracy of brains, he would be one of the members of the small central board of control. If we lived under a system of constitutional monarchy, he would be one of the King's honored Privy Councillors. As we live in a political democracy, which distrusts both brains and monarchical institutions, all that we can do with Brandeis is to give him a seat on the United States Supreme Court. It is a tribute to his power that, despite his handicap of race, position, and acute intelligence, he has given force and direction to American liberal politics for the last 30 years.

More than Woodrow Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt, William Jennings Bryan, George W. Norris, the elder Robert M. LaFollette or any other figure in American politics prior to the emergence of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Brandeis was the prophet of the Forgotten Man and the John the Baptist of the New Deal. His voice has been crying in the wilderness of Big Business for a generation and when Woodrow Wilson, who started out to smash the Money Trust, lost his bearings on the broad and flowery path of British war propaganda, Brandeis kept his eye on the ball and continued the fight for social justice. For Brandeis remembered, what Wilson forgot, that justice, charity and reform must begin at home and cannot be achieved by the mere establishment of international agencies at Geneva or anywhere else.

Four in Bank Plot Are Sent to Prison

Carolinians Had Conspired to Float Bond Sale.

Hendersonville, N. C., March 8 (AP).—Judge T. B. Finley today declined to hear further discussion of the case of four Transylvania County men sentenced for bank law violations, and instructed Sheriff Tom Wood to proceed with them to State's prison.

They are Thomas, H. Shipman, C. R. McNeely and Ralph Fisher, former county officials, and Joseph Pickelsimer, former president of the now defunct Brevard Banking Co.

They face sentences of from two to three years each for conspiring to issue $100,000 in county bonds and use the proceeds to bolster the faltering bank.

Court Probes NRA Prices.

Salt Lake City, March 8 (AP).—District Judge James H. Wolfe today refused to enjoin a beauty shop proprietor from charging less than NRA code prices until he had satisfied himself those prices are reasonable.

Sheriff Asks Troops to Halt Miners' March

Alabama Governor Replies by Sending Five Men to Investigate.

(Associated Press.)

A request for National Guardsmen to prevent bloodshed in Walker County (Ala.) coal fields warned of violence yesterday in growing labor troubles over the Nation.

Sheriff A. N. Barrentine appealed for troops after reports that hundreds of armed miners were marching on mines where strikes are in progress affecting 8,000 men.

Gov. B. M. Miller ordered five guardsmen to investigate.

The situation eased somewhat when officials of the United Mine Workers announced the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. had agreed to the check-off system of collecting union dues, one of the chief issues.

Meanwhile, steps were taken toward averting a proposed walkout of automobile workers in St. Louis, Cleveland, Detroit and Flint, Mich.

While a union representing 4,500 Fisher Body Co. workers at Cleveland proceeded with a strike vote, it was agreed to postpone a walkout until the National Labor Board holds conferences in Washington Wednesday.

The dispute in St. Louis between Chevrolet Motor and Fisher Body plants and employes over union recognition was passed to the National Labor Board by the St. Louis regional board, which asserted the firms dismissed union employes and did not rehire men laid off because of union activity.

William Green asked automobile workers in St. Louis and Cleveland to send representatives to the National Labor Board hearing next week.

Eight Persons Hurt In Spanish Affray

Madrid, March 8 (AP).—Except for a clash between extremist Socialists and Fascists at Bilboa, Spain, placed under a "state of alarm" yesterday, was tranquil on the surface today.

Eight persons were injured in a battle of sticks and stones at Bilboa when young vendors of a Fascist newspaper were attacked. Assault guards suppressed the disorder.

Sound Your A and Character Is Laid Bare by 'Voiceprints'

New York, March 8 (AP).—A method of fingerprinting voices to show the roles a singer is best fitted for was demonstrated to the National Opera Club today by Dr. William Braid White, of Chicago.

These vocal fingerprints, it appears, like police files, identify character tendencies. There are some voices most fitting for villainous roles; others, for uplift parts.

The National Opera Club is directed by Baroness Katherine von Klenner. One of its objectives is "dollar opera" for the United States.

The "lines" of the voice prints are waves of light drawn on a screen by translating the vibrations of a singing voice first into electricity, then into a beam of light.

They show, Dr. White said, that every vowel sound has one certain musical note which is more or less independent of the quality of voice singing the sound.

"So," said Dr. White, "each type of voice, bass, barytone, alto, tenor, soprano, when it is intoning or singing the same vowel sound, will bring out this characteristic note. This is so no matter to what note the sound is sung.

"Thus, a sound like OO in "boom," can be nicely sung by a bass, barytone or even a tenor. A soprano does not sing so well a word containing OO because the characteristic of that sound is too low for her voice. But the soprano sings well the vowel sound of EE in "street" because the characteristic note is very high."

W. C. T. U. Challenged On 3.2 Beer Potency

Atlanta, March 8 (AP).—Mayor James L. Key, of Atlanta, has asked members of the W. C. T. U. for proof that 3.2 beer has caused intoxication "in a single case."

The mayor's comment was in reply to resolutions by the W .C. T. U. charging that the attitude of the mayor and city council "in permitting the sale of beer tends to create a feeling of disrespect for the law."

Virginia Works To Avert Loss Of U. S. Relief

Several Plans Studied to Raise 2 Million Set as State's Share.

Richmond, March 8 (AP).—State fiscal authorities and the treasury guardians of the General Assembly are studying several plans for safeguarding Virginia's share of Federal relief funds against FERA claims that the Old Dominion has not carried a fair share of the relief load of the State.

The Federal Government has said to Virginia, through conversations between FERA Regional Director Allan Johnstone and Gov. Peery, that the State must raise $2,000,000 if it is to expect $4,000,000 from the Federal Government.

In Washington, however, Senator Byrd said he had learned that Mr. Johnstone was not authorized to say that Federal relief would be denied the State unless the fund was raised.

The latest proposal for raising the fund was a refinancing maneuver of $2,000,000 in Robertson act road bonds. Another plan advanced yesterday would delay for a year the new law carrying out Gov. Peery's pledge to reduce passenger automobile licenses. Still another was to impose a temporary tax on automobiles. Another was a temporary increase in gasoline taxes.

The situation became acute after the passage of the bill reducing the automobile license tax nearly 50 per cent. State Highway Commissioner Shirley said the result of the law would be to throw out of work 10,000 men between June 1 and September 1 of this year. For more than two years the department of highways has been used as the principal work relief agency of the State.

Gov. Peery declined again to comment on the situation.

The relief question has started talk of an extra session of the General Assembly, and prompted suggestions that the present session may be held past its quitting time Saturday.

Others, however, said there is time to amend the budget bill under consideration by the Senate finance committee.

Drug Store Rum Bill Sent Kump

Speculation Is Rife on Veto Stand.

Charleston, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—With numerous West Virginians wondering whether Gov. S. G. Kump will veto or approve the much discussed drug store bill passed a week ago, it became known today that the measure now has been officially transmitted to him as the result of a parliamentary move.

The measure permits purchase of liquors at drug stores upon a mere certificate and reduces the State tax from 50 to 20 cents a pint. At present, liquors may be purchased at drug stores only on a physician's certificate.

Partridges' Loss Less Than Feared

Game Official Minimizes Effects of Snow.

Richmond, March 8 (AP).—C. O. Handley, State superintendent of game propagation, today said that partridges had not suffered so great a loss in numbers in the severe cold and snow as at first feared.

Although the situation is far from satisfactory, with vegetation sleet-covered and low temperatures prevaling for a considerable period of time, thaws caused the vegetation to drop much of its ice, exposing berries and weed seeds.

Song and insectivorous birds have not fared so well as the partridges, Handley said, many of these having frozen to death.

Central Bank Sues On $91,382 Notes

Frederick, Md., March 8 (Spl.). Suit on seven notes, aggregating $91,382.63 brought by John J. Ghingher, receiver for the closed Central Trust Co. against W. Harry Haller, Monica F. Haller and Thomas H. Haller, has been filed in the Circuit Court.

Credits aggregating $10,848.25 include a balance of 53 cents in the checking account of W. Harry Haller in the defunct bank.

Judge Willard issued a writ of subpena to the defendants returnable April 2. Recently the court issued an order requiring 58 stockholders of the Central Trust Co. to pay $205,000 liability assessment on stock they held when the bank and its 11 branches closed.

Social at Round Hill Planned by 4-H Clubs

Round Hill, Va., March 8 (Spl.). The 4-H Club will meet in the parish hall Saturday at 2:30 p. m., with the local leader, Miss Carrie Reynolds, and County Agent Miss Matilde Garner in charge of the demonstration.

A committee from the Woman's Club will meet the 4-H committee to plan a community social March 17 in the school, sponsored by the clubs.

Rockbridge Home Work Outlined by New Agent

Lexington, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Miss Elizabeth S. Carmichael, who recently took office as home demonstration agent for Rockbridge County, has formulated a definite plan of work.

Clothing, garden and canning club work is planned for introduction in schools showing interest in such subjects. The making of American cheese will be demonstrated during the next few weeks.

Conducting Revival

THE REV. JOHN R. WILLIAMS, evangelist, of Atlanta, Ga., is conducting revival services at the Charles Town (W. Va.) Presbyterian Church. He will complete the two-week services Sunday afternoon.

Berkeley Staff Of CWA Facing 135 Loss Today

665 Maximum Provided for County Under New Plan.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—An additional 135 workers will be cut from CWA pay rolls in Berkeley County, effective with the start of the new work week tomorrow. The roster will be cut to 665 maximum.

Administrator H. C. Brooks, Disbursing Officer Charles O'Connor and several others of the CWA here will be in Charleston Monday for a State conference on demobilization.

Six CWA projects in Martinsburg have either been finished or discontinued because of reduced forces.

Bellington Race Close.

Bellington, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.). PWA money allotted for construction of a municipal filtration plant will be used as the result of the city election just held here, provided a test case in the Supreme Court allows municipalities to use such funds for such a purpose.

Reelection of Mayor Howard Price over Lee L. Bennett, along with two councilmen favoring the project, decided the issue. Price, three times mayor, won by only 27 votes. Bennett also has served thrice as mayor. W. B. Baker, George W. Myers, C. W. Koontz and Thamer Griffith were elected councilmen.

Most Homes Two-Story.

Westminster, Md., March 8 (Spl.). Interesting facts and valuable data are contained in the reports filed by the enumerators who have been conducting a survey of the Carroll County rural housing situation as a CWA project.

Of the 897 homes surveyed in Westminster, Taneytown and Middleburg districts, 889 are more than one-story high and contain more than ten rooms.

Of these homes in the three districts, 604 are more than 50 years old. Brick construction predominated in 228 of the 897 homes enumerated. In 370 of the homes are kitchen sinks with drains; 335 have electric power or home plants; 209 have furnace heat; 319 have ice or mechanical refrigeration. Of the total, 863 use wood or coal stoves for cooking and 645 have laundry equipment.

In Carroll, 3,990 farm homes in the 14 election districts were surveyed by 11 enumerators. Tabulations have been completed for Mount Airy, Berrett, Franklin, Freedom, Union Bridge, Middleburg, Taneytown, Myers and Westminster districts.

B. L. Smith Appointed Homestead Architect

Arthurdale, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Federal authorities announce the transfer of Benjamin Lane Smith from the architectural staff of the Arthurdale subsistence homestead near Reedsville to Elkins, as chief architect of the new Tygarts Valley homestead.

Plans and specifications for the project will be prepared at once.

Slayer Gets 20 Years.

Danville, Va., March 8 (Spl.). Albert Smith, colored, has been sentenced in Charlotte County Circuit Court to 20 years in the penitentiary for the killing of Fred Moseley last January. Smith denied any knowledge of the crime.

Imagine!

Town Rejects Federal Aid, Loan Too Big.

Salem, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.). Most persons are not turning down easy money these days, but that is just what Salem has done.

Mayor Lynn B. Ferrell announced the city council definitely refused a loan and grant of $75,000 from the Federal Government for a municipal sewage disposal plant because the sum was twice as much as was necessary.

According to original estimates, $35,000 was needed and application was made for that amount. Later the plan was enlarged to include an equal sum for a city hall, but this was ruled out under a court decision. The loan finally was allowed at $75,000 for the sewage plant alone.

Citizens vigorously opposed spending so much money for the plant and city authorities finally heeded the protest.

The city is out $300, anyway, the cost of a survey.

Public Queries On Luxury Tax Slow Assessor

West Virginia Alteration in Law Involves Explanation.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Assessors are being delayed in their work by the necessity of stopping to explain to taxpayers why certain household goods previously in the $200 exempted list now are listed separately, and also to explain the complicated tax rate structure under the tax limitation amendment now being applied in the State for the first year, according to Robert W. Peery, an assessor.

People generally, he says, are assuming that all household goods are exempt unless the total worth exceeds $200. But luxuries in the "household goods" list are excluded from exemption. A special line has been inserted in the assessment blank for listing "musical instruments, gold and silverware, jewelry and timepieces." All these are classed as luxuries, and tax must be paid upon them, although the total value of all other household goods may be only $50 and the household goods exemption is $200. The law and the assessors hold that radios also are musical instruments. "Gold and silver" includes silver tableware.

Rates Not Yet Fixed.

Those things, furthermore, take the highest tax rate. In Martinsburg district, the rate will be around $2.40 per $100 assessed valuation; and a little less, but still over $2, in the county districts, Peery says. The rates have not been definitely fixed yet.

The tax classification amendment set a maximum taxation rate of $2 per $100 on this class of chattels or personal property, but this has been exceeded under rulings of the State Supreme Court. This class is not to be confused with "intangibles" such as money, stocks and bonds, Mr. Peary warns.

The "intangibles" were slated for a 50 cent rate of taxation; but the recent modifications of the tax amendment have allowed this to be raised to between 60 and 70 cents per $100 value, the exact figure yet to be announced.

"Head Tax" Exemption.

The $200 exemption on household goods last year allowed more than $500,000 worth of property to go untaxed in Berkeley County that previously had been taxed, Peery says. A part of this is coming back under the luxury clause and the intangibles class.

A peculiar, little-noticed custom has grown up in assessing that is without the backing of any known law, but that seems to have been observed all over the State for many years back, Peery notes. This is the custom of not assessing the men with only one leg, or one eye, or one arm, or otherwise seriously crippled.

District Change Protest Voiced

Morrison Raps Transfer of Rappahannock.

Richmond, March 8 (AP).—Assailing the transfer of Rappahannock County from the Twenty-ninth to the Twenty-fifth Senatorial District, Delegate John W. Morrison (Republican), of Harrisonburg, said the proposed shift "is without justification and should be vetoed."

"I am sure that the citizens of the proposed new district, in the Valley and in Rappahannock County, regardless of political affiliations, will resent this curtailment of their equal right in government," Morrison said last night in a statement.

Mr. Morrison was an unsuccessful candidate in the last Senatorial election in the Twenty-fifth, composed of Rockingham, Page and Warren Counties and the City of Harrisonburg, against Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, of Front Royal, a Democrat.

Loudoun Must Cut Expenses $10,000

Welfare Work Will Lose $2,000 in New Budget.

Leesburg, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—At a meeting here yesterday, the Loudoun County supervisors decided that, with the balance smaller to start with and delinquent tax returns likely to be less, $10,000 must be lopped off the county expenses if the 80-cent tax rate is to be retained.

This would leave $42,000 for general county expenses in the proposed budget which will be submitted at the regular meeting of the board March 19.

The supervisors feel that $80,000 will take care of school expenses if an expected $20,000 from the State is received. Last year $98,000 was listed in the budget for schools. The expenditure for general welfare work will be reduced $2,000 in the proposed budget.

Keep Cars Off Street At Night, Judge Warns

Danville, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Seventy-three motorists were told yesterday by Magistrate Charles K. Carter, "If you do it again, you will be fined."

The offense was that they kept their automobiles out of doors between 1 a. m. and 6 a. m. in violation of a city ordinance.

Masons Will Dedicate Quantico Temple Soon

Quantico, Va., March 8 (Spl.). John A. LeJeune Masonic Lodge here will dedicate its new temple March 19.

William Moseley Brown, grand master of Virginia, will head the State officials at the ceremony, which will draw lodge representations from many nearby cities.

School Burned, Patrons Turn Carpenters to Build Shelter

Albemarle Board Issues Call for Labor While Search for Incendiary Continues; Government Funds Sought to Finance New Permanent Structure.

Charlottesville, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Patrons of the Earlysville High School will be asked to help construct a temporary building to serve for the rest of the school year in place of the one destroyed by an incendiary fire Monday night.

The Albemarle school board at a special meeting yesterday ordered a temproary building, 20 by 200 feet, to be built of cheap lumber. There will be seven classrooms, each 20 by 30 feet. The rooms will be separate units, with doors opening to the outside.

One hundred patrons of the school will be asked to contribute three days of labor each to throw together this emergency building, which Supt. A. L. Bennett said will be needed by the end of next week. The 275 students and 7 teachers will have a vacation while this is being done.

Federal Aid Expected.

The decision not to rebuild the school permanently this spring was made by the trustees after a conference with Raymond Long, of Richmond, architect with the State Education Department.

"We hope later to receive out of Government funds enough to build a fine new consolidated school," Mr. Bennet declared. "Money already has been appropriated to make a survey for this purpose."

The hunt for a man believed to have set the school afire with gasoline late Monday night went on yesterday, but Sheriff Mason Smith and Mr. Bennett said an arrest might not be asked before the end of this week, if at all.

Gasoline Can Clew.

The investigators yesterday found in the ashes of the burned schoolhouse an oil can which they said apparently was used by the arsonist to bring gasoline into the building.

It was located at a spot where was the hallway closet in which the fire was set, and Janitor Les Wood declared that no such can had been there before. The underside of the can is not burned and has some marks by which it may be traced, Mr. Bennett said.

The identification made by Joel Kidd, school principal, of the young man he saw run from the school yard just before the fire was discovered also is relied upon by investigators. They said bloodhounds brought from a State farm at Schuyler after the fire followed a trail to this man's home, but he denied the crime and was backed by relatives in the claim that he was asleep when the blaze started.

Architects Push Drive Surveys

State Engineers Are Active on Inter-Park Road Extension.

Waynesboro, Va., March 8 (Spl.). Landscape architects are making a survey along the proposed Skyline drive frtom Grottoes south to this city.

The work is under supervision of Charles Peters and Roland Rogers. The work is in charge of Lynn Harris, architect, who completed final surveys for the stretch from Panorama to Front Royal and from Elkton to Grottoes.

Preceding the landscape men are three parties of State highway engineers surveying the roadway as marked off last year by Federal engineers. Efforts are being made to complete all preliminary surveys so construction can proceed this spring and summer.

J. H. Harman today stated that progress is being made despite bad weather. He expects the project will be completed within four or five weeks.

Skyline Drive Building To Be Extended Soon

Front Royal, Va., March 8 (Spl.). Construction of 9.76 miles of the Skyline drive in Shenandoah National Park, from Front Royal to Comptons Gap, will begin on April 5, and is expected to be completed about March 21, 1935, according to an announcement today by the Federal Bureau of Public Roads.

The Warren County Reemployment Service office has been asked to provide 170 workmen, including superintendent, foremen, timekeeper, tractor and truck operators, &c.

Three prospective contractors have been going over the project this week preparatory to submitting bids, and others will do so before March 20, when all bids must be in. Twenty-four miles between Comptons Gap and Panorama will constitute two additional projects. From Panorama, in Page County, southward, about 30 miles of the drive was completed in 1932.

Fredericksburg Host To Leaders From West

Fredericksburg, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Three Western civic leaders were guests of the National Park Service here yesterday. George A. Palmer showed them the four major battlefields in this section.

The visitors were Harold P. Fabian, counsel of John D. Rocefeller, jr., Salt Lake City; A. E. Cahlen, an editor of Las Vegas, Nev., and Gus P. Bachman, president of the Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce.

Legislators Order Fire Insurance Rate Probe

Charleston, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Fire insurance rates are too high in West Virginia, in the opinion of the legislators, and they have directed the State insurance commissioner to make a survey of the situation.

A joint resolution directs the commissioner to compare insurance laws and rates of this and other States, with especial attention to the 45-cent charge on premiums for overhead.

Senate Revises Kump Finance Bill Sharply

West Virginia Sales Tax Plan Boosted, Tobacco Levy Applied.

Charleston, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—By a vote of 8 to 9, the Senate finance committee practically rewrote Gov. H. G. Kump's $10,000,000 emergency revenue bill today.

The 2 per cent consumers' sales tax with exemptions for essential foodstuffs was replaced by a 3 per cent tax without exemptions. The 20 per cent tax upon luxuries was made applicable only upon tobacco and the increased rates on utilities and other corporations was made 20 per cent instead of 60 per cent as provided in the House bill.

The close vote in the committee is taken as indication that the battle over the two plans will be shifted to the Senate floor. Adjournment was taken by the Senate until Monday without receiving the committee report on the measure.

Rewriting Is Needed.

It was explained that considerable clerical work would be necessary in rewriting the bill.

By a vote of 72 to 13 the House accepted a conference report adjusting differences between both branches over redistricting the State for Congressional representation. Because the new line-up of counties is incorporated in a Senate bill and must have first action in the House, action on the compromise redistricting bill itself will have to await action by the Senate.

Seven counties are shifted from their present districts by the compromise measure:

Webster, from the third to the second; Pocahontas, from the sixth to the second; Calhoun, from the fourth to the third; Fayette, from the sixth to the third; Wayne, from the fifth to the fourth; Lincoln, from the fifth to the fourth, and Greenbrier, from the sixth to the fifth.

Betting Tax Passed.

Final legislative approval was given by the House to a bill authorizing county, district and State fairs to retain 20 per cent of the receipts of pari-mutuel betting of their race tracks. Other tracks are permitted to retain only 10 per cent.

The House agreed to a Senate amendment creating a fund from fees of jockeys and trainers for the benefit of sick or injured race-track employes. Another amendment approved requires payment of amusement and other taxes by fairs.

Final legislative authority was also given by the House today to a bill extending the discount period for payment for property taxes until April 15. The State Tax Commissioner is given authority in the bill to make a further extension to May 1.

2 Mourners Hurt In Car-Bus Crash

Blinding Snow Causes Maryland Wreck.

Northeast, Md., March 8 (AP).—Two persons, members of a party accompanying the body of Joseph G. Harris from Cambridge, Md., to Baltimore for burial, were injured today when their automobile crashed into a bus near here.

The injured were:

Emmett Palmer, son-in-law of the dead man. He sustained a severe blow on the chest and was unconscious when taken to the Elkton Hospital. The Rev. O. B. Newton, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, Cambridge. He received a broken nose, lacerations of the face and possible internal injuries.

The accident occurred at the top of Bacon Hill in a heavy snowstorm. The cause of the accident could not immediately be ascertained, but the belief was expressed that it was caused by the snow.

Airport at Norfolk Is Leased by Navy

Fleet Planes Will Base During Summer Stay.

Norfolk, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—To provide additional accommodations for fliers with the United States fleet, scheduled to arrive here in June, it was announced today that the Navy had leased the Norfolk Airport for the period of the visit, probably about three months. All of the ships will land their aerial forces at the Norfolk Naval Base. The fliers will pursue a daily routine of flying and the Navy decided the flying field within the naval base was not sufficient.

There will be approximately 500 additional planes at the base during the stay of the fleet, not including the hundreds carried on the Lexington and Saratoga.

Postal Test Deadline March 23.

Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—March 23 is the final date for applications for postmaster here. The salary is $997. Miss Alice Coleman is acting postmistress, having succeeded Mrs. R. N. Waller, who held the post several terms.

Bowden Man Jailed After Two Are Shot

Bowden, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Charged with shooting and wounding a night watchman and a bystander, Fred Arbogast, of Bowden, was today a prisoner in the Randolph County Jail awaiting a hearing.

Arbogast is alleged to have wounded John Colabgere, night watchman at the Sam G. Polino Construction Camp, on Route 5, and John Summerfield, resident of Bowden, Tuesday night. The cause of the shooting is unknown.

Old Graves

Old Slave Burial Ground Found Near Eckhart.

Cumberland, Md., March 8 (Spl.) What is believed to be the oldest slave burying ground in Western Maryland was uncovered yesterday by citizens of Eckhart and Mount Savage interested in obtaining a new highway between these towns.

The burying ground is on the old Trimble farm near the proposed route of the new highway. For generations, it was said, this particular plot has been reserved by the Trimble family. While its existence was not known generally to residents of either town, it has been always a custom, according to older residents, to "plow around" the particular spot.

Two other Negro slave cemeteries are located in this vicinity. One is near Romney, W. Va., and another on the Messick farm near Greeen Spring, W. Va., 14 miles east of here. At the latter place, which has been viewed by hundreds of Cumberlanders and West Virginians, a small cemetery lies nearby, where it is said the pioneers of that section of the South Branch Valley rest. In this cemetery are officers of the early Mexican and Indian wars and of the Revolutionary conflict. The Negro plot lies nearby.

Family Transfers Century-Old Store

Waynesboro Drug Firm Is Taken by Staunton Men.

Waynesboro, Va., March 8 (Spl.). Waynesboro's oldest business house, Fishburne & Son, was purchased today by three Staunton druggists, Gilpin, Willson, sr., Gilpin Willson, jr., and L. C. Carlisle.

This groupe operates two drug stores in Staunton and Mr. Carlisle will move here to manage the local store.

Business had been conducted continuously on the same corner here by members of the Fishburne family for more than 100 years and it was one of the oldest drug concerns in the State. It was established by Daniel Fishburne, grandfather of Pliny Fishburne, who sold it today.

Virginia Highway Building Blocked

Deficit Foreseen in Gas Tax Revenue.

Westchester, Va. ,March 8 (AP).—Henry G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, has informed the chamber of commerce here that there is slight prospect for any work on the construction of primary roads either in 1934 or 1935.

The commissioner forecast a stalled road program when asked by Andrew Bell, chamber of commerce secretary, if bids would be opened for work on Route 50 between Winchester and Washington, via Middleburg.

Mr. Shirley said that he estimated gasoline and automobile license taxes would provide $14,000,000 against which there would be an estimated expenditure of $14,510,000.

PWA Grants Loans for 22 Virginia Works

Rescission of $3,000,000 Danville Allotment Is Announced.

Approval of 22 projects in Virginia and rescission of an allotment of $3,000,000 for Danville, in that State, was announced yesterday by the Public Works Administration.

The Danville allotment had been authorized as a loan and grant for construction of a municipally owned hydroelectric plant. The project was turned down, however, by Danville voters in a recent election, after city officials had made application for the allotment subject to a referendum.

Virginia projects authorized yesterday included Newport News, incinerator, $65,000; Gretna, waterworks, $43,000; Charlottesville, repairs to dam, $85,800; Danville, water system extension, $85,000; Danville, electric service, $18,000; Dillwyn, waterworks, $28,000; Big Stone Gap, dam, $63,000; Petersburg, water and sewer extension, $89,000; Kilmarock, waterworks system, $50,000; Montgomery County, school, $7,000; Salem, water system, $11,000; Christianburg, sewers, $100,000; Warrenton, school, $20,500.

Others were Harrisonburg, jail, $10,600; Burkeville, waterworks, $47,000; Lunenburg County, schools, $16,300; Suffolk, school, $4,100; Quinton, schools, $16,000; Warwick County, $8,900; Orange, school addition, $6,200; Clarkville, school, $13,000, and Rockingham County, school addition and heating system, $34,000.

Thieves Blamed as Fire Sweeps Storage Plant

Frederick, Md., March 8 (Spl.). After a three-hour battle by the entire fire department yesterday, a blaze which threatened a large storage building in the heart of the South Market street business district and adjoining properties was brought under control with a loss of about $4,000.

It is believed that thieves stealing meat, dropped a match which started the blaze. The firemen kept the flames confined to the storage plant.

HOW WOMEN CAN WIN MEN AND MEN WIN
The Favor of Other Men
Unless two pints of bile juice flow daily from your liver into your bowels, your food decays in your bowels. This poisons your whole body. Movements get hard and constipated. You get yellow tongue, pale, yellow skin, pimples, dull eyes, bad breath, bad taste, gas, dissiness, headache. You have become an ugly-looking, foul-smelling, sour-thinking person. You have lost your personal charm. Everybody wants to run from you.
But don't take salts, mineral waters, oils, laxative pills, laxative candies or chewing gums and expect them to get rid of this poison that destroys your personal charm. They can't do it, for they only move out the tail end of your bowels and that doesn't take away enough of the decayed poison. Cosmetics won't help at all. Only a free flow of your bile juices will stop this decay poison in your bowels. The one mild vegetable medicine which starts a free flow of your bile juice is Carter's Little Liver Pills. No calomel (mercury) in Carter's. Only fine, mild vegetable extracts. If you would bring back your personal charm to win men, start taking Carter's Little Liver Pills according to directions today. 25¢ at drug stores.
Refuse "something just as good", for it may gripe, loosen teeth or scald rectum. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for. © 1933, C. M. Co.

Manassas Gets CWA Approval Of City Airport

Work on Project to Start When Weather Clears; Safety Men Meet.

Manassas, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—The town of Manassas has received approval of the CWA project for enlarging the municipal airport.

The work will start as soon as weather permits.

Progress of other CWA projects, such as streets and sewer construction, under way since last fall, has been delayed by curtailment of CWA working time. This will make it impossible to complete a number of projects.

Safety Directors Meet.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Col. William M. Wampler, of Richmond, State CWA safety director, addressed 16 safety directors representing all CWA units of Virginia District 3 here yesterday. J. E. King, district safety director, gave new instructions to the local directors. The meeting was attended also by Ray C. Hopkins, deputy district administrator; W. F. Carter, jr., assistant district administrator, and Mrs. H. W. Pettingill, chief clerk.

First Playground Near.

Hanover Courthouse, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—The Atlee High School in Henry District will soon have its first satisfactory playground facilities, through efforts of Joseph Rotella, principal.

CWA employed are now working to clear and level property acquired by a trade.

Miss Wallace Gets Post.

Stafford Courthouse, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Miss Katherine Wallace, daughter of Mrs. Michael Wallace of Falmouth, has been appointed secretary to Mrs. Katherine Moncure, temporary Federal Emergency Relief director for Stafford County.

Two Projects to Start.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 8 (Spl.). PWA work on two projects—remodeling of the Rockingham County jail and construction of a submerged dam at Harrisonburg's water source in the mountains—are likely to start at once.

Each project represents an expenditure of $35,000. The work has been held up pending Federal action on PWA loans. The Rockingham supervisors and the Harrisonburg city council feel the work should start at once as both projects are badly needed. Both can be financed locally pending CWA approval.

600 Study in Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., March 8 (AP).—Six hundred persons, some of whom never before "cracked a book," are enrolled in classes here under supervision of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Among those is a young woman who said she could have obtained work in a store if she had been able to read the price tags. Several said they were interested in learning to read so they may read the Bible.

While the pupils are studying, the teachers are meeting the situation with emergency measures. J. E. Kittinger, stringed instrument teacher, said he is getting up at 5 a. m. to do his own practicing on the violin before his classes begin.

String, piano and wind music instruction is given by four teachers. There has been no indication that funds will continue for support of the classes.

William Burt, for seven years leader of an Army band, is organizing a community band of 40 pieces. James Byrley, a graduate of the Army School of Music, Washington, D. C., and of the Chicago Conservatory, is giving wind instrument instruction.

Norfolk Juries Flout Dryest Law

Judge Also Lenient With Approach of Repeal.

Norfolk, Va., March 8 (Spl.). While the Layman act, said to be the dryest law ever enacted, continues to be law in Virginia until March 22, juries in the Corporation Court here released eight persons accused of violating the law during the past 24 hours.

After six prisoners were acquitted one after the other, police in the case of William Verden testified they found a pint of whisky in Verden's home, hidden in a baby carriage. Verden said he did not know how the whisky got in the carriage. Judge Goode directed the jury to give the man his freedom.

Andrew Perkins, a Negro, was the only person convicted out of about 20. He had a quart in his possession and was given a month in jail and fined $50. The jail sentence will probably be suspended when Virginia's new law becomes effective March 22. Judge Goode announced that only "vicious" offenders would be punished.

Report to Kiwanis Club Tells of Children's Aid

Fredericksburg, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—A report on the 21 undernourished children being fed by the Kiwanis Club was made to the club last night by Miss Ethel Nash, principal of the elementary school.

Some of the children were from 10 to 20 per cent underweight at the beginning of the term, Miss Nash reported, but all except one have shown marked improvement.

...ploye in One Office ...or 20 Years Gets Pin

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Miss Emily Miller, cashier of the telephone company office here, has been presented a 20-year service pin.

The service was spent entirely in the office here. Presentation was by W. T. Roche, commercial superintendent of Clarksburg.

CWA Sewing Project Aids Needy

Women CWA workers on Jefferson County, W. Va., sewing projects have been turning out clothes for the needy since January 11. Top photo shows several workers examining newly made garments in the Shepherdstown project office. Left to right are (seated) Mrs. W. W. Winters, Mrs. George McDonald, Mrs. C. F. Daniels, Mrs. J. T. Morrow; standing, Miss Louella Sheetz, Mrs. C. M. Rider, Mrs. H. C. Malone, supervisor, Miss Frances Johnson, in charge; Mrs. Edna Byers, Mrs. Annie Keyes and Miss Nannie Chenoweth. Needy children in Shepherdstown have been clothed through the efforts of the women workers. Photo below shows a group of Jefferson County youngsters wearing some of the handiwork. Left to right are (front row) Irene Hayes, Junior Harrell, Edith McGraw, Ethel Whittington, Arbutus Jones, George McMorrow; back row, William Waters, Mildred Jones, William Willingham, Ruth Manuel, John Price and Katherine Hayes. The children are standing in front of a quilt made by inexperienced women on the sewing projects.

Young Methodists Form Choir Unit

League at Fredericksburg Completes Plan.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—A junior choir, directed by Miss Frances Liebenow and Miss Katherine Browning, with Mrs. A. P. Rowe as advisor, was formed last night by the Methodist Church's Young People's League.

The league was host to six members of the Young People's League of the Ashland Southern Methodist Church, who presented a program led by Miss Beatrice Bryant. Tonight a delegation of 15 members attended the Farrington Union meeting at Remington.

The Rev. Hugh McDonald Martin, director of Slaughter Episcopal Church, Rapidan, spoke last night at a joint service of the congregations of St. George's and Trinity Episcopal Churches, in the Trinity Church.

New Society to Meet.

Lexington, Va., March 8 (Spl.). The first meeting of the Rockbridge Grays Chapter, Children of the Confederacy, will be held here Monday at the home of Mrs. D. E. Strain. This chapter has 38 charter members and is under leadership of Miss Lucy Ackerly.

All Sevens

Number Prominent in Life of Virginia Woman.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 8 (Spl.). Seven has figured prominently in the life of Mrs. Henrietta Lincoln, widow of H. Preston Lincoln, one of the descendants of the Rockingham County family which produced the father of Abraham Lincoln. Mrs. Lincoln, who resides at Lacey Spring, near here, relates these facts about the mystic seven:

She was born April 27, 1857, and is the eldest of seven children. She was married on February 27, 1877. Her madien name, Grandle, contained seven letters as does her married name. She is the mother of seven children, and there are seven grandchildren. She was married 57 years ago. She has lived to see her eldest child enter his fifty-seventh year and her youngest the thirty-seventh. She will be 77 years old on April 27.

The number seven even carries to the sorrowful events of her life as her husband was buried on April 27, the day she was 67 years old.

Charles Town Postal Appointment Affirmed

Charles Town, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Confirmation of the appointment of Thomas S. Moore as postmaster has been received from Postmaster General Farley.

Mr. Moore has been acting postmaster since June 1, 1933.

Virginia Senate Hits New Blow At Fee System

Hobson Measure Providing Revision of Justice Laws Is Passed.

Richmond, March 8 (AP).—Another blow to the fee system was administered yesterday by the Senate in passing the Hobson House bill for a mandatory trial justice system in Virginia.

The Senate roads committee dropped consideration of the Spiers House bill providing for allocation of primary funds to the eight construction districts on the basis of uncompleted mileage. The vote was 23 to 17.

The Spiers bill means the virtual abolition of the highway construction districts and was supported by members of the Assembly from the western part of the State.

The House discharged its committee by a vote of 59 to 20 from further consideration of the Crowder bill to require "public use" tags on all State, city and county automobiles.

Fee Bill to House.

The House appropriations committee reported the Senate bill abolishing the fee system for treasurers, Commonwealth's attorneys and commissioners of revene. The bill puts the officials on a salary basis. It will be on the House calendar tomorrow.

The Senate today voted to continue for two years the life of the Gilliam committee to investigate State hospitals for insane. Senator Gilliam, Petersburg, announced he would urge the Assembly to appropriate $175,000 to lessen fire hazards at the insane hospitals.

The Senate indefinitely postponed consideration of the McMurran bill permitting a bona-fide offer of marriage to bar seduction suits.

The House adopted a resolution thanking members of the Virginia Public Works Advisory Board and Col. James Anderson, the State engineer, for their work.

House Bills Passed.

Among the House bills passed were: Shumate bill, providing that when a new road is added to the secondary system at the request of a county, the county is to furnish the right of way; Rust bill, permitting a nonresident to buy a three-day hunting license for $5; Ferguson bill, to permit the conservation and development commission to convey Appomattox Battlefield Park lands to the Federal Government; Norris bill, to permit use of small dredges for oysters in the Potomac River, contingent upon similar action by Maryland; Staples-Apperson bill reducing the maximum tax on real estate agents from $125 to $50; Wickham-Wicker bill, providing for conveyance by the conservation commission of the Richmond Battlefields Parks land to the Federal Government, and the Rogers bill, allowing gasoline tax funds to be used for highway maintenance as well as construction.

Myersville Club Elects Officers

Midletown, Md., March 8 (Spl.). The Meyersville Woman's Club yesterday elected these officers:

Mrs. John W. Eldridge, president; Mrs. Howard L. Metzger, vice president; Mrs. Ralph Gaver, secretary; Mrs. Walter R. Falkenstein, treasurer; Mrs. D. Edgar Bittle, director.

Committee chairmen include: Education, Mrs. Walter R. Falkenstein; American citizenship, Mrs. Frank O. Lowery; civics, Mrs. Agnes Arnold; fine arts, Miss Amanda Poole; public welfare, Mrs. Wheeler A. Smith; fair, Mrs. Howard L. Metzer; publicity, Miss Sallie R. Marker; American home, Mrs. W. I. Deter; program, Mrs. Roscoe Doub; pianist, Mrs. Ralph Gaver; assistant, Mrs. Everett E. Fyles.

Jail Breaker Given 5 Years At Hagerstown

Court Lightens First Terms Under New Liquor Statute.

Hagerstown, Md., March 8 (Spl.). Russell A. Bragg, who pleaded guilty to breaking jail and to two larceny charges, today was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary by Judge Frank G. Wagaman.

The first sentences under the new State liquor laws were moderate, Judge Wagaman said, to see if it is possible first to curb the sale of unlicensed liquor.

If he finds that the $150 fine or 90 days in jail penalties imposed upon Harry McCoy, Curtis Riley, James Dayhoff, Miss Nerve Guessford and Perry Campbell fail to stop the violations, he said he will give the maximum penalty of $1,000 fine and two years' imprisonment to future offenders.

Elmer C. Halderman wounded and captured while robbing a safe here, was given six years in the penitentiary. Stanley Arnsparger, local entertainer, who pleaded guilty to bigamy, received a two-year sentence.

Bishop Hughes Plans Series.

Roanoke, Va., March 8 (Spl.). Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of Washington, will conduct a series of meetings at Greene Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church here during the Holy Week, March 25 to 31. The Bishop spoke yesterday at a local theater under sponsorship of the Roanoke Ministers Conference.

Fee Ordered In All Appeals From Justices

$5 Necessary to Docket Case in W. Virginia Circuit Courts.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Before an appeal can be taken to a West Virginia circuit court from any magistrate's court hereafter, the appellant must post a deposit of $5 with the justice of the peace to cover the circuit clerk's docket fee, it was ruled by Judge D. H. Rodgers during the present local circuit court term.

The instructions are based on a Supreme Court decision.

The magistrate, upon filing the appeal in circuit court, will turn over the docket fee. No case will be docketed without payment.

The decision followed an appeal in the case of Mason P. Van Fausen vs. Kanawah Auto Loan Co. The petitioner sought to prohibit a Cabell County justice and constable from further proceeding in a judgment against Van Faussen for an automobile. Van Faussen lost in the justice's court and immediately noted an appeal. He filed bond and gave a check for the docket fee payable to the court clerk. This check, however, proved worthless by the clerk, whereupon the justice issued a writ for the automobile and it remained in the constable's hands.

The Supreme Court ruled that the appellant had not made the required deposit and declared the magistrate had not lost jurisdiction and was within his rights in issuing a writ for the car.

Plans for Sunday School Meet Set

Clarksburg Convention Scheduled May 1-3.

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Plans for the annual State Sunday school convention, which is to be held here May 1-3, are announced by the Rev. F. E. Brininstool, general secretary of the West Virginia Council of Religious Education.

The convention, which will be the fifty-fourth, will be held under the auspices of the Harrison County Council of Christian Education and the Clarksburg Ministerial Association in cooperation with the State council. The theme of the meeting will be "Christ is the Life of Today," which is the keynote of the international council and denominational emphasis for the next quadrennium.

Preceding the opening of the convention the annual meeting of the executive council will be held. Divisional conferences are to be held each afternoon for workers with children, youth and adults. Pastors are also to hold a conference.

Club Gardeners Select Officers

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Mrs. W. P. Hovermale was named chairman of the garden department of the Women's Club at the annual meeting yesterday. Mrs. H. M. Grove was named vice chairman, and Mrs. R. S. Thompson, jr., secretary-treasurer.

After a discussion with A. McWilliams, representing the State Road Commission, on roadside beautification, committees were named to plan work on the following roads: Charles Town State road, Williamsport pike, Berkeley Springs State highway and Shepherdstown State highway.

New Ingenue for the Incandescents—Screen and Stage Bills for the New Week

Jane Wyatt Is Proselyted by Carl Laemmle

Mr. Greneker Goes Esoteric and Mr. Sheehan Takes His Pen in Hand.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

When Carl Laemmle, jr., the youthful general manager of Universal Pictures, established years ago by his dad, the adventurous pioneer who broke the back of the "movie trust" and made them like it, returned to the West Coast studios of his company at Universal City on the outskirts of Los Angeles last week from a month's star gazing in New York, he announced the signing of a long-term contract with Jane Wyatt, hailed by critics as one of the three finest ingenues to appear on Broadway during the present decade.

Miss Wyatt's first assignment will be determined immediately upon her arrival in California following her relinquishment of an important role in support of Lillian Gish in "Joyous Season."

ZaSu Pitts, Universal's comedy star, also is home from a honeymoon vacation in New York, the first real respite from the arduous business of picture making she has enjoyed in something like eight years. That could be either seven years or six but, as a matter of fact, is eight!

Was Secretly Wed.

Miss Pitts' husband, not that it especially matters, is Edward Woodall, former star of the tennis courts, to whom the star was secretly wed last October. Miss Pitts, it will be recalled, was, in her earlier career, Mrs. Tom Gallery, Tom being a bit of a fight promoter and stadium manager on the West Coast.

And to make the record complete, after much ado about her frequent airplane trips between Los Angeles, Chicago and New York, a black eye acquired while trout fishing in Arizona and one thing and another, Margaret Sullavan, the rather unusual young Virginian who made her first stage impression in "A Modern Virgin," at the Belasco back in 1931, has finally alighted in Universal City with a sufficient notion of permanency to make possible the beginning of work on "Little Man, What Now," the Frank Borzage production in which she will share honors with Douglass Montgomery.

"Slim" Summerville, following an earnest effort to enjoy a nervous breakdown from overwork, now is convalescing from an appendix operation. Upon his recovery he will be costarred with Chester Morris in a new Universal feature—which seems pretty thoroughly to clean up the odds and ends of gossip about the Universal lot as they dangled in plain view the week beginning March something-or-other, probably 4th.

Mr. George V. Riley, manager of hotels for Washington Properties, Inc., operating the Wardman Park and Carlton in the Capital, has graciously summoned the drama desks and a few friends to nectar and manna for 7 o'clock on Saturday evening of the current week. The gentle blessings of a famished fourth estate which also, probably, is just a little thirsty, descend gratefully upon the beneficent Mr. Riley for this kindly gesture.

A Grin With Greneker.

One learns from—or at least is told by—Mr. C. P. Greneker, principal panegyricist of the house of Shubert in New York, currently masquerading under the nom de theatre of The Select Theaters Corporation, that come the half-hour from 7:30 to 8 every evening in the Winter Garden, New York, the personnel of the so-called "Ziegfeld Follies" goes off the gold, silver, greenback, promissory note and I. O. U. standard to operate on a strict policy of barter and trade.

At the hour mentioned, Mr. Greneker would have us believe—and one of his wide experience and veteran knowledge should know better than to expect that we will—various ambitions and hopes of leading members of the cast of the "Follies" manifest themselves and life is dedicated to uplift, expansion and adornment by the arts.

"One Good Turn——"

Ina Ray, tap dancer, Mr. Greneker insists, can be found instructing several of the Sara Mildred Strauss Dancers—they seem to be new additions to the ensemble since the show was here—in the intricacies of her art in exchange for which the esoteric rhythms of the Strauss school are imparted to Miss Ray. Betzi Beaton of a distinguished line of writers and herself a wit of subtle humors may be found avidly absorbing instruction in acrobatic and eccentric dancing from the diminutive and agile June Preisser one of the more athletically gifted of the Louisianans. A majority of all the chorus girls are eager for instruction in the purling cadences of proper diction. Oliver Wakefield and Eve Arden, who have played many roles on the legitimate stage, are the instructors in this field. There is another considerable group that receives coaching in ballet dancing from Washington's own Patricia Bowman.

When not otherwise occupied—as has been the custom of "Follies" casts since their beginning in 1907—the principals do tatting and hook rugs!

Don't they, Mr. Greneker?

Considerably in the wake of one from Director Frank Lloyd, but none the less welcome on that account, comes a brief note from Winfield Sheehan, head man on the Fox lot in the matter of production, reading as follows:

"Dear Mr. Bell: Please accept my thanks and appreciation of your vote in the selection of 'Cavalcade' among the ten best pictures of 1933.

"As the producer of this picture I am grateful for your kind interest and generous choice.

"I hope that we may be able to be among the best ten for the current year. With best wishes, Sincerely,

"(Signed.) W. SHEEHAN."

Not at all, Mr. Sheehan. "Cavalcade" was a very elegant job, deserving everything it received in the way of critical approval and high rating.

It Springs Eternal!

It is to be hoped that something of comparable worth may be discovered among the following attractions announced for the new week of cinema bills, scheduled to make their bows to Washington audiences today and tomorrow:

Adolphe Menjou, Ruth Chatterton in "Journal of a Crime"—Earle.

Genevieve Tobin, Edw. G. Robinson in "The Dark Hazard"—Metropolitan.

George Raft, Helen Mack in "All of Me"—Palace.

Ann Harding in "Gallant Lady" —Loew's Fox.

Leila Hyams in "The Poor Rich"—Rialto.

Greta Garbo in "Queen Christina"—Columbia.

Claudette Colbert in "It Happened One Night"—RKO-Keith's.

Earle

Washington will have its first view of Ruth Chatterton in her latest vehicle, "Journal of a Crime," starting tomorrow at Warner Bros. Earle Theater. She is supported by Adolphe Menjou. "Singin' Sam" will head the stage bill.

Based on the drama of Jacques Deval, "Journal of a Crime" offers Miss Chatterton an opportunity to display the art in which she is the peer of any actress on the screen.

The drama depicts the devastating effects of a murder on the conscience of a sensitive woman. Besides this emotional side of the play there is much thrilling action.

Miss Chatterton is supported by an unusually strong cast led by Adolphe Menjou, George Barbier, Claire Dodd, Douglas Dumbrille, Noel Madison, Henry O'Neill, Phillip Reed, Henry Kolker and Frank Reicher.

The stage portion of the new program is headed by Singin' Sam, of radio fame. He brings a new program of ballads and ditties. Other acts are the Rimacs and Havana Orchestra, in a program of their native Cuban dances and music, featuring Charley Boy; Irving Edwards, the Broadway comedian, and Bryant, Rains and Young, "Dancers Decidedly Different."

Short subjects and the Earle orchestral prelude complete the bill.

Columbia

Loew's Columbia has decided that, since the inclement weather deterred so many from witnessing Greta Garbo in "Queen Christina," and since so many who did not see it during its two-week tenancy of the Palace want a second look, it will bring back this historical drama tomorrow.

Rouben Mamoulian has added brilliant direction to the lavish settings and poignant drama of this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. Garbo reincarnates with some fidelity the strange character of Sweden's feminine ruler of 300 years ago who abdicated her throne for a man's love. John Gilbert is her screen lover.

Ian Keith, Lewis Stone, Elizabeth Young, Reginald Owen, David Torrence and Gustav von Seyffertitz lead the support.

News events, a comedy and short subjects complete the entertainment.

Metropolitan

Warner Bros.' Metropolitan Theater, starting tomorrow, will inaugurate a new price and entertainment policy that brings to Washington amusement seekers new screen fare at lower prices.

The new policy embraces a two-and-a-half-hour show with a first-run screen attraction and a surrounding program of short reels. The new price policy, effective March 9, reduces the admission to 25 cents for any seat in the house until 5 p. m., and a balcony 25-cent and orchestra 40-cent admission tariff from 5 p. m. to closing.

The first attraction for the new policy will be "Dark Hazard," the First National picturization of the novel, starring Edward G. Robinson, Genevieve Tobin and Glenda Farrell.

"Dark Hazard," by W. R. Burnett, author of "Little Caesar," deals with a man whose passion for gambling is so great that he gives up love and home, and practically everything in life considered worth while because of it.

The program of short-reel featurettes is headed by 15 minutes of sound news.

"Come to Dinner," a burlesque of the feature, "Dinner at Eight," is another subject listed. Buddy and Towser are to be seen in a new Merrie Melody song cartoon entitled "Buddy and Towser."

Completing the bill is a Vitaphone novelty with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band.

Palace

Frederic March, Miriam Hopkins, George Raft and Helen Mack form the quartette of characters who participate in "All of Me," slated to start a week's run on the screen at Loew's Palace tomorrow.

Based on the play "Chrysalis," by Rose Albert Porter, the picture presents the highlights of four interesting lives, with Miss Hopkins portraying the pivotal character, a society girl with wayward inclinations.

Engaged to a young college professor, played by Frederic March, she isn't certain of her love until devious contacts with life teach her the meaning of devotion. It is George Raft and Helen Mack, two law-crushed kids from the slums, who teach the pampered society girl the real meaning of love.

An unusually large cast is seen in support of these principals in this picture, directed by James Flood.

A Charley Chase comedy, a Popeye cartoon, a sports cartoon and news events are added.

Rialto

A comedy that chimes right in with the "New Deal" comes to the Rialto Theater today as the feature for the new week.

It is "The Poor Rich" and presents a new co-starring team in Edward Everett Horton and Edna May Oliver. Ebba Havez and Dale Van Every wrote the story and Edward Sedgwick directed the production.

Assisting the stars is a cast including Andy Devine, Leila Hyams, Thelma Todd, Una O'Connor, John Miljan, E. E. Clive and Grant Mitchell.

"The Poor Rich" presents an amusing version of the depression; true, but funny.

The Rialto completes its program with shorter screen novelties and the Universal News with Graham McNamee.

Loew's Fox

Ann Harding, in her latest picture, "Gallant Lady," opens tomorrow at Loew's Fox Theater, together with a vaudeville program that features Benny Meroff and his orchestra.

A supporting cast, including Clive Brook, Otto Kruger, Tullio Carminati, Dickie Moore and Janet Beecher appears with Miss Harding in this drama of mother love.

The story of "Gallant Lady" deals with the experiences of an unwed mother who is forced to give her child up for adoption and who promises never to see him again. Faced with the possibility, in later years, of being reunited with her son, she is confronted with the dilemma of either making known her identity as the child's mother, in order to be with him, or revealing the facts in order to play fair with the man she loves.

In addition to Meroff, the stage also will present Marty May and Jean Carroll in songs, dances and comedy; Gordon, Reed and King, dance stylists, and the Kitchen Pirates.

Phil Lampkin has arranged another special overture and the program is completed with newsreel and short subjects.

RKO-Keith's

RKO-Keith's announces a third week for the Clark Gable-Claudette Colbert picture, "It Happened One Night."

Both of the stars are being accorded unstinted praise for their performances with like praise going to Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns and the others of the supporting cast.

The second in the series of "Amos 'n' Andy" cartoons, wherein the actual voices of the two famous radio personages are recorded, is also being continued into the third week.

Anniversary of Baraca Classes to Be Observed

Waynesboro, Va., March 8 (Spl.), The twentieth anniversary of the Baraca movement here will be observed April 15, when the 600 members of the men's Bible classes in the various churches will meet at the First Presbyterian Church for a union service. C. C. Leap is chairman of the joint committee.

The first Baraca class here was organized at the Waynesboro Baptist Church under Dr. Richard S. Owens, now pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, of Roanoke.

Postal Employes Take Payless Day

35 Hit in Fredericksburg; Deliveries to Be Cut.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Each of the 35 postal employes here will be off duty without pay one day each month, in compliance with the order of Postmaster General Farley to reduce department expenditures, Capt. Gunyon M. Harrison, postmaster, announced.

Will Curtail Deliveries.

Roanoke, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—E. L. Keyser, postmaster, predicts it will be necessary to curtail delivery of mail in residential sections in order to comply with Postoffice Department instructions.

At present there are two deliveries, but under orders promulgated to meet budget requirements, the postmaster says deliveries probably will be cut to one a day.

Church Teachers' School Is Planned

Three-County Institute Is Set at Middletown.

Middletown, Md., March 8 (Spl.). A model Daily Vacation Bible School Teachers' Training Institute for three counties is being planned in connection with the annual Daily Vacation Bible School to be held here the week of June 11, with the Reformed and Lutheran churches acting as hosts.

Delegates from Frederick, Carroll and Washington Counties will participate.

Study periods will be directed by the State council of religious education. Miss Lillian McCormick, of Baltimore, secretary to the Western Shore Division of the Maryland-Delaware Council of Religious Education, will be in charge of the institute.

Middleburg Trials Again Postponed

Meet Twice Deferred by Bad Weather.

Middleburg, Va., March 8 (Spl.). The Middleburg hunter trials, once delayed by weather, has been postponed again and will be held March 17, according to D. C. Sands, M. F. H. The program will be carried out as originally planned, except for the judges, who have not yet been named.

The trials were originally planned February 22, then were postponed to March 10.

Ferrum Institute Head For 22 Years Resigns

Danville, Va., March 8 (Spl.). The resignation of Dr. B. M. Beckham as principal of Ferrum Institute, a Methodist mountain mission, a post he has held since 1912, has been accepted by the Rev. F. B. McSparran, presiding elder of this district, which includes the school.

Mr. McSparran said Dr. Beckham's resignation was first tendered last fall. Ill health was the reason. Dr. Beckham will continue until the end of the term.

Event For Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—A St. Patrick's Day Wedding will be presented in the high school March 15 by the High School Band Auxiliary. Proceeds will help secure instruments and uniforms for the boys.

Old Toll Bridge May Be Abandoned

Danville, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—One of the oldest toll bridges in this section will be abandoned if a bill pending in the Virginia General Assembly passes.

The bridge spans Dan River at Milton. One end of the bridge is in Virginia and the other is in North Carolina. The bill would authorize the State highway commission to negotiate with the North Carolina Highway Commission for the building of a new free bridge, each State bearing half of the cost. The bridge would open up a large tobacco territory to Danville.

All-Day Mission Study.

Round Hill, Va,. March 8 (Spl.). An all-day mission study and prayer service program, postponed from Tuesday, will be held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Rogers tomorrow. The service will be led by Mrs. Luther Otley, of Lincoln, and the mission discussion by Mrs. J. H. Emerick, of Purcellville.

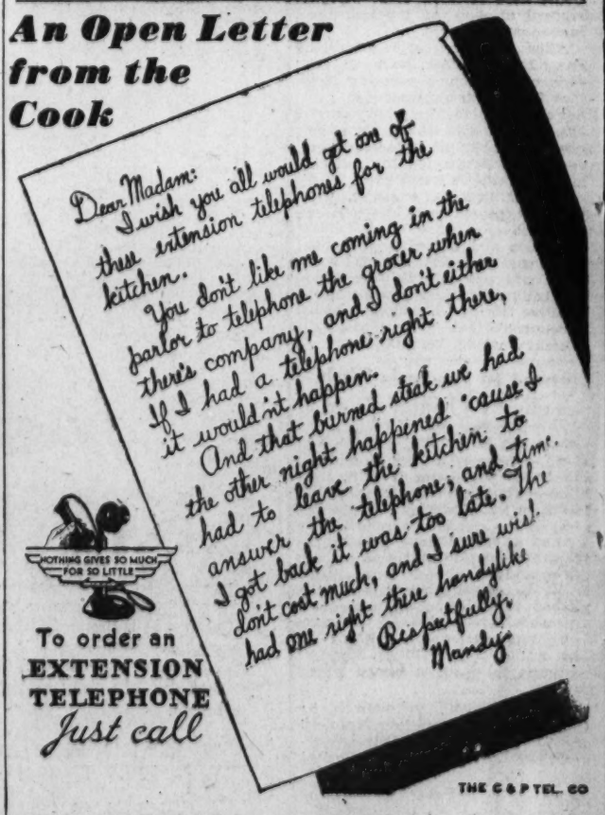
An Open Letter from the Cook



Dear Madam:
I wish you all would get on of them extension telephones for the kitchen.
You don't like me coming in the parlor to telephone the grocer when there's company, and I don't either. If I had a telephone right there, it wouldn't happen.
And that burned steak we had the other night happened 'cause I had to leave the kitchen to answer the telephone, and time I got back it was too late. The don't cost much, and I sure wish had one right there handylike
Respectfully,

Holmes, at 93, Aided New Deal On Milk Ruling

Aged Jurist Spent Life Forming Philosophy Behind Decision.

[Editor's note: In upholding the validity of the New York milk control law Monday, the Supreme Court apparently broke with the traditions of the past in a manner of great and immediate significance. The following is the second of a series of articles by the United Press seeking to trace the background and establish the indications of that step.]

Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, in the quiet study of an ancient red brick house, 720 I street northwest, yesterday celebrated his ninety-third birthday, and the New Dealers, if they believe they are successful, should well pay homage there.

For, more to the judicial philosophy advocated by Holmes through his long and active life than to any other cause do they owe the victory which they seemingly won Monday in the Supreme Court.

Through a lifetime of study and writing, and through 30 active years in the Supreme Court, Holmes preached and practiced the legal philosophy which controlled that bench in deciding the New York milk-control law in favor of State authorities.

Homage Is Due.

Two members of that majority of five voted consistently with Holmes in his concise dissents from the opinions of the then controlling conservative members of the court. They were Justices Louis D. Brandeis, Holmes' personal friend, and Harlan Fiske Stone. A third, Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, has long been a disciple of the legal philosophy of Holmes.

So, if President Roosevelt should decide, as he did a year ago, to break tradition and pay a call to that quiet study and the stern, white-haired courtroom warrior, the homage will not be amiss.

For the legal philosophy of Holmes has been depended on by the New Dealers to obtain the needed judicial sanction of the revolutionary economic policies which they expound, and which, seemingly, are at a critical stage.

This philosophy held as a prime concept that the Constitution, far from being a dead instrument, is a very lively document designed to meet the needs of changing conditions within its elastic borders. If one doubts that a material change in past interpretations of the document was effected when the milk case was decided, one need but read the vigorous dissent of the conservative minority.

Reduced to its substances, the majority ruling held that State, and presumably National Legislatures, within their fields, must be allowed to decide and pursue the economic policies which they feel fit the peculiar circumstances of the hour, free from any interference of the courts.

The minority viewpoint contended and implied that the courts might take any piece of legislation and decide whether it would accomplish the desired end. And, as in previous conservative judicial opinions, held that the "due process" clause of the Constitution established a firm, clear line beyond which no legislation might go in effecting private property.

Competition Within Bounds.

With this distinction between the two viewpoints established, the viewpoint of Holmes and the traditional viewpoint of conservatism, the value of the decision to the New Deal becomes more readily apparent.

Hitherto, legislation to curb practices of industries deemed harmful to the economic welfare of the people have, substantially, been held to be an invasion of private property rights unless the abuse was of such patent character that the harm was easily apparent.

But developments of recent years have implanted a new economic philosophy. They have produced a philosophy that contended that only within bounds is untrammeled competition desirable or well.

Cummings Lashes Dillinger's Jailers

complete lack of a sense of responsibility, or of propriety and common sense.

"The negligence of these people may result in the death of some honest person who is trying to effect Dillinger's capture."

Soon after the Attorney General had made his criticism, Sanford Bates, director of Federal prisons, ordered discontinuance of the Crown Point Jail as a place of detention for Federal prisoners. Eight Federal prisoners now there will be removed.

Justice Department agents are leading the search for Dillinger, now concentrated in Chicago. When the gunman first escaped, J. Edgar Hoover, of the Investigation Division, termed it an "outrage." Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan, of the Criminal Division, charged the jail guards had been "grossly and inexcusably negligent."

When informed of Cummings' statement, Mrs. Holley said:

"The general system now seems to be to heap criticism after criticism upon me. However, I'll be here on my job until they put me out."

Two guards on duty at the jail when Dillinger walked out have been arrested.

Estill, whose picture was published with Dillinger's arm about his shoulders, would not comment on Cummings' remarks, but did say he would oppose Judge Murray's attempt to name a special prosecutor.

"I am capable of handling the investigation," he said. "Appointment of another man would reflect on my character."

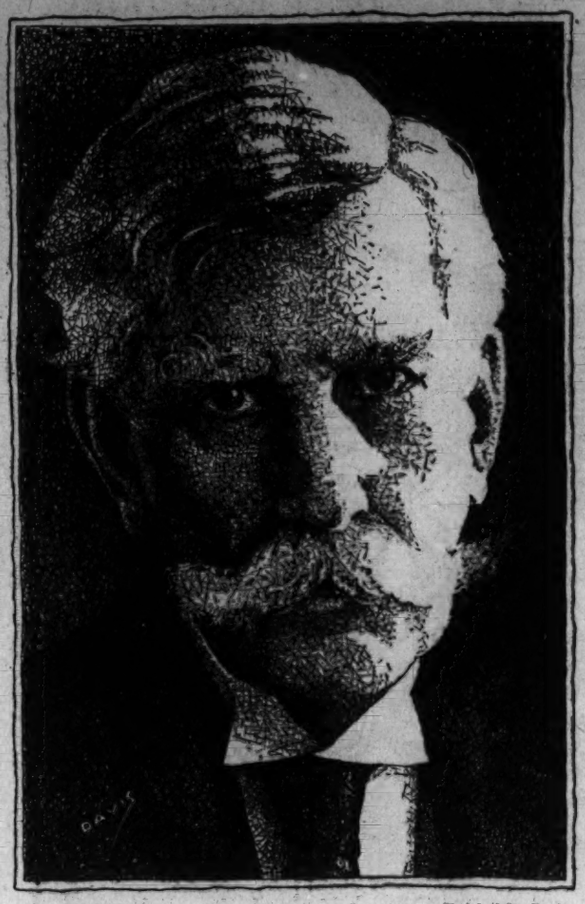
Great Liberal 93 Yesterday



Sketched by Davis.

Oliver Wendell Holmes had a birthday yesterday. He was 93. The former justice of the United States Supreme Court, one of the Nation's grand old men, celebrated the day quietly receiving a few friends. Mr. Holmes, who is in the best of health, brought the liberal tradition to the Supreme Court. It was in 1932 when he resigned with the words: "The time has come to bow to the inevitable." His home is at 1720 I street northwest.

Capital Goods Industry Balks At NRA Pay-Raise Plan

"It is still in a fluid state. Conditions are changing so rapidly that if we crystallized on a plan now, we would have to upset it."

Swope referred to his council as a "debating society," and emphasized that it was merely discussing various courses that might be followed. Discussion of a possible substitute for NRA became significant at this time only because it comes during a period of widespread questioning as to what direction the recovery experiment will take, and on the heels of President Roosevelt's declaration that the recovery experiment is permanent, and indications that he soon will ask Congress to extend the licensing provision of the recovery act which expire June 16, a year ahead of the remainder of the law.

Anxious to Push Ahead.

Gen. Johnson, however, indicated every disposition to push ahead. His conferences with the spokesmen of industry yesterday were preliminary to numerous revisions of NRA policies along the general line of the twelve points he outlined at the opening of the field day of criticism, covering price cutting and stabilization, wage and hour revisions, readjustment of North and South differentials, protection for small enterprises, better compliance, elimination of racketeering in financing of code authorities, greater representation of labor and consumers on code authorities, elimination of code inconsistencies, and wide use of code mechanisms for settling labor disputes.

At the same time, NRA officials began preparations to carry out specific orders of President Roosevelt to enforce penal sections of the recovery act. Earlier hesitation about facing a Supreme Court test of the recovery act has disappeared with the New York milk decision upholding price-fixing and other legislation deemed to be in the public interest.

Attorney General Cummings told the press there would be news in two or three days on the Weirton steel case, involving the company union issue.

30-Hour Agitation Grows.

In the House, there was increasing agitation for pressing the Connery 30-hour week bill reported favorably by the House Labor Committee a few days ago. Chairman Connery, author of the measure, said Speaker Rainey and Democratic Leader Byrns have indicated they are inclined to favor the measure. He is seeking early action, he said.

Johnson is opposed to the measure because of its drastic blanket nature, but Administration officials hope that agitation for its passage will have a persuasive effect on employers inclined to resist the President's latest plea for shorter hours and higher wages.

Swope backed up the plea of heavy industries that reduced hours would not help them.

"Suppose a 30-hour week was applied to the capital goods industries, it wouldn't put a single additional man back to work," Swope said. "The reason is that most of the heavy industries are working less than 30 hours a week now.

"I believe in the principle of the President's proposal to shorten hours and increase wages for the purpose of spreading work and increasing consumer power, but with regard for the preservation of the capital structure. If we say that a man must increase his overhead, then he must increase his selling price. That means a decrease in demand, a decrease in production and decreased work. It would defeat the purpose of the action."

Swope also questioned whether Johnson's plan for invoking the hours and wages changes by Executive order was the best way.

A Different Situation.

"It is true that it was done that way under the Presidential reemployment agreements and industries were permitted to come to Washington and obtain exemptions where hardship could be shown," Swope continued.

"But we have a different situation new. Ninety per cent of industry is under codes. We have machinery in the code authorities, which are in a position to consider the conditions in their respective industries and make recommendations quickly to Gen. Johnson."

Swope was much more concerned about the need of easing credit facilities, particularly for small industries. His advisory council concluded a meeting today by adopting a resolution to this effect and indorsing the tentative plan of the Federal Reserve banks for financing such loans through rediscount machinery.

The council includes nearly 40 of the biggest names in industry, headed by Swope, the president of General Electric, who has served almost continuously in NRA in one capacity or another, and has rejoined the National Labor Board within the last few days.

He praised the gathering of code authorities and the two committees of business men set up yesterday to consult with Johnson on the future program of NRA.

Italy Only Parallel.

"There never has been such a meeting anywhere except, perhaps, in Italy," Swope said.

These two divisions of industry will be heard of constantly for some time to come. Capital goods industries are those which manufacture articles which are in the nature of plant investment, such as turbines, lathes, and most machinery; structural steel, building materials, and furniture.

Consumers' goods industries are those manufacturing food, clothing and other such articles which are rapidly consumed.

The capital goods committee issued a statement through its chairman, George H. Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, after conferring with Johnson.

"The solution of unemployment in the durable goods industries cannot be accomplished by a reduction of hours and increase of wages, inevitably followed by increased cost, with business volume so drastically reduced at this time," Houston said.

"Purchase of durable goods diminishes rapidly with increasing price. Further curtailed demand for durable goods at this time would freeze unemployment now existing in this field for the indefinite future."

He said 5,000,000 men, or half the normal employment, are out of work in durable goods industries. Another 4,000,000 men normally employed in service industries are out of work waiting upon revival of durable goods manufacture, Houston said.

To Encourage Investments.

Houston said that an important object of his committee will be to encourage resumption of investment in durable goods.

The committee of consumer goods industries, headed by George A. Sloan, chairman of the Cotton Textile Code Authority, conferred with Johnson. They emerged with the word that no decision had been made. Sloan said hours and wages would be considered first, adding:

"We recognize that as the most important question before the country."

Labor Forging Ahead In London Elections

London, March 8 (U.P.).—Early returns in today's municipal elections showed sweeping gains for Labor candidates on the London county council, local governing body.

At midnight, Labor candidates apparently had won 61 seats; Conservatives, 36, and Liberals, 0. Labor candidates had gained 29 new seats at the expense of 25 Conservatives and 4 Liberals.

tion of inferiority to any within striking distance of our shores."

Fears Armament Race.

The undersecretary expressed the hope that Britain's decision to add four new squadrons under provisions of the air estimates would not serve as a spark, touching off an armaments race in that field.

He described the air estimates—a part of defense force figures calling for spending £4,765,000 (now about $24,206,200) more on the British army, air and navy next year than last—as "the outcome of our desire to pursue disarmament and study economy on the one hand, and on the other of our reluctant conviction that a policy of postponement can not be continued."

Japanese Are Ready For "Big Navy" Race

Tokyo, March 8 (U.P.).—The Japanese are prepared to enter a "big navy" race and proceed with the construction of new warships after the present treaties expire, the navy minister announced today.

The announcement emphasized that on the basis of the Vinson naval construction bill, passed by the United States Senate last Tuesday, Japan by the end of 1939 would have but slightly more than 60 per cent of the tonnage of the United States Navy.

Hence, it was asserted, Japan would be compelled to build additional ships in order to balance this disparity after the completion of her second replenishment program, replacing obsolete warships.

The statement generally was taken to support earlier declarations that Japan no longer will be satisfied with the present 5—5—3 naval ratio among the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

Clergy Defies Hitler Bishop

Laymen and Pastors to Oppose Regime of Nazi Church.

Berlin, March 8 (A.P.).—A determination to stand together in refusing obedience to Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller was unanimously voted tonight by 600 pastors and laymen, bitter foes of the bishop's dictatorship in Protestant Church affairs.

Caling themselves a "free synod," the dissents approved resolutions declaring their adaherence to holy writ alyone, that the German Swastika emblem had nothing in common with the Cross of Jesus, and that worshipping the god of the Nazi "world philosophy" was plain idolatry.

They rejected as "hresy" a tenet of the Nazi German Christians that Christ rules only an invisible church.

Complailnts were heard from country churchmen that those who dared to support their pastors in opposition to the Nazi Protestant regime were subjected to threats Nazi "bosses."

It was also announced at tonight's meeting that Pastor Petersen, of Lichterfeldt, had been suspended for praying in his church for "our misguided Reichsbishop."

Chicago Pushes Dillinger Hunt

Gas Station Attendant Says Gunman Was in His Place.

Chicago, March 8 (A.P.).—The hunt for John Dillinger tonight brought forth a man who claimed to have talked with the outlaw a few hours previously.

E. H. Deacon, 35, identified photographs of Dillinger as a man who entered his filling station on Chicago's South Side last night, washed his hands and face, adjusted shoulder holsters holding two pistols and left with a veiled warning for Deason to be quiet.

Deacon's report caused Supervising Police Capt. John Stege to revive his special "Dillinger army" of sharpshooters assigned to hunt the desperado and his band last fall. It was disbanded when he was captured with several of his aids in Tucson, Ariz.

Squads of police patrolled the South Side for blocks around the vicinity of Seventy-third street and Stony Island avenue, where Deacon reported conversing with Dillinger. Stege predicted grimly:

"We'll find him if he's in Chicago, and when we do he'll never go back to Indiana—except maybe in a box." Eight squads with riot equipment were assigned under Stege.

New Fight Starts For Kemp Seat

Democratic Call Issued for Primary April 17.

Baton Rouge, La., March 8 (A.P.).—Faction-torn Democrats of the Sixth Louisiana District today were called upon by the district Democratic committee to participate in a party primary April 17 for selection of a successor to the late Congressman Bolivar E. Kemp.

Kemp died nearly a year ago and the seat has since been vacant, although the district elected two "Congressmen" last December.

Both of those elected—the widow, Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp, and J. Y. Sanders, jr., were rejected by the House after investigation of their elections.

Japan Probes Chinese Buying Of U. S. Planes

Tokyo Seeks to Learn if America Is Linked in Air Development.

Shanghai, March 8 (A.P.).—The Japanese military, self-styled guardians of "the peace of the Far East," want to know more about American airplane salesmen who are obtaining orders in ever-increasing numbers in China, it was learned today.

Recent discussions in the Japanese Diet in which it was charged that the United States had agreed to assist China in developing an air force brought denials from Washington officials, but reports indicate the Japenese army's concern over the activities of the salesmen and instructors here has not been assuaged.

The latest reports, all of them unverifiable officially, say that Japenese agents in China are studying each American flier, seeking any possible connection between the men and the American Government.

Yesterday's arrival of Frank Hawks, noted American aviator, with a Giant Bomber which he will demonstrate to the National government, stimulated the work of the Japanese investigators.

The Japanese were represented as feeling that the new Shanghai-Canton commercial air line is a possible threat to the security of Formosa, the Japanese island possession off the coast of China.

American instructors at the Nationalist government air school at Hangchow rapidly are producing competent Chinese fliers. This is causing extreme uneasiness in Japanese circles.

Dollfuss Expresses Faith in Heimwehr

Attacks Recent Distrust of Fascist Guard.

Vienna, March 8 (A.P.).—Chancellor Dollfuss expressed confidence tonight that the Fascist Heimwehr, or home guard, is loyally behind efforts to reconstruct the nation.

In a speech to the executive committee of the lower Austrian peasants league the Chancellor referred bluntly to the distrust of the Heimwehr lately evident in certain sections of the pro-government front.

The Chancellor's speech was particularly significant because it was the lower Austrian peasant body which marched to Vienna, 100,000 strong, a few weeks ago in a demonstration for Dollfuss and aganst "all enemies, wherever they stand."

Norton Bill Asks Widening of 13th

Bottleneck at Northern End Traffis Hazard.

Authorization for the widening of Thirteenth street northwest from Monroe street to Spring road to 60 feet, is asked in a bill introduced yesterday in the House by Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, at the request of the District Commissioners.

The Commissioners, in urging the bill, pointed out that the present bottle neck on upper Thirteenth street has long constituted a traffic hazard.

It was estimated that between $50,000 and $75,000 would be necessary to pay condemnation awards to property owners.

$28,000 Shortage Faced by Schools

Board Asks Funds for Heat and Light.

A course of procedure to be followed by the Board of Education in heating and lighting schools was asked of the Commissioners yesterday as the board faces a deficit of $27,798 in lighting and fuel appropriation.

In 1933, the Board of Education pointed out, the appropriation for fuel and lighting was $295,000, and expenditures were $269,755, leaving a balance of $35,24. For this year, the sum of $40,000 was appropriated, but the expense is expected to reach $267,000. The board wants an additional $30,000 to cover the expected deficit.

Scientist Plans Descent of Half Mile During Summer Work.

Thanks to the National Geographic Society, the good ship Bathysphere will sail again. In other words, Dr. William Beebe will be able to continue his exploration of the ocean's depths in his windowed ball.

Through the granting of a special fund, the society will make possible another descent into the sea by Dr. Beebe, director of scientific research for the New York Zoological Society.

Last year, Dr. Beebe, well known for his sensational scientific exploits, made a record descent of 2,200 feet, deeper than any living man had gone. This year he hopes to make it half a mile.

On his delving downward flight, Dr. Beebe, who can observe the ocean's secrets through the windows of his steel ball, will this year be accompanied by an assistant.

The expedition will go to the same place as formerly—the areas around little Nonsuch Island, off the warm coast of Bermuda. It will make its headquarters at Dr. Beebe's new laboratory near the Bermuda Biological Station.

The Bathysphere is a thick-shelled steel ball, 4½ feet in diameter. It weighs 2 tons. Windows of fused quartz will withstand the terrific pressure of tons of sea water.

Through these windows beams of light penetrate the water and illuminate the beautiful and weird creatures of the deep ocean. The ball is lowered by a steel cable. Another insulated line carries electric and telephone wires.

The observers are sealed within the ball. They are furnished oxygen by a supply controlled by an automatic valve. Chemicals absorb the moisture and carbon dioxide of waste breath.

This year's dives will be four or five hours long, Dr. Beebe says. He will begin operations in July.

Air Passenger Total Gaining

28,000 More in 1933 Than Year Before, but Mail Shows Decrease.

American-operated air lines with domestic and foreign extensions carried 28,000 more passengers during 1933 than in 1932, the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce announced yesterday.

Of the 568,940 passengers in 1933, 493,141 traveled on domestic air lines and 75,899 flew on foreign extensions to Latin America and Canada.

Air mail carried on domestic and foreign routes by American operators in 1933 totaled 92,191 pounds less than in 1932.

The survey also revealed that 504 airplanes were in operation on scheduled air lines at the end of the year, and that air lines furnished employment for 6,273 persons, including 543 pilots, 206 co-pilots, 2,320 mechanics and ground crew men; 1,834 other hangar and field personnel and 1,370 operation and office personnel.

Air passengers were paying for transportation at the average rate of 6.1 cents per mile on domestic air lines at the close of 1933. Domestic lines scheduled 102,544 flights during the year and completed 97,978, thus fulfilling 95 per cent of their schedules.

Two Crimes Solved?

Out of the treasury came gold bricks, out of a British mail ship came real gold. Some one, desperately in need of funds, is loose. Can it be Dillinger?

Don't laugh. It is not as silly as it seems. As Al Smith used to say, take a peek at the record. Dillinger escaped from Crown Point Jail, in Indiana, last Saturday. Since then his trail has led his trailers zig-zag across the land. He is in Chicago. No, he's not. He held up a bank in South Dakota. No, he didn't. He is seen in North Carolina. He is hiding in Newark. He is in Chicago again. Banks are warned and teletypes click, radios sputter, police unfasten safety catches on their guns. Uneasiness prevails.

It's always the same. Give a man the title of desperado and what have you? A legend almost overnight. And then, when anything happens, if it in any way justifies the so-called bad man's reputation, he is blamed. Well, Dillinger needs money and he has read all the Nick Carter-like stories that have been written around his name. So first he jumps to a steamship at sea and steals several thousands of dollars in gold. Quite a stunt, even for Dillinger. Next: he attacks the most impregnable storage of wealth in the world, the United States Treasury. Nobody ever did that before! What a hero he will be with his pals! It's as daring as Dillinger, as simple as Simon. Call off your hounds, Scotland Yard; Department of Justice men, go home. The crimes are solved.

Dillinger did it with his little woodeu pistol. Either Dillinger, or the sea serpent of Loch Ness.

In A Glass House.

A mock trial of Hitlerism was held Wednesday night in New York. As might have been suspected, Hitlerism was found guilty. The whole affair had a typically American tinge to it; a self-righteous atmosphere prevailed and, with the intolerance which we so easily can attain, intolerance was vigorously attacked. No mention was made of our own American crimes against decency, but with utter abandon the speakers blinded their eyes to the home sector and condemned Hitler as "murderer," gangster, and "moron." No doubt some of the opprobrious terms were justifiable, but is the United States so lily white that it can afford to make a display of its righteousness?

Keynote of the meeting was given by Prof. Raymond Moley, who said, "I hate Hitlerism! I hate the thing because it is the enemy of my country!" Is that the speech of tolerance? We can easily understand and even approve the feeling that gave rise to the outburst, but would not the whole meeting have been more effective if it had been less explosive? Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith was one of the speakers. If anyone should be able to understand what the spirit of a Hitler can do to an individual, it should be Mr. Smith. "Bigotry and intolerance can not be controlled," he roared to the vast audience. No, it can not be controlled, either here or abroad. It exists here, as the New York meeting proved, as well as Unter den Linden.

Root Of The Evil.

In all seven cases, those who have made a choice between continuing their connection with the Democratic National committee or paid employment in public or private service have elected to sever their connections with the party organization.

With Postmaster General Farley and numerous lesser officeholders retaining their positions as National committeemen, it is interesting to speculate about their future course of conduct. If they should decide that they can not continue to serve two masters, will they, like their predecessors, elect to withdraw from the national committee? Will none feel he can be better spared from public office?

The problem that has confronted President Roosevelt in encouraging a divorce between formal affiliation with party organizations and Government connections of any sort is both embarrassing and difficult. Such a segregation is essential, if the public is to be given assurance that a Federal Government with vastly extended powers over industry is not being run for the benefit of one party instead of all the people. Nevertheless, the fundamental trouble is deeply seated, growing out of the fact that the American Government is run by and through parties.

Rewards bestowed upon active party workers after a successful campaign are a recognized part of the system and no President can wholly disregard these special claims. Therefore, it is not surprising to find numerous members of the National committee of the party in power holding important appointive posts in the Government service. Their presence is the result of the spoils system which has persisted throughout our history and interfered with the upbuilding of a strong civil service based on merit. Mere retirement from party posts does not destroy this patronage system nor does it perceptibly lessen the material influence of those politicians who elect to remain in public office.

Quo Vadis?

Little clarification as to the objectives of national policy, but a distinct increase of tension regarding the methods of that policy, has been the upshot of this week's conference of code authorities. Its adjournment, and the public bewilderment aroused by Gen. Johnson's assertion that the country "ain't seen nothin' yet," demand a certain dispassionate consideration of the course which we are following with cumulative, if not yet reckless, speed.

In the speech which opened the conference President Roosevelt laid stress upon "permanent reorganization" of the "system of production and exchange" as the keynote of the New Deal. This reorganization he contrasted, at least inferentially, with the pre-depression situation under which, he said, there was "no planning whatsoever." The impression given was that the Administration is now irrevocably committed to what is glibly called a "planned economy." That means, of course, a system in which State control completely replaces traditional methods of competitive enterprise and individual choice.

This thesis was pointed up and emphasized by the National Recovery Administrator in the speech which closed the conference. It was Gen. Johnson's role, in essentials, to tell the country that the mailed fist lies behind the velvet glove; that while criticism—of a sort—is invited, opposition on grounds of principle will not be tolerated.

With very considerable dialectical skill the general used his audience both as an indorsement and as a vehicle of policy. In the first case he argued that the meetings have shown "that our people and industry are squarely and almost unanimously" behind the program. In the second case he warned the country through his audience that dictatorial methods may have to be employed in putting the program across. A certain sophistry here was justified by drawing a staggering analogy. "I am a soldier by training and inclination," said the general. "I think this is war and that there can only be one leader in a war."

If this is war, and wartime psychology is to be anticipated, it becomes doubly vital to appraise the methods now being followed by the Administration to achieve victory over the depression. It is the more important to do so because steadily increasing pressure is being brought to close the mouths of qualified critics on the ground that their suggestions are "unpatriotic."

We are supposed, then, to be proceeding on the basis of a "planned economy," replacing the admittedly anarchical, but unquestionably workable, system of free capitalistic economy. To what extent is our substitute policy really planned?

On the side of production, inconsistencies of theory are apparent. Through currency manipulation every effort has been made to raise prices, on the assumption that it is desirable to stimulate increased production and that rising prices will do so. The agricultural program reverses the order, seeking to raise prices by curtailing production.

The NRA itself reflects a further uncertainty of procedure. It forbids monopolistic practices but encourages restrictive codes. It prohibits "destructive wage or price cutting" and ignores the fact that wage and price boosting may be at least equally destructive. It proposes to protect the consumer while aiming at the objective of higher prices. It strengthens the position of organized labor without any real consideration, by the unions or elsewhere, of whether the restrictive side of their policy is socially desirable.

Another set of inconsistencies is to be found in the treatment of the unemployment problem. Certainly it is not the fault of this Administration that it assumed office with no adequate machinery for handling the unemployed, and their relief, in a scientific manner. But it is a serious lack of system that after starting to create a Nation-wide network of public employment exchanges, basic to intelligent attack upon the problem, there should have been so little integration of these offices with a distribution of relief which has throughout been handled in unsystematic and haphazard fashion.

Further discrepancies are to be found between fiscal and currency policies. A nominal budget balance has been achieved, by assuming that many loans and public works expenditures are not current expense. But at the same time an inflationary policy has been followed and gradually the theory that balance of income and outgo is not imperative is gaining the upper hand. Depreciation of the currency has served to conceal the underlying seriousness of this trend.

The catalogue could be extended at length. To do so, however, would be both tiresome and, in a sense, unjust. The Administration program, at the outset, was announced, and regarded, as of an emergency character. In an emergency program complete consistency is neither to be expected, nor necessarily desired. Unrelated and sometimes contradictory measures, stabbing at specific evils, are natural in such circumstances.

But when the unrelated measures fail to achieve their goal, as in the case today, no constructive purpose, no national good is served by pretending that they constitute "economic planning" which has failed merely because enforcement has not been drastic. What we have had the past year is further from economic planning, properly understood, than what we had before the depression. Whether or not its results were admirable, individual self-interest could at least be relied upon to produce a certain pattern. For that pattern we have today substituted a shifting kaleidoscope of uncertainty.

"You ain't seen nothin' yet," says Gen. Johnson. His words may well be prophetic. But we have seen enough to know that we stand at a crossroads in our national history, and to know further that if a truly "planned economy" is to be substituted for our present system there must be changes of which the country has as yet no real conception. Whichever way we are headed, it is imperative to realize that sounding phrases do not in themselves constitute effective policies.

Japan Steps In.

On the heels of the Senate passage of the Vinson Navy bill, Admiral Osumi, Japanese minister of marine, has announced that his country has joined the "navy race" between the United States, Great Britain and France. There is no use blinding ourselves to the fact that the larger powers of the world are increasing their naval armaments at an alarming rate. Each points to the other and says that if that country builds a larger navy it is only right, in self-defense, to do so at home. Inevitably the race develops into one for supremacy, no matter how restrained the first intentions of the self-defense advocates may have been.

The Senate passed the Vinson bill by an overwhelming vote of 65 to 18, and on the day of its passage Great Britain announced that she, too, would increase her fleet, adding £6,000,000 to her naval budget. France has already signified her intentions. Now comes Japan, speaking, it is true, only through one official, whose words may be only those of bluff. But the implication is there. The Vinson bill makes possible the largest peace-time program in the history of the United States. It calls for the construction of a large aircraft carrier, 65 destroyers, 30 submarines, 6 cruisers previously authorized, and 52 other war vessels soon to be laid down under PWA contracts. It calls for an expenditure by the Navy of approximately $500,000,000 a year, the largest appropriation since 1917-1919.

Billions of dollars will be spent arming the world. There is little active opposition to this, because people see in the measure increased employment and stimulation for several industries. Despite Senator Borah's fine speech they feel that preparedness at home is the only effective answer to armament propaganda abroad. Not only greed on the part of the arms makers, but poverty and fear on the part of the public, add fuel to be burned in the navy race.

An awakened public conscience and a statesmanlike approach to this question of arms from the viewpoint of international peace are sadly needed, else a misguided love of country will give impetus to the race, the course of which leads farther and farther away from continued accord between nations.

We're Sorry.

With extreme reluctance, yet determined to preserve truth regardless of embarrassment, we herewith take our own Women's Department to task for certain grave insinuations concerning that ancient American sport, lacrosse. Apparently without due consultation with The Post's Department of Sports, some one inserted on the Woman's Page in Wednesday's edition a picture of six girls playing lacrosse, thereby intimating that this strenuous game of the aborigines is now merely a feminine pastime. What is still worse, the cut-lines referred to lacrosse as a game which is spreading to this country from England.

Lacrosse—the real American game—is one of the most strenuous and brutal sports ever invented. It originated with the American Indians long before Columbus discovered America. To the Red Man it was known as "baggataway." But French settlers of Canada nicknamed it lacrosse because of the resemblance of the curved stick to a bishop's crozier.

The Iroquois, who adopted this sport as a training measure for war, would turn the happy hunting ground into bedlam if they knew that any one now considers "baggataway" a girls' game imported from England. The English borrowed the game from the French, who had learned it in America. British lacrosse was unknown until 1847, and then it was adopted only in modified form.

Without resorting to sack cloth and ashes, The Post wishes to disclaim any intention of casting reflections on this most ancient American sport, and to doff our hat to Baltimore and other cities that have really kept the lacrosse tradition alive.

We feel entirely justified in killing time now and then; that's what it's doing to us.

Too many criminals are working their way through jails.

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters over 250 words are subject to condensation.

A Rock From Rockville.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is there no sense of humor left in the great American press? Recent editorial gymnastics of the eminent Washington Post well might cause anvone who enjoys a good laugh—even when at the expense of exalted law and order—seriously to doubt it.

We have in mind The Post's editorial treatment of the latest and most sensational escapade of that stellar American desperado, Mr. John Dillinger. Wielding a wooden pistol, which he had assiduously carved during leisure hours, Mr. Dillinger last Saturday staged his own delivery from the lock-up at Crown Point, Ind., in a manner which might have done credit to the late George M. Cohan himself.

So last Monday, after the fever of the week-end chase had subsided somewhat, we relaxed to read what we expected to be a clever review of the proceedings in The Post's editorial department. The start sounded good * * * "At first glance one is inclined to laugh heartily at the Mack Sennett-like comedy, with its wooden pistol hysterical-sheriff interludes. * * *" Yes, the old Post had caught the vein of it, all right, we thought. We've been holding out high hopes for The Post these days—what, with its improved make-up, its intelligent treatment of world events, its "New Dealers" series, the libedal tone of its editorial columns, and all.

But, alas! We hoped too soon. We read on: "The incompetence of Indiana officials in dealing with a man charged with at least three murders and robberies involving nearly a quarter of a million dollars since last July is amazing." The rest of the commentary might as well have been written by a chamber of commerce press agent. The Post employe, perhaps to assuage his own conscience, just had to ring in that loss of a quarter of a million dollars.

Not that we are necessarily upholding Mr. Dillinger for his depredations. But certainly the man deserves no more unfavorable press notices than his rival financial operator on Wall street, who steals a hundred million in less daring though equally ruthless fashion.

ROBERT LEWIS.
Editor, Montgomery Independent.
Rockville, Md., March 6.

The Air Mail Contracts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those in authority should have given the air mail fliers at least 30 days' notice before canceling their contracts, and if they did not want to do that then they should have suspended air mail and passenger service for 30 days, which would have given the Army fliers ample time to learn the routes and to thoroughly equip their machines.

Some of our bravest and best young men have been unnecessarily sacrificed upon the altar of selfishness and greed. It is the writer's opinion that had the former heads of the Postoffice Department given all the air mail carriers an honest, square deal, there would have been no cause or reason for this investigation and no reason for the cancellation of the air mail contracts, and that these brave, fearless and gallant American fliers, whose untimely death we mourn, would be alive today.

One of the distinguished Senators of the committee recently seemed to try to give to the country the impression that the present Administration was responsible for their untimely death. Such, however, is not the case, and the intelligent people who know all the facts in the case know that it is not correct.

S. MAGRUDER SIMPSON.
Washington, Feb. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I predict that we and our children will always bow our heads in shame because of the present shameful treatment being accorded Col. Lindbergh. That man has proven his courage on every occasion. Yet he is being belittled by men who are brave and courageous in talking over the radio or in the Senate chamber, where they are safe and comfortable at the taxpayers' expense. Did Lindbergh ask the taxpayers to pay him when he flew the ocean alone, when everybody said it couldn't be done? Or, when flying over jungles, icebergs and "death valleys," was Lindbergh thinking how he could "gyp" the Government? The truth is, Lindbergh knew that cancellation of the mail contracts was a grievous wrong and a tragic blow to aviation, and he wasn't afraid to say so!

In a few years American commercial aviation grew from nothing to the best in the world. And the most extreme statement I have seen as to the cost involved is about $80,000,000, out of which thousands of employes were paid and, indirectly, hundreds of families were supported. So, at the most extreme figure, there was not a great deal of "graft" left, compared to the hundreds of millions thrown away without any result whatever in other directions.

The so-called "graft" was not graft at all, but money well spent by the Government in building up the greatest air mail and passenger system the world has ever seen. At least where the conquest of the air is concerned, let us follow Lindbergh and not ignorant politicians. I think we can trust his courage, judgment and honesty as far as we can trust the politicians in their sphere.

B. WILLIAM AUSTEN.
Washington, Feb. 27.

Delays in Snow Removal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Snow fell in the City of Washington on the 25th of February for the fourth or fifth time that month. On the 2d of March the streets were full of ice, snow and, consequently, slush.

The District officials took two full days to stir to action (the incentive came from the A. A. A. and the transit company), and the action that came was merely a feeble attempt directed at the point of least resistance. Why were men told to shovel snow away from the sides of the street, when gutters were clogged full of snow that made automobile parking impossible and pedestrians were challenging pneumonia when they tried to cross the street?

This is my first letter to condemn the District government. But it shows that government for the people, but not by the people, does not meet with the approval of the people or, at least, the people who have expressed their views on the slush problem to me.

G. W. U.
Washington, March 2.

Graft and Favoritism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President got "peeved" because of irregularities connected with both the air-mail service and the CWA and decided to abolish both, punishing the innocent with the guilty. But the Government is and always has been full of "graft" and "favoritism." It looks as if Emma Goldman is right when she says, "No government is good."

How about big business paying executives in salaries and bonuses, even in these times of depression, almost fabulous sums, for what? It looks as though there is no limit to some people's desires and abilities to "grab," even at the expense of human misery, and the risk of bringing the "deluge" upon themselves or their children, for such conditions can not go on—certainly not in these chaotic times.

ALVA S. JOHNSON.
Washington, Feb. 26.

Solving the Nation's Ills.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The inspiration to write you is attributable to one fact alone—that of the many million inhabitants of the United States, led by the professional writer who gets paid for so doing, down through those who patriotically contribute their views gratis, I am one of the few, who up to now, has not attempted to solve our National difficulties. I submit my plan as follows:

You recall that old story about the man from California "who made a large fortune by attending to his own business."

That's all, except that the word "honest" should be inserted before the word "business" and "honestly" should be added at the end of the quotation. GRANT SHEPHERD.
Washington, Feb. 23.

For Clean Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been instructed by the West End Citizens Association to transmit to you the following resolution, adopted at a recent meeting:

"Resolved, That this association indorse The Post's campaign against throwing of rubbish upon the streets and sidewalks.

Concerning Sweetly Polysyllabic Solons

What strange impulse is it that leads members of the Cabinet to resort to long words when they are speaking to college students? At Rollins College on Monday Attorney General Cummings spoke this polysyllabic mouthful:

> The genius of the New Deal lies in the application of science to government and contemplates the reapplication of the doctrines of cooperation. The Agricultural Adjustment Administration is a planned attack upon unbalanced production, the National Recovery Act upon unbalanced employment, and both upon our diminishing purchasing power.

Not to be behindhand Secretary Roper demonstrated that the Department of Commerce does not intend to allow a monopoly of big words to the Department of Justice. He said:

> It became evident to the President that the tragic implications of the pernicious downward-moving economic spiral required the redirection and rebuilding of our economic structure upon a new plan. . . . These 25 emergency units constitute the corrective process for economic and social recovery, while at the same time providing the fundamental bases of a preventive program which will forestall the recurrence of another catastrophe such as we have experienced during the past four years.

What the Attorney General apparently meant to say was that the New Deal is attempting by trial and error to find some way of getting all elements of the Nation's business to work together for their common good; that it is trying to curtail production, extend employment and give people more money to spend. Secretary Roper evidently meant that the President foresaw a complete smash unless business soon began to mend; that 25 measures have been adopted to put business back upon its feet and keep it there.

Plainly, our statesmen of practical bent are being influenced by the professors of the Brain Trust. An indispensable ally of the New Deal is the New Phraseology. The main idea of the New Phraseology is that the bitterest medicine can be made less distasteful by coating it with sugary words. As five grains of sugar contain more sweetening than one grain, so a word of five syllables is to be preferred to a word of one.

The Post Impressionist

"Purely Circumstantial"

Postoffice, Friday.

There is much to be said against circumstantial evidence, and most of that has been said lately apropos a recent Massachusetts example. Sometimes, however, circumstantial evidence works in an unexpected direction—even invented circumstantial evidence.

The instance we have in mind is another of those to which it is kinder to apply fictitious names—the theory of the chief investigator may have been wrong. So let's begin by saying that it all happened in Greyburg.

• • • •

In Greyburg one March morning the business man HilleryAllbrooke, clothed in pajamas and dressing gown, was found dead in his "den" on the ground floor of his home.

There had been a struggle; his head had been battered in by many blows. But all the household's remaining members declared they had heard no nocturnal disturbance.

Evidence pointed to a robbery motive; the den-desk was broken open. But the front door was secured by a deadlatch left "on" when the family went to bed, still "on" when they rose; no sign of forced entry.

The slayer seemed to have been no stranger to Allbrooke. Either host or guest had set out two champagne glasses; one of three bottles was missing from the pantry ice chest. But Allbrooke had retired early, saying nothing of an expected caller.

Allbrooke's children were too young, his mother-in-law too old, to have struck the blows. Various factors eliminated the pair of servants. Mrs. Allbrooke was at Cape May, convalescing, they said, from the grip, and her stay had been continuous.

The construction of the house was such that sleepers in it might not have heard the certain noise. The doorbell had lately gone silent—was to have been repaired the next day, but Allbrooke's bedroom was over the hall, and he might have been roused by a knock.

"Still an' all, I've a hunch a latchkey's the answer," said the detective in charge. "Who had latchkeys?"

Only husband and wife. Allbrooke's was upstairs. Mrs. Allbrooke's was at Cape May.

• • • •

Reporters poured in from larger cities. Jere Browne was one of these metropolitan arrivals, and he consulted Allbrooke's lawyer, Hammerstoke, who admitted that, the day after Mrs. Allbrooke's departure for the seashore, Allbrooke had told him of discovering compromising letters written the wife by Elmer Culton, neighbor and eminent citizen. The woman had confessed, asked only that Culton's name be "kept out of it" because of his innocent wife. It seemed—such things do happen once in a long while—that Mrs. Allbrooke genuinely admired Mrs. Culton, that Culton adored his wife, that Mrs. Culton adored him, and that Culton would sacrifice anything to preserve his wife's faith in him unimpaired.

"Well, did Allbrooke agree to keep Culton out of it?"

"Ah-er-no, as a matter of fact, he didn't. Those letters——"

"Had 'em at his office?"

"Motive!" said Jere.

• • • •

Jere had the police surgeon compare the remaining champagne bottles with the wounds; such a bottle could have been the weapon. Culton's car, like the Allbrookes' bell, had been undergoing repairs just before the murder, but timetables proved it possible for a railroad traveler to leave Greyburg at dawn, have a half hour in Cape May, be back in Greyburg by midnight—and Culton had been absent, without excuse, from business on the day preceding the killing. Near Greyburg, a river deep and full of rapids is crossed by a bridge which had also been under repair; Jere found that, on the morning following Allbrooke's death, a bridge workman who knew Culton had seen his then repaired car crossing this bridge; its occupant "threw something in the water."

• • • •

Culton, desperate for those letters, could have secured her key from otherwise uninvolved Mrs. Albrooke; entered the house; been surprised by its owner; asked a hearing; been offered a drink; been angered by a refusal of the letters; killed his man; mailed the key back to Cape May.

Anyhow, that was Jere's case. It convinced him. It seemed to convince the police. But it was no earthly use before any jury in any court.

"What you going to do with Culton?" asked Jere.

"Absolutely nothing," the police answered.

• • • •

That was late one afternoon. Jere went to Culton's office, stated his evidence—was laughed at. Then he did something we don't defend; he said:

"Yeh, but what about this messenger boy?"

"What messenger boy?"

"Don't pretend you don't know! The messenger boy the flatfeet picked up and 've got down at headquarters—says he was delivering a late wire on your street that night and saw you leave your house and let yourself into the Allbrookes'."

Spoken, in a magnificent effort to secure belief, from the summit of Jere's histrionic ability, which was considerable! Culton went white, slammed shut his desk, but shouted: "Get out of here! That boy lies."

Jere, getting out, nevertheless doggedly retorted: "Before your supper's over, you'll have a chance to tell the cops he lies!"

• • • •

Then Culton went home. He didn't, however, see the police before his supper. He didn't eat any supper. He took his wife for an automobile ride — the wife who musn't, at any cost, ever know any evil about him. Drove her, at top speed, on to that bridge across the rapids, from which he had lately been seen to "throw something." Drove car and wife and self through the bridge rail and into the river.

Carlisle Bargeron

THERE is one thing from which there is no escaping and that is, Crack-Down Johnson has carved himself a very prominent niche in our scheme of things. When you consider all of the people in this country who crave publicity and then realize that Crack-Down has got to the point where his speeches are carried in full by the metropolitan papers you get an idea of just how much a niche he has carved.

BARGERON.

I know of no Senator who rates this high in the crowded pages of a newspaper. Indeed, the only other man is the President. The leading papers invariably carry his utterances in full, even though they concern only the dedication of a monument. There is always, of course, the story of the occasion in which quotations from the speech are freely thrown in. Then so important are his words considered that on the inside of the paper the full text is printed.

• • • •

The theory is that some one word or sentence may throw light on a policy. Anyway, every word is put there for the country's education, edification or delight, as the case may be. So it has come to be with the utterances of Crack-Down. They rate, in the newspaper acid test, along with those of the President.

It is in this vein that two statements of his speech of Wednesday night intrigue me, two statements that in the press of others in his speech were not conveyed in the headlines. The first was near the end:

"The essence of the New Deal is public knowledge of methods and results. A man may be entitled to a $100,000 salary from a corporation • • •. But he ought not to object to having everybody know about it. That is the only bitter pill to swallow. As far as I am concerned, I am willing to swallow it."

What I can't understand in view of this philosophy is why he was so annoyed when the relatively modest salary of his secretary, Miss Robinson, was published.

• • • •

The other statement that attracted my attention was:

"We have got to plan our way out of this mudhole and that must be done by hard-boiled business men and not by academicians."

Now if I know anything, that was a dig at the professors. And it is my conviction that it was aimed particularly at the head of the professoriat here, Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell. More important, it reveals the clash, the conflict of interests, between the two widely divergent schools of thought in the Administration. It might, with a somewhat loose use of the terms, be called the conflict between Fascism and Communism with Crack-Down at the head of the former and the professor the head of the latter.

• • • •

It is a fact that there is no love lost between these two groups, or any between Crack-Down and the professor. Down around the Agricultural Administration no effort is made to disguise the contempt in which the NRA is held and the converse is true at the NRA. It is apparent that Crack-Down couldn't resist letting this feeling creep into his speech. It could have easily been left out and not destroyed the context in the least.

What tickles me, though, is the contemplation of what is going to happen when Crack-Down finds out the author of the "New Dealers." I do not know myself, but I have a very definite idea. The book has been selected as the book of the month by the Literary Guild and the description of the author in its advance notice fits only one man. When Crack-Down learns who it is and his associations—I don't mean to suggest it is the professor himself—there is not the slightest doubt that he will explode.

Wouldn't it be funny if it developed that the opportunity for the professor and his planned staters to show how efficient a planned State can be, should come with their rapid and efficient clearing up of Crack-Down's debris. He'll scatter all over the place when he learns, you watch and see.

CARTER GLASS, Senator from Virginia. Born 76 years ago in Lynchburg. Forced to leave school at 14, the Civil War having impoverished his family, he apprenticed himself to a printer. With $60 of his own and what he could borrow he bought the Lynchburg News. Famous for his trenchant pen, he won success. Now owns Lynchburg's morning and evening papers. From the Virginia Senate he came to Congress in 1902. Credit is chiefly owed to him for the Federal reserve act. Secretary of the Treasury toward the end of the Wilson regime, but refused that post under the New Deal. Known to boyhood friends as "Pluck Glass." His personal and political courage, profound sense of honor and the integrity of his public and private life put him in the first ranks of American statesmen.

She-Wolf Has Equal Right to Hunt

By Robert Quillen

Many earnest citizens, eager to solve the Nation's problems, have suggested that women return to the kitchen or the front porch and leave the jobs to men.

They are right in believing that millions of men now idle would be able to find jobs if the great war had not taught women the joy of independence and the fun of earning money.

And they are correct in asserting that the pre-war plan more nearly conformed to the plan of nature.

Nature ordained that man should go forth to battle the world for a living while his woman remained at home to nurse the children. Each is better qualified than the other to handle the ordained job.

When women, as a class, claim the privilege of doing "man's work," they do not in fact assume man's whole duty.

For, despite all exceptions, the majority of men who have jobs support a family, while the majority of feminine workers are engaged, first of all, in supporting themselves. In one instance the man is paid enough to support five people; in the other the girl, theoretically having none to support but herself, is paid something less than one needs.

But when that is said, the argument has no other support.

It was natural man's duty to set forth and kill the family meat; but who can say that the natural girl had no right to set forth by herself and run down a deer?

Sex has nothing to do with human rights or justice.

It sounds reasonable to say that a woman should be denied a job if she doesn't need it; but you must add, in the name of fairness, that no man should be allowed a job if he doesn't need it.

That disposes of Mellons, Fords and Morgans.

Or if girls have no right to work because they have no families to support, then every young male who has no dependents must likewise be doomed to idleness.

The Nordic world has conceded that women are people. And when serfs become people, they never again are content with a master's hand-out.

The Nightingale.

There is an old fable to the effect that while a bird was singing it occurred to a musician to attempt to rival his efforts. I have never tried this except with parrots, where the effect has sometimes been so ludicrous as to be side-splitting. In the original story, however, it was not a farce; it was a tragedy. The bird sang and the man replied with his lute, or whatever it was. Then the bird became more elaborate and the man even more so. Finally, as the instrument had more range and variety than the comparatively limited voice of the bird, the latter, in one final desperate effort, broke his heart and dropped dead.

The nightingale's mysterious nocturnal melodies, impressive and passionate, have inspired English poets through many centuries. In England in the month of May I have heard the nightingale singing at midnight, and while the throbbing music is beautiful, I confess its chief beauty to me is in the memories it awakens in the immortal poets who have done it homage. The poets have far excelled the bird in the word music the bird has inspired.

Milton's sonnet beginning:

"O Nightingale that on yon bloomy spray"

Wordsworth's tribute to its "fiery heart;"

Matthew Arnold's "Listen, Eugenia—how thick the bursts come crowding through the leaves."

But above all is the "Ode to the Nnightingale," written by Keats, and an interesting question in poetic interpretation comes in the first four lines of the following stanza: Does "the voice" referred to mean, poetically speaking, of course, that Keats is hearing not the same kind of bird, but the very same bird whose voice was heard in previous centuries by emperor and clown?

Thou wast not born for death, immortal bird!
No hungry generations tread thee down;
The voice I hear this passing night was heard
In ancient days by emperor and clown.
Perhaps the self-same song that found a path
Through the sad heart of Ruth, when, sick for home,
She stood in tears among the alien corn;
The same that ofttimes hath
Charmed magic casements, opening on the foam
Of perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn.

Kipling, in his story "Wireless," calls those last two lines pure magic; and indeed they are. Sheer inspiration. How thrilled the poet must have been when they emerged from his mind.

The nightingale, like every great artist, needs an audience.

Danville Druggist Wins Rehearing of Rum Case

Danville, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—R. Haskins McFall, prominent druggist, has secured a reopening of the charge that he sold prescription liquor without a prescription, and his case will be heard tomorrow.

He was tried Tuesday and Magistrate Carter fined him $50 and sentenced him to serve 90 days. Later Mr. McFall said he thought he was summoned to court as a witness and not as a defendant and asked that the case be reopened.

Peery Makes Blot Signing Liquor Bill

Richmond, March 8 (U.P.).—Virginia's new liquor-control act went into the archives today with a huge ink blot on it, caused when Gov. George W. Peery lost control of his pen as a photographer's flashlight exploded at the moment of signing.

Army Day Observance Set by Department

Cooperation in the celebration of Army Day, April 6, in commemoration of the entrance of the United States into the World War, was ordered yesterday by the War Department.

The celebration, originally sponsored by the Military Order of the World War, will be conducted by civilian patriotic organizations this year.

No End of Books

Theodore Hall

By Theodore Hall.

I HAPPENED to be sitting one day with a certain author while he read through a sheaf of clippings from his publisher. They were reviews of his latest novel, so there was no use in my continuing the conversation. I just sat and watched his eyebrows come down over his glasses and the back of his neck swell out.

When he had finished the lot he put them carefully, but with shaking hand, back in the envelope—he is a man who saves everything from Saturday Evening Posts to paper clips. Then he turned to me. "Oh, yeah?" he positively snarled. "Well, what kind of a novel would a book-reviewer write?"

At the time I wished I had balm for my friend's soul, and I have often wished that since. But not until today has that rarity, a book-reviewer's novel, come to hand. It goes off to my friend by the next mail. I can already see stretching over his face a wide and comprehending grin.

Kenneth Horan is the literary editor of the Chicago Journal of Commerce. She (yes, really,) went to Vassar, married an American surgeon in Vienna, and once worked for Floyd Dell on the Chicago Evening Post. Her books include "101 Games" and "101 Rules of Etiquette," both for children, and a previous novel, "The Longest Night." The characters in that novel have grown 20 years older, and reappear here in "It's Later Than You Think" (Ballou, $2).

KENNETH HORAN.

Briefly, the situation is this. Kaye Byrne had once loved the dashing young politician, David Parmenter, but she married cool and Bostonian Austin Nash instead. David had gone off in a huff and married Lottie. All this is before the present novel opens. Now we find Kaye a world-famous pianist with the concert name of Brynetti. David is none less than the Governor of Michigan, but still, at 50, desirous of Kaye.

Kaye has a son, Donald, and David an unacknowledged daughter, Paula. So, of course, in the close-knit and expensive society of Concordia, what would be more natural? But for reasons about which the characters go around whispering to each other, the match is opposed. Then the bootleggers, whom the governor is trying to run out of town, take a shot at him. Kaye goes off on tour. A happy ending for the younger couple, I very strongly suspect, is just around the corner.

• • • •

What really impressed me was the number of learned allusions which go galloping through these pages. They start out modestly enough. Only Dr. Johnson, Charlotte Bronte, Dickens, and Scott in the first six leaves. But later, for example, Kaye is talking to David, and in two consecutive sentences she drags in Hugo, De Maupassant, Villon, Anatole France, Stendhal, Shakespeare, Milton, Robert Bridges, Goethe, Heine, and Thomas Mann. David collects Lincolnia, and the authors are duly listed. Kaye was thinking "of the difference between Florentine and Venetian painting as a parallel between herself and Donald."

One character, Rita, is "like an exquisite courtesan of the First Empire." Her husband, Grandpa Fence, resembles "a Spanish don." Uncle Homer has a "Homeric" brow. And so on without rest—musical compositions, race horses, European foods, prose, drama and poetry. After such a sweeping up of cultural tags, I went so far as to expect that prime old favorite which lends such tone to a book: "I have loved thee, Cynara, after my fashion." I found it.

But my particular awe was reserved for the heroine of the subplot, Paula. She had "studied Russian one summer when she was in Moscow, had learned all about Pushkin and Tolstoy and Gogol and all the Soviets." She had lived in Rome and spoke Italian fluently. And she had "walked across France, traveled the Himalayas in a plane, dug for antiquities in Egypt, and sailed to the Arctic." I may be impressionable, but I think that was doing pretty well for a minx of 18.

• • • •

One more item, and I wrap up this tasty morsel for the mail. At the bottom of page 31 is a passage which Mr. Will Cuppy, authority on fishlore, might examine with profit.

"At the time of America's greatest prosperity, he (David) had taken advantage of every opportunity, and had embraced the material things of life as avidly as a handsome but somewhat speckled carp will embrace a particularly luscious piece of sea-weed."

When carp go around "embracing" sea-weed——! But this is enough. I can imagine that widening and revengeful grin on my friend's face.

In the Margin.

Having finished his new book, an introduction to the Jews entitled "How Odd of God," Lewis Browne has left the proof reading to his publishers and gone off to the South Seas to forget all about the "Jewish problem."

"I want to go some place," he wrote the Macmillian Co., "where no one wears brown shirts, or silver ones, or indeed any shirts at all."

He expects to spend several weeks cruising in Polynesia, and will return in time to keep a series of lecture engagements in the East in April. "How Odd of God" will be published by Macmillan late in March.

From Harry Craddock, author of "The Savoy Cocktail Book" and head mixer at the Savoy Hotel in London, comes the following dissertation on his favorite subject to Simon & Schuster:

"I have never served or mixed anything else but cocktails in my life. I believe anybody should drink cocktails for their health's sake. Don't always believe that a man knows what is good for him when he says he doesn't like cocktails. A cocktail is the most delicate and most perfect of all bibibles. It does not come to you with the vulgar report of champagne, or the gurgle of whisky, nor the flute-like noises of sherry bottles. The tossing to and fro is like the music of Eskimo babies at play. Men talk, quarrel, fight, and even bore each other over other drinks. Whoever heard of men quarreling over a cocktail? Only friends drink cocktails together.

Over 25,000 copies of Thomas Mann's new novel, "Joseph and His Brothers," have so far been sold in Germany. Translations of it have already been arranged in Italian, Danish, Polish, Dutch and English. In this country the book will be published by Alfred A. Knopf late in the spring. Mr. Knopf has just sent the manuscript to the printer, and Elmer Adler, noted typographer and designer, is at work preparing the jacket. "Joseph and His Brothers" is Thomas Mann's first novel since 1924, which was the year of publication of "The Magic Mountain."

Leniency Urged For Gas Depot Code Violators

First Offenders Will Get Chance to Correct Practices.

A lenient policy toward local gas station operators who have been violating provisions of the petroleum code was decided on yesterday by the District petroleum committee.

Instead of submitting cases of first offenders to the Department of Justice, the committee has decided to give them an opportunity to correct violations. Repetition of the offense, however, will mean immediate prosecution, it was announced.

Investigation has revealed many oil dealers are not familiar with the code provisions, due, it is believed, to the involved wording and large number of rules.

To make provisions clearer, the committee has decided to furnish dealers with a simplified set of rules for posting. To eliminate unfair competition, local dealers and oil company employes are urged to report to the committee's offices in the Tower Building violations which come to their attention.

Large oil companies, it was reported, are threatening to cut off deliveries and cancel contracts with habitual code violators.

Rockbridge County Divided for Corn Cut

Lexington, Va., March 8 (Spl.). Rockbridge County has been divided into five corn-hog districts, as follows: (1) Southern section, South River, (2) Northern section, South River; (3) Walkers Creek, (4) Buffalo-Kerrs Creek, (5) Natural Bridge-central.

At meetings this week, one representative will be elected from each district to the board of directors of the Rockbridge Corn-Hog Control Association.

School Bill Opposed By Covington Council

Covington, Va., March 8 (Spl.). A resolution expressing the town's opposition to the bill which would pool the properties and obligations of the county schools has been forwarded by the council to State Senator George W. Layman, sponsor of the bill.

The Alleghany County supervisors indorsed the bill at a joint meeting with the county school board.

Clear Spring Still Argues on Water

Board Quits, Leaving It Up to Council.

Clear Spring, Md., March 8 (Spl.). Clear Spring's water board has resigned and the question of what kind of a new water system will be constructed here is now in the hands of the Town Council.

The PWA approved a loan and grant of $23,000 for the new system. One faction favored a standpipe and another a reservoir built at a large spring in the mountains, which will be the source of the new supply.

Burgess' David Ankeney said application will be made to the State Health Department for approval of a reservoir. Harry Angle, Hagerstown contractor, had the lowest bid for constructing the pipe line.

Three Jefferson Estates Appraised

Harry Drummond Property Valued at $22,412.

Charles Town, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Estates of T. Lee Shirley, John J. Dixon and Harry Drummond have been appraised at $22,412.50, $7 038 and $698.

Mr. Shirley's estate consisted of $16,910 in personal property, $502.50 in tangible property and real property estimated at $5,000. Mr. Dixon's property comprised real estate here and in Ransom. A house at Gibsontown and $336.18 in personal property made up Drummond's estate.

A farm near Wheatland, part of the estate of Frank H. McAtee, was valued at $7,500.

New Aluminum Mirror Helps Photograph Stars

Pasadena, Calif., March 8 (AP). Hot, blue stars photograph 25 per cent brighter in telescope mirrors surfaced with a new vaporized aluminum coating, Dr. Edison Pettit, astronomer of the Carnegie Institution's Mount Wilson Observatory, said today.

The process whereby a mirror is placed in a vacuum and aluminum reduced to vapor and allowed to settle on the mirror's surface like dew was developed by Dr. John Strong at the California Institute of Technology here. Previously silver had been used.

Killer of Wife Will Get Danville Hearing Today

Danville, Va., March 8 (Spl.). John William Boaz, 40, a sawmill hand, will get a preliminary hearing here tomorrow before Magistrate Charles R. Warren on a charge of killing his wife, Mrs. Mary Boaz, 22.

Boaz has been unable to furnish $2,500 bond, but has retained a Danville attorney. Commonwealth's Attorney Joseph Whitehead said the defense may ask for a continuance.

Following her discussion, Miss Audrey Freeman gave a violin selection.

Covington Reduces Town Auto Licenses

Covington, Va., March 8 (Spl.). The cost of town automobile licenses has been reduced between 40 and 60 per cent by the town council, on recommendation of the city manager.

All passenger cars will be licensed at $3. Trucks will be charged $4 to $8.50, depending on tonnage.

'Manchuria' to Be Topic Of Traveler's Lecture

Owen Lattimore, world traveler and lecturer, will speak on "Manchuria, Cradle of Conflict," before the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall tonight at 8:15.

Mr. Lattimore spent many years in Manchuria, making his home among the people in pioneer settlements and in modern cities. He will illustrate his talk with motion pictures and stereopticon slides.

Retired Lands Would Pay Way In Few Years

Sub-Marginal Areas Are Potential Sources of New Wealth.

[Editor's note: This is the third of a series by the Associated Press on the plans of the Federal Government to use land which is to be bought and retired from agricultural production.]

Government land experts trying to solve the riddle of putting submarginal farm land to practical use center their attention on three areas. They are the Appalachian and Piedmont plateau from Maryland south and west into Mississippi, the cutover timber area bordering the Great Lakes and the western edge of the Great Plains.

However, in studying a representative sub-marginal county, instead of examining one of these admittedly poor areas they went into a rich agricultural State and bared some eye-opening facts. Of the 319,360 acres of land in the county studied, 228,480 acres are so badly eroded and the soil so poor that it is of little agricultural value. The population has declined from 15,620 in 1900 to 11,150 in 1930.

Forests Are Depleted.

Forests have been depleted, game almost exterminated, many farms abandoned, tax units bankrupt and 80 per cent of the people have asked or received relief. Only 90,880 acres is regarded as productive farm land.

This area, the land-planning group declares, "presents all the reasons for a planned interference with the destructive wastage which has prevailed under individual exploitation of soil and natural resources. • • • This county represents a splendid opportunity for rehabilitation of rural living conditions and the restoration and preservation of the natural resources."

The planners propose to buy the entire 228,480 submarginal acres, persuade the farm families on it to move four subsistence homesteads on the tract itself or to a small community where convenient churches and schools could be built; abandon the present farms, roads, churches and schools; put the former farmers at work restoring the area, establish a few small industries and guarantee the families higher returns than they have been making from farming.

Work Projects Planned.

Sufficient work could be provided in restoring the areas to keep many of the adult men working for many years, they maintain.

In addition, pipe timber now on the area could be utilized in meeting wood needs of the Midwest. Game and fur animals could be produced in sufficient numbers to make the tract show a profit above the cost of restoration and caretaking.

The remaining 90,880 acres in the county would be continued as agricultural land with "a more balanced, independent agricultural development."

The committee added that "recreation and eventual soil restoration, together with flood control elements constitute an overwhelming surplus of benefits to support the above program."

Budget Body Votes $3,750 for Job Fund

First Vocational Estimate Had Been Reduced.

The Budget Bureau yesterday submitted a supplemental estimate for $3,750 for vocational rehabilitation in the District to make amends for a cut in the original 1935 estimates based on an Executive order.

The Budget director explained the Executive order has since been withdrawn. The 1935 District estimates carry $11,250 additionally for this rehabilitation work.

Traffic Expert Group to Speed Trolleys Urged

P. U. C. Suggests War on Driving on Tracks, Double Parking.

The formation of a committee of traffic experts of the Public Utilities Commission and the Police Department to plan action to remove impediments to the proper movement of street cars was suggested yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The Commissioner made the suggestion after consideration of a request from the Utilities Commission that a drive be made against automobiles which use street car tracks in the downtown areas and against double parking. To these factors the Utilities Commission attributes many complaints against poor schedules.

A recommendation was submitted to the District Commissioners by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to change the route of Washington Rapid Transit Co. buses in the downtown areas. At present, the buses proceed south on Thirteenth street to Pennsylvania avenue and then east on Eighth street, where a "U" turn is made. Van Duzer suggests that the buses turn left at Thirteenth an dE streets and go east on E to eighth street and then to Pennsylvania avenue. He suggests that parking be prohibited on the south side of E street, from Thirteenth to Eighth streets. He declared the "U" turn at Eighth street and Pennsylvania avenue is a traffic hazard.

Trinity Wins Over George Washington

Trinity College women's debating team defeated George Washington University Wednesday, the subject of which was whether or not the essential features of the NRA should be adopted permanently.

Trinity, in the affirmative, was represented by Madeleine V. Dunn and Myrtle Black, with Helen Touhy as alternate. The Colonial team was composed of Maxine Farley and Mary Jane Salmon. Judges were Martin O'Donoughue, Austin Canfield and Daniel Guinan.

A Well-Bid Grand Slam.

In the Pair event of the recent Grand National Championship, played at the Hotel Pierre in New York City, a lay-down Grand Slam hand was dealt which was bid to seven-odd at only one table. I was not able to ascertain how the Grand Slam was reached at this particular table, but a close inspection of the two hands shows that the path of North and South should be made fairly smooth by the various conventions which the Approach-Forcing System provides.

South, dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

3♣(2)	4♠(3)
5NT(4)	7♠(5)
Pass

1—No need to crowd the bidding with a call of three or four spades. The danger of a pass to one spade is negligible.

2—A Forcing Takeout in a second suit which is not, strictly speaking, biddable. This call enables South to start painting an accurate picture of his hand.

3—The Jump Trump Rebid, showing a solid or near-solid suit of at least six cards in length. If the suit is not absolutely solid, something additional should be held to justify making the bid.

4—The conventional five-notrump bid, showing three Aces and the King of a bid suit. South, with his very fine distribution and his possession of the valuable key cards, is justified in forcing at least a Small Slam contract after his partner's four-spade bid. At the same time he paints a reasonably clear picture of his hand.

5—South's previous bids have clarified the situation for North and enable him to bid a Grand Slam after but a moment's hesitation. He knows his partner has the remaining three Aces and the King of diamonds. Moreover, to justify the earlier Forcing bid in clubs and the subsequent five notrump bid, South must have some sort of spade fit, and also some intermediates in one of his own suits to enable North to get discards if necessary. In other words, the Dummy hand, if the hand is played at spades, must contain either ruffing power or additional honors in diamonds or clubs. North, therefore, with the Queen of the suit his partner bid first and a solid, rather than near-solid, suit, knows that he can contract for the Grand Slam with a reasonable degree of certainty that it will be fulfilled. It looks to him as though he will make either six spade tricks, five diamond tricks and two Aces or, instead of five diamond tricks, an extra trick or two in clubs or a possible ruff in Dummy.

A glance at the two hands will show that the hand is a laydown for about sixteen tricks if they could be used. Yet, strangely enough, only one pair bid the Grand Slam.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If South opens the bidding with four hearts, what response should North make?

South, Dealer.

District Boy Scouts Prepare Gala Arbor Day Celebration

Three From Each Troop Will Participate in Tree Planting.

Coming Events.

Tomorrow, 2 p. m., "Elements of Cubbing" course; 7:30 p. m., courts of honor and review at Thomson School.

Monday, 7:30 p. m., elements of Scoutmastership.

Wednesday, 7:15 p. m., principles of Scoutmastership.

March 17, 7:30 p. m., courts of honor and review, Takoma Park Presbyterian Church; 7 p. m., council-wide first aid contest.

March 24, 7:30 p. m., courts of honor and review, Powell Junior High School; 7:30 p. m., courts of honor and review, Hyattsville, County Building.

Plan for Arbor Day.

A gala celebration of Arbor Day, the largest ever held in Washington, is being planned for Saturday, April 21, when about 100 additional trees will be planted in the National Historic Grove in Anacostia Park. Scout troops are planning to participate on a large scale.

Scouts are now selecting the States they wish to be represented in the Arbor Day tree planting. Two historic trees from each State are to be planted and three scouts from each troop will be needed for this ceremony. Therefore, a scout having a State he wishes to represent may register immediately at scout headquarters before some other troops gets it.

Clothes Solicitation Goes On.

Scout troops and patrols and individual Scouts all are busy these days gathering any kind of equipment that can be used in the rebuilding of homes. They are looking particularly for household furnishings, bedding and clothing and already a considerable quantity of clothing has been collected and distributed.

This good turn, which will continue through March, is the response of Scouts in the District to President Roosevelt's request to the Scouts of the Nation February 10 to perform this service.

The material is being collected, renovated, fumigated and distributed by the Clothes Conservation Committee of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Cub leaders will gather at the training center, 1018 Vermont avenue, on the next four Saturday afternoons for conferences on cubbing programs and methods.

The course is open to cubmasters, assistant cubmasters, pack committeemen, fathers of cubs and experienced Scouts who want to learn more about leadership methods.

Topics will include the organization of the den and pack problems for cubbing, the duties of den chiefs and games, hobbies crafts and records.

Ennis Heads Press Club.

Howard Ennis, of Troop 79, was elected president of the Boy Scout Press Club at a meeting March 3. Other officers are Howard Jeans, Troop 15, secretary; Martin Rabineau, Troop 73, librarian; James Seiler, Troop 72, exchange manager; William Darling, Troop 79, artist, and William Anderson, Troop 79, scrapbook manager.

The club will meet March 17 at 10 a. m. at Boy Scout headquarters. The editors and staff members of all troop papers are invited.

Good Turn for Straphanger.

An observer writes of the following incident, which took place last week:

"I was going out into the suburbs on a street car. At one of the stops a group of children got on. The car was filled, so that the children were compelled to stand in the aisle, supporting themselves by the well-known straps. One little tot was too short to reach a strap and was being bounced around considerably. A scout, in uniform, standing nearby, removed his neckerchief, looped it through a strap, knotted the ends with a square knot (I was near enough to observe this) and the additional length of neckerchief then served as a strap for the little one. I thought the deed very thoughtful and scoutlike.

Then the question came to me, what will the Scout do—should he leave the car first—leave the neckerchief or take it and return the little one to her bouncing? It was my privilege to see the question answered. The Scout was the first to leave the car and just before he moved down the aisle toward the door I heard him say to another boy, "Bill, you're going to the end of the line, bring my neckerchief to school tomorrow, will you?"

New Commissioner Named.

Two new district Scout commissioners were named by the executive board at a meeting on Tuesday noon. They are Harry L. Watson, district commissioner of the fourth division to succeed E. M. Perkins, and Ralph Bartley to take over the newly created district formerly the north half of the third division. Mr. Perkins' resignation, made necessary by business duties, is regretted in scouting.

Camp Set Easter Week.

Patrol leaders are offered an opportunity to spend three days of Easter week at Camp Roosevelt. A limit of 30 leaders has been set. Preference will be given to the first 30 registering. To spread the privilege to the greatest number of troops, not more than two should register from each troop. The cost will not exceed $3. The time has been tentatively set from Thursday morning until Saturday afternoon, April 5 to 7.

Spring Camporee Schedule.

Plans for the spring camporees have been worked out along lines similar to those of last year. There also will probably be a regional jamboree this year with participation by the patrols making the standard rating. Several divisions have already set dates for the latter part of April and the early part of May.

Exhibit by Cub Leaders.

District cub leaders recently determined to hold an exhibit of collections, handicrafts and models, April 14.

First Aid Finals March 17.

First aid teams from each division selected by divisional contest will meet for the final event at 7 p. m. Saturday, March 17, at the Thomson School, Twelfth and L streets.

Better Appearance Awards.

Anticipating the great National Scout jamboree to be held in Washington in the summer of 1935, when the District of Columbia Council will be hosts to Scouts from every section of the United States, the National as well as the local council will recognize by certification those troops in the District showing improvement in uniform.

Speedy Trial Sought In Mae West Robbery

Tallahassee, Fla., March 8 (AP). If California sets the trial of Harry Voiler within 30 days, the man charged with robbery of Mae West, the actress, will be returned to that State for trial.

Gov. Sholtz, holding a hearing today on Voiler's extradition, telegraphed Buron Fitts, district attorney at Los Angeles, asking if trial would be held within 30 days if Voiler is returned there.

Note Threatens Idle Carpenter in Baltimore

Baltimore, March 8 (AP).—Postal authorities here today were investigating a note received by a jobless carpenter demanding $3,000 or "you know what will happen to you."

The threatened man, Frank Chiofelo, 33, said he had been out of work for four years. Police were stationed at his home.

Connecticut Court Upholds Wingo Award

The Superior Court of Connecticut, in session at Bridgeport, yesterday upheld a $20,000 damage verdict in favor of Otis T. Wingo, jr., son of former Representative Effiegene Wingo, of Arkansas, against the Connecticut Co., operators of trolley cars, according to a dispatch.

Wingo, on leave from his position with the Riggs National Bank, was injured critically December 18, 1932, on the Boston Post road, when his automobile collided with a street car belonging to the company. He was confined to a hospital for six months, and has not yet fully recovered.

Business Men Urged To Turn to Religion

Business is on the up-grade, so business men should devote much attention to their spiritual lives, the Rev. Homer A. Rodeheaver, evangelist holding a series of revivals at the United Brethren Church, told the Washington Kiwanis Club yesterday.

Urging club members to adopt a special code for their enterprises, Dr. Rodeheaver sang a series of songs.

Fetes Given In Farewell To Diplomat

Dr. Padilla-Nervo and Wife Guests at Many Functions.

New Commercial Attache of Mexican Embassy Entertained.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Almost daily Capital society attends parties given by those who are leaving Washington, and always the pleasure of these teas, luncheons and dinners is tinged with regret for those who must remain here and see their friends depart.

The newly appointed Mexican Minister to El Salvador and Costa Rica, Senor Dr. Don Luis Padilla-Nervo, who has been serving as Counselor of the Mexican Embassy here, and his young wife will leave late this month for Central America. Many parties are being given in their honor.

That which was planned last evening by the Third Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, Senor Garduno Pombo, at the Shoreham, in honor of the Ambassador, Senor Don Fernando Gonzales Roa, and his nieces, Senorita Dolores Chico Alatorre and Senorita Sara Chico Alatorre, who arrived in the Capital last week to visit the Ambassador, was canceled at the eleventh hour because of the illness of the Ambassador.

Party Will Be Soon.

It will take place in the near future, probably before Senor and Senora de Padilla-Nervo leave, as they were to have been among the guests last evening. Among the other invited guests were Senorita Beatriz Perez Verdia, who is a guest of the Ambassador's nieces and her brother, Dr. Enrique Perez Verdia.

Yesterday afternoon Senora de Padilla-Nervo entertained at tea in her apartment at Woodley Park Towers in honor of the new Commercial Attache of the Embassy and Senora de Gaxiola, when Senora de Vasquez-Tresserap resided at the tea table. Senora de Padilla-Nervo will entertain again at tea on Sunday afternoon for the Ambassador and his nieces when Mrs. F. W. A. Notz will pour tea.

Among those who have entertained at farewell parties for Senor and Senora de Padilla-Nervo are the Millitary Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Prieto, and Dr. J. C. Merriam, head of the Carnegie Institute and Mrs. Merriam, who were recently hosts at dinner parties, and Senora de Baron, wife of the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, who gave a luncheon for Senora de Padilla-Nervo.

Mexican Ambassador Returns.

The Ambassador of Mexico has recently returned to the Capital after an absence of several months during which time Senor Padilla-Nervo was Charge d'Affaires of Mexico. The Ambassador spent some time in Europe where he attended the London Economic Conference and later went to Mexico City.

The Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar, dean of the Diplomatic Corps, who, rumor says, is soon to retire from the service, was the guest in whose honor the Ambassador of Poland, Mr. Stanislaw Patek, entertained last evening in the embassy on Sixteenth street.

The other guests were the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito, the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Szymczak, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Hayne Ellis, Col. and Mrs. John Burnett, Mrs. Harry Baxter, daughter of the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern; the chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department, Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck; Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick William Wile, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Essary, Mme. Sokolowska, wife of the Counselor of the Polish Embassy; the Secretary of Embassy and Mme. Moscicka, and the Attache of the Embassy, Mr. Edward Weintal.

Edsons Honored At Dinner Party

Mr. Moneyway Entertains at University Club.

Mr. Lewis Lofton Moneyway was host at a dinner party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Elie Edson at the University Club last evening, with Mrs. Randolph Coyle as hostess. The other guests were the President of the club and Mrs. T. Howard Duckett, Col. Randolph Coyle, Mrs. Mary C. Payton, Mr. Edward de S. Melcher, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert L. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Norman T. Anderson, Miss Rose Lazier, Mr. Andrew D. Sharpe and the secretary of the club, Mr. Edward Stafford.

Mr. Edson a writer and lecturer, later addressed the club on "Intimate Memories of the Theater and Some of Its Celebrities."

Among others who entertained at dinner parties were Mr. Alvin C Birdsall, Mr. John F. Clagett, Mr. H. Randolph Barbee, Mr. Allen M. Smythe and Mr. James William Sommerville. Hosts at the lecture included Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Jacobson, Mr. William R. Vallance, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley P. Smith, Mr. Albert E. Stephan, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Stone, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Kolbe, of Boston; Mr. Thomas D. Faulkner, of Tulsa, Okla., and Mrs. Philip D. Faulkner, of New York.

Mr. Paul Lutes And Mrs. Allen Wed at Elkton

Couple to Return Sunday to Capital Following New York Trip.

Mrs. Celeste Martin Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester William Martin, of Chicago, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., and Mr. Paul Harold von Beck Lutes, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry William Lutes, of Alliance, Ohio, were married yesterday.

The bride, who has spent the past six or eight months in Chicago with her parents, came to Washington yesterday and left later with Mr. Lutes and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hendrik Himes, of this city, to motor to Elkton, Md., where the ceremony was performed with only Mr. and Mrs. Himes present.

The couple left immediately for New York, where they will remain until Sunday at the St. Regis. On their return they will be at home at 1322 Eighteenth street.

The bride, who spent last summer in Washington with her parents, chose a Hattie Carnegie model for her wedding gown. It was of gray wool with a tunic of gray and blue plaid. She wore a gray hat and a gray kid-skin coat. Her bouquet was of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Lutes, who is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thomas Pool, of Baltimore, and of Mr. and Mrs. Chester William Martin, sr., of Virginia, attended the Washington Seminary in Atlanta, and graduated from the Ogontz School in Philadelphia.

Mr. Lutes, after attending school in Alliance, Ohio, received the degrees of LL. B. and LL. M. from Georgetown University. He is a descendant on the maternal side of the Carter family of Virginia, and of the von Beck family, of Wertenberg, Germany. Through his father he is descended from the Edward family, of New York, and from the Casselmans of Pennsylvania and Kentucky.

Sir George Paish, of London, who is visiting in this country, has come to Washington to spend several days. He is accompanied by Mr. Donald George Paish, of Albany, N. Y., and they are occupying a suite at the Wardman Park Hotel for the duration of their stay.

Mrs. T. S. Wiles was hostess at luncheon yesterday at the Carlton, when her guests numbered seven.

France Awards Cross of Honor To Dr. Henning

Ambassador Laboulaye Confers Decoration at Embassy.

In ceremonies yesterday afternoon at the French Embassy, Dr. George Neely Henning, professor of romance languages and for many years dean of the Graduate School of the George Washington University, was decorated by the Ambassador of France, Andre de Laboulaye, receiving the cross of the Legion of Honor.

The decoration was conferred upon Dr. Henning at the direction of the President of France in recognition of his contribution to the knowledge and appreciation of French literature.

Dr. Henning, a French scholar, is a graduate of Harvard University, where he received the degree of bachelor of arts "magna cum laude," and the degree of master of arts, "with honors in romance languages." George Washington University conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of letters in 1919.

Author of French Texts.

He has taught at George Washington since 1894 except for an interval of service on the faculty of Harvard.

Dr. Henning is author and editor of a number of French texts and anthologies in wide use in the colleges and universities of this country. His best known works are his "Representative French Lyrics of the Nineteenth Century," which has gone through 15 editions, and his "Representative Stories of Anatole France," with a critical essay, which has been highly praised by an intimate personal friend of the great French critic and novelist. The year 1931-32 Dr. Henning spent in Paris preparing a revised critical edition of the "Representative French Lyrics," which is soon to be published.

Dr. Henning is one of the founders and a trustee of the Institute Francais, headed by Gen. Pershing.

Book Dedicated to Him.

In the company invited to witness the ceremonies were Dr. Henning's sister, Miss Alice Henning; the President of the George Washington University, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin; Father Baisnee, of Catholic University; Prof. Merle I. Protzman, of the George Washington University; Mrs. Fred Powell, and Mr. David McCord, of Boston.

Mr. McCord, young poet and essayist, has dedicated to Dr. Henning his new book, "The Crows."

Following the ceremonies Dr. Henning entertained at dinner for those who attended the ceremonies, and Prof. Colin M. Mackall, Prof. John Donaldson, Mr. Stanley Wallace Bobskill and Mr. Fred W. Stewart.

Debevoise-Wright Nuptials April 14

Ceremony at St. Paul's in Overbrook.

Mrs. Caroline Norton Debevoise, of New York, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Evans Norton, of Greenhill Farms, Overbrook, Pa., has chosen Saturday, April 14, as the date for her wedding to Mr. Hamilton Washburn Wright, of New York, son of Mrs. Hamilton Wright, of Washington, and the late Dr. Wright.

The ceremony will be performed in St. Paul's Church in Overbrook. Owing to the recent death of Mrs. Norton's mother there will be no attendants and only members of the two immediate families will be present.

Mr. Wright was graduated from Yale University in 1929 and is a member of Scroll and Key and Chi Psi fraternity.

Rep. Jennings Randolph Given Birthday Dinner

Celebrating the birthday of Representative Jennings Randolph, of Elkins, W. Va., a dinner was given in the crystal room of the Willard Hotel last evening by Mrs. Randolph.

Among the guests were former Senator and Mrs. Davis Elkins, of West Virginia; former Senator Matthew M. Neely, also of West Virginia; Col. and Mrs. Macker Babb, and Mrs. Ernest Randolph.

Dancers Offer Viennese Ballet Here Tomorrow

Original Number Based on Straus Waltzes Draws Interest.

The program of dances and short ballets which the Lisa Gardiner Dancers will present tomorrow night in the Central High School Auditorium is drawing interest in many circles of society, not only in the Capital, but from as far away as Vienna, where the former Miss Katherine Phillips, now the wife of the Minister of the Netherlands to Austria, now lives.

Before Miss Phillips became Mme. Van Hoorn, she was a member of Miss Gardiner's dance group in this city. On learning that the dancers were planning an original ballet based on the Strauss waltzes, she sent Miss Gardiner a copy of a Vienna morning newspaper, to be used as a stage "prop" in the presentation of "Breakfast in Vienna."

Among those in the cast are Miss Christine Stewart, Miss Georgia Hiden, Miss Betty Yoder, Miss Patricia Hill, Miss Barbara Worrell, Margaret Cobey, Greta Ruth Atkins, Miss Marjorie Beall and Miss Alice Louise Hunter.

Scalp Expert Offers Advice On Hair Ills

Case Treatment Method Is Successful; Services Free to Clients.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Expert advice on hair and scalp troubles is hard to get without paying a pretty penny for it. Which is a very good reason why Washington women should take advantage of the unusual opportunity at hand now.

A store here is bringing a nationally known hair specialist to its beauty salon this week and next. She gives private consultations free of charge to clients who are bothered by scalp and hair troubles. She will diagnose, suggest, demonstrate, do all in her power to ward off or to eradicate adverse conditions.

For the past few years this specialist has studied in Vienna and has done research work in this country, not only to become acquainted with the pestiferous microbes at the root of hair troubles, but to ascertain why they are there. Once learning the why, she goes even deeper and finds out what can be done in the way of remedy.

A Record of Success.

Her method of attack has proved so successful that persons have come to her from all over the country for advice and treatment. A Chicago woman who lost all of her hair after an automobile accident went from one adviser to another for years and consulted experts without result. This specialist at last restored her hair.

If you are worried about bald patches, extremely dry or oily hair, or any abnormal condition of the hair or scalp, it would be an injustice to yourself to miss the opportunity of consulting such an authority.

Women with normal heads of hair will do well to talk to her about the care of it. She will show them how to brush their hair in a scientific fashion and how to keep it healthy.

Glass of Distinction.

There is no glass in all the world so beautiful as a certain iridescent kind made in Holland. An F street jewelry store has some vases made of this. They are lovely beyond description.

The globular vases are hand-blown, perfect in shape, not marred by even the tiniest seam. These placed well in a room so that the light shines on, and not through them, take on all the colors of the rainbow intensified a hundred times.

They are delightful with flowers. The stems collect a bead-like string of bubbles reflecting the colors of the iridescent glass. They appear from outside to be magnified several times over.

These vases and globes are sold exclusively in this shop.

Science Hides Scars.

So all-inclusive now is the field of science that even unsightly blemishes, birthmarks, burns, or scars of any kind can be disguised beyond recognition.

A Washington shop carries a preparation in several skin shades, flesh, rachel, and others, which may be applied over the discoloration like a coat of varnish.

Proof that it really is effective was offered by the buyer of the department. She said an attractive young woman came in one day to talk to her about ordering some of this from the company that manufactures it. At first the buyer was dubious. But the young woman, to show that it really was worth while, dampened a piece of cotton with some skin tonic, applied it to her own face, and removed the covering from a birthmark which entirely covered one cheek. When the buyer saw how excellent it was, she immediately ordered a supply and has been pleased beyond measure to see how helpful it has proved to young women who would otherwise suffer from the embarrassment of disfiguration.

Handy Pencil Sharpener.

There's a new pencil sharpener on the market. It's designed to suit the office desk or the home desk.

Besides being a pencil sharpener, it's a paperweight, so that if it isn't being used one way, it is another.

Most pencil sharpeners have standard shapes, but this one appears to be a metal sphere, sliced directly in half. Blades concealed on the inside are of such sturdy steel that they're proof against a regiment of pencils.

Lashes Will Grow.

"Betty" writes that she has tried everything to make her lashes grow, but so far has had no success.

It does require patience Betty—more than most of us have—but it can be done. First of all, buy a little brush and use it on the lashes after each make-up. It removes the powder and dust and stimulates the lashes.

There are several excellent eyelash growers on the market. Vaseline also is very good. This should be applied with the little brush every night before retiring, and the first thing every morning.

When you brush your upper lashes, always brush them upward. This trains them to curl a bit. Naturally the lower ones should be brushed downward.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 105, for further information. Or write, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Pillows Provide Comfort and Decoration, Also Furnish Background for Femininity

Materials Range From Formal Brocades to Simple Chintzes.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

Since the time when Egyptian charmers graced cushioned divans, pillows have been an important addition to the comfort of chairs and sofas.

Modern pillows promote rest and relaxation and develop the color scheme of a room. They provide the comfort and practicality for masculine tastes as well as a decorative background for feminine frills.

While pillows add immeasurably to the color harmony of your room as well as to the enjoyment of leisure hours, unfortunately they are usually selected with haphazard abandon.

The new materials range from velvets and brocades to the less pretentious and equally attractive chintzes and linens. The cotton dress materials are being featured again this spring for pillow covers as well as for draperies. They add a bright, fresh note to a room that has grown dull during the winter months.

For the informal chair, covered in peach, green and white chintz in the upper left corner of today's sketch, an oval pillow is chosen in glazed peach chintz. It is quilted in a simple criss-cross design, and is finished with a ruffle of white chintz.

The English wing chair in the upper right corner is covered in a rough woolen material in beige and welted with dark brown fringe. A rectangular pillow of gold velvet, edged with ball fringe in dark brown, carries out the more formal lines of the chair and also accents the color scheme.

For the tuxedo sofa or day bed, a variety of shapes can be used to add interest to the square lines of the furniture. The sausage pillows at either end of the dark green sofa are of a matching dark green serge bound in bright yellow. The side pillows are covered in striped cotton moire in yellow. A new novelty cotton with a diagonal weave in dark and light greens is effective on the center pillow. To add a quaint note of color, the round pillows are of chintz sprigged in yellow, rose-red and white with a ruffle of yellow.

Miss Maxson will be glad to give individual help in home-decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Capital Kitchen

Foods that Just "Hit the Spot" Served With America's Newly Legalized Alcoholic Drinks Open a New Catalogue of Cuisine for Hostesses.

By Susan Mills.

Now that every one may drink with a clear conscience, many hostesses are wondering what to serve with the various beverages.

With cocktails before dinner, very dainty canapes should be served. These can be made with caviar, decorated and flavored with chopped hard-boiled egg, cooked mushrooms, lemon juice or a little minced onion. Canapes of anchovy paste or other fish pastes are appropriate. Little pearl onions, stuffed olives, or sweet pickles can be served. Toasted crackers with little dabs of Welsh rarebit, served hot, are delicious.

If one is entertaining in the afternoon or evening at a so-called "cocktail party" when highballs are served, the drinks may be accompanied by sandwiches. Thin slices of buttered bread, with a layer of chopped water cress seasoned with a little lemon juice or mayonnaise, are rolled up and tied with a green ribbon. Cucumbers marinated in French dressing and flavored with a tiny bit of chopped onion makes an excellent sandwich filling. Another good filling consists of a cup of finely chopped celery with a tablespoon each of chopped apples, nuts, or olives, mixed with mayonnaise.

All sandwiches should be daintily prepared. No sweet sandwiches are appropriate.

One of the smartest ways to serve sandwiches with beer is to slice your bread, cheese and cold meat, have a dish of butter handy, plenty of knives, and let your guests make their own. All materials should be fresh and attractively laid out on a side table. Dishes of olives, pickles, mixed nuts and relishes should be close at hand.

If sandwiches are served this way it gives your guests an opportunity to eat what pleases them, and to have a guest pleased is gratifying.

The secrets of successful entertaining are few and simple. Invite people who will be congenial and, if possible, who have things in common. See that cigarettes, ash trays and matches are conveniently placed.

Quality Makes the Drink.

Don't try to entertain your guests. If they are interesting and interested they will entertain themselves. Try to appear as if the entertaining was the easiest thing in the world. You may suffer qualms and trepidations about your party, but never let it be known.

With respect to the drinks, Americans are becoming more and more European in their attitute toward highballs. They should be mixed to taste well, and to be enjoyed. An Englishman told me the secret of good mixing.

"If a drink doesn't taste well who wants to drink it?" he said. "Drinking is essentially a pleasure and the taste of a drink should be pleasurable."

If you do your mixing with this in mind, using the best materials you can afford, if your accessories are dainty and tasteful and decoratively served, you need have no qualms.

University Women Hostesses to Poets

Misses MacKaye, Squier Are Honored.

Miss Christy Mackaye and Miss Phyne Squier, outstanding young poets, will be guests of honor at a luncheon at the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women at their clubhouse Saturday at 1:15 o'clock.

Miss Mackaye, the daughter of the famous dramatist and poet, Percy Mackaye, has won wide recognition. Her first volume, "Wind in the Grass," was described by Edwin Arlington Robinson as possessing real imagination—"the imagination which comes from nowhere and brings with it something that we did not have before." Miss Mackaye was awarded the Fox prize in 1930 and Miss Squier the Ponce De Leon award the same year.

Both poets are graduates of Rollins College in Florida. This college, often known as "the school for geniuses," guides each student in developing his own interests and talents. The classrooms are conducted as informal discussion groups, and creative work is encouraged.

Mrs. Leslie H. Whitten will act as hostess at the luncheon and will introduce the artists.

Leaves Turn Green—Shoes Go Brown

Hats Will Be Brown, Too; Footwear, Headgear Harmonize.

By Amos Parrish.

New York, March 8.—There was a time when they said "wear black shoes and be safe." But the rule now is—wear brown shoes and be gay, sportier, more colorful . . . and still perfectly safe.

This will be the rule for almost one man out of every three this spring. Just as it's the rule for brighter-dressed men like automaker E. L. Cord, fighter Max Baer, brain-truster Rexford Tugwell.

If you wanted to name one color that's climbing to popularity in men's wear, you'd have to name brown. It certainly makes a gayer-looking shoe. It makes a more colorful shoe.

It's a shoe color that does things for your brown suit. It's a color that contrasts and sets off your gray or blue suit. It's a shade that can get along with a plaid, a check, a herringbone, or a striped pattern. It's a color deep enough, rich enough, brown enough to give any outfit you've got the spot of added color it needs below the ankles.

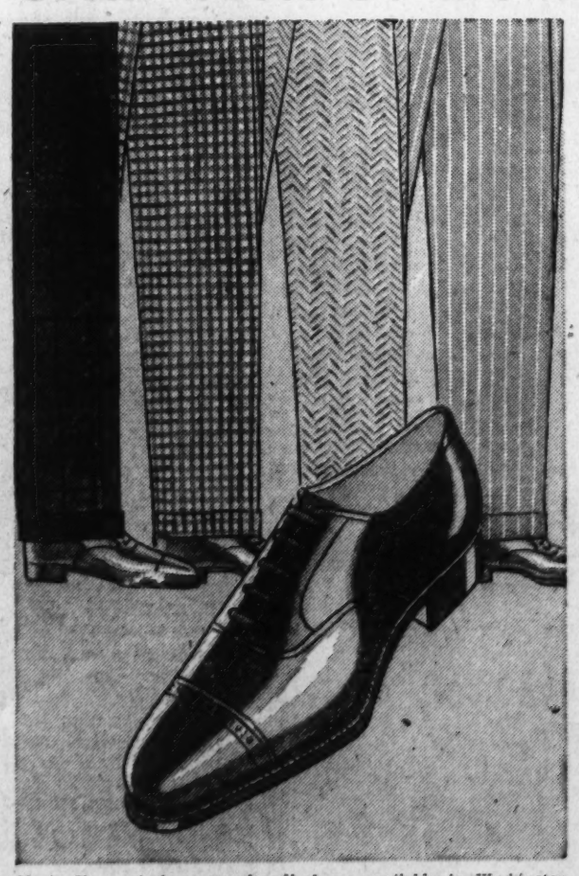
What's more, if like thousands of other men you're going to wear the rougher, outdoor kind of clothes this spring, brown shoes belong with them. With the tweeds and the shetlands and the cheviots that blend so well with shades of brown and tan. And with the gray and blue-gray versions of these fabrics.

Then there's this point. More men—you're probably one of them—are picking their hats brown this spring. Which makes brown shoes right again . . . because with a brown hat on your head and brown shoes on your fee' your head won't go one way and your feet another.

Incidentally, tan or yellow gloves—yellow chamois and doette gloves—will be the link between brown hats and shoes . . . Notice this on Easter Sunday morning.

The beauty of your brown shoes is that they know their place. They stay where they belong, do their job quietly, but dress you up unmistakably. They're not yellow, not bright, not flashy, not splashy . . . and they go well with any lighter shade sui. you pick for wearing now . . . or next summer.

So if you're feeling gay enough to try a new pair of spring shoes, better be gay in your choice and try browns. Because brown shoes



Men's Shoes of the types described are available in Washington in the better shops and department stores.

(in that trim, neat medium custom last that's illustrated here) have the trick of combining the dress-you-up idea with the sporty, and the gay-you-up feeling with the distinctly wearable.

Chowders Give Zest to Lenten Dinner Menus

Federal Bureau Instructs Housewife How They Should Be Made.

As the first days of spring turn the thoughts of languid business men to trout streams, so the coming of Lent has sent the housewife to market and store on a quest for fish.

The traditional fish dishes now take dominant place on the menu. Chowders, codfish cakes, salmon loaf and, of course, lobsters and crabs form a welcome change from steaks and other standard meat dishes.

The chilly raw days of late February are an ideal season in which to serve a hot and appetizing chowder for dinner. Persons with the New England tradition especially will enjoy this long-time favorite of the Northern seacoast families.

The fish used for chowder may be fresh cod or haddock or any other large fish with firm, flaky meat. Clam chowder is popular and lobsters and crabs may be used when available. If fresh fish can not be obtained, dried codfish, smoked haddock or canned fish may be used.

Milk and potatoes, onions and salt pork are the standard ingredients of most chowders. The diced potatoes and fish, if used, are cooked in water or stock, the salt pork is diced and fried, the chopped onion cooked in the fat, and then the flour stirred in. This mixture is then mixed with milk as in making any milk soup. Then the potatoes and fish or corn or other materials are aded and cooked a short time until well blended and hot. The recipe below is from the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture:

One and one-half pounds fresh cod, haddock, or any other large fish, 2 cups diced potatoes, 1 cup diced carrots, 1 quart water, one-fourth pound salt pork, diced, 1 onion, chopped, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 pint milk, salt, pepper.

Cut the fish into small pieces and remove the bones and skin. Cook fish, potatoes, and carrots in the water for 15 minutes. Fry the salt pork until crisp, remove from the fat, cook the onion in the fat for a few minutes, add the flour, stir until well blended, and add the milk. Add this mixture to the fish and vegetables, add salt and pepper, stir frequently, and simmer 10 minutes longer. Serve over crackers.

So many different kinds of fish come in cans these days, it's hard to make a complete list—salmon, tuna fish, shrimp, oysters, fish flakes, kippers, sardines, and so on. Salmon is sold in several different grades at several different prices. The better grades of salmon are nicest for salad because of their delicate flavor and large pieces. But for cooking, the cheaper quality is just as satisfactory. You can cream salmon or scallop it, make it into cutlets, timbales, or salmon loaf; then you can combine salmon with potatoes and many other vegetables in different ways.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

The Need for Sunshine.

During February, March, April, and May it is wise for young and old and all in between to get all the sunlight they can. The children require it especially. The younger they are the greater the need. It is especially necessary during all rapidly growing periods. Since the rate of growth of the first year of life is enormous, it is greatly needed then. But the second year is also a period of rapid growth, and the third, and in fact all the years of childood. The pubertal years are also, and much sunlight is needed then.

After the years of growth have passed then come the years of strain, and that is a period when sunlight is needed in the late winter and spring. The day's work is often done in a dark factory, office, or city. Therefore occupation usually increases the need for sunlight.

In old age the strain of growth and that of work are gone, but a need of sunshine is still present. The old must resist the infections which cause colds, bronchitis, pneumonia, and some heart troubles. They, too, must strive for sunshine in this season.

The late winter and spring period is one of high sickness rates. With our large camp and shelter population this spring there should be some increase in measles, mumps and meningitis. This is the season of colds, coughs and pneumonia. About the best antidote for this entire group is life in the open with plenty of sunshine.

March is the month for meningitis. The people who get it most frequently are the members of the hot stove league. The days that spread it are those that are rainy and cold and in which the people crowd indoors and hug the fire. There is no sunshine inside a crowded room. For that matter there is none anyway on a rainy day. Those who can do so will profit from going where the days are not cold and there is little rain and the sun is always on the job.

In the deeper layers of the outer part of the skin there is a wonderful laboratory. It operates on somewhat the same principle as photography. The area has been termed a photograph gallery that makes no pictures. There are important chemicals, in this area. These are changed by sunlight and the products are picked up by the blood stream and carried to different parts of the body to do different kinds of work.

The chemicals there are not rare or new. They are of a group that is rather abundant in the human body and in nature in general. They have been known a long time. What is new is our knowledge of what they do and how they are changed by sunlight; we might say of how they pick up sunlight, tie it up in packages, and carry it to distant parts of the body.

Beggars All

By Katharine Newlin Burt

Rafe Courvoisier, last heir of an impoverished Southern family, is released from a secret outlaw rendezvous by Madrone, on his promise to obey Madrone's orders. He becomes a boatman at Candle Island, his old home, now owned by Hortense Kendall. She is vaguely in love with Rafe, but he gives her no encouragement, because he considers himself Madrone's slave. She becomes engaged to Randal Crewe. Rafe discovers that her guardian, Harmon Jay, is Madrone's man, and that all the servants on the island estate are connected with the outlaw. Madrone visits Rafe, who develops a certain sympathy for the man and warns him that he has enemies on the island. In aiding him to escape, Rafe is shot.

Madrone obeyed. Rafe nosed his way skillfully out to the open water again.

Madrone lifted his head, then ducked. "Si!" he whispered. "Something moved."

Rafe tightened his mouth. Something behind them coughed, dry and sharp, something pinged into the water beside them. Rafe ducked and swerved the boat. Bullets peppered the sea. He felt a sort of push against his side.

"Hit?" Madrone questioned.

"My side's cut," Rafe answered through his teeth. "I can feel the blood. But it's not deep, I reckon. See anyone?"

"No. But the branches moved. It wasn't Strego. Left hand or right, he never misses. Torkwist is not so good with a gat. You got to keep going, boy. Me, I don't understand boats. I don't like them."

"Nor sea water, eh? Snakes and sea water—two things you don't cotton to. Keep your head down. Do you think he'll run along the shore and meet us when we try to land?"

"No. No. We are, up there at the house, too strong for him."

Rafe glanced back and saw the island had diminished. With what seemed like one swift and vigorous motion, he rose and capsized the canoe, throwing them both into the water.

As Madrone spluttered, Rafe caught him by the collar and, flinging his other arm about the craft, rolled it about until it was right-side up.

"Hold on to the end of the canoe. Steady. Let me go a second." He climbed aboard himself over the other end. He had already rescued the floating paddle. Madrone was praying or cursing in Italian and his eyes were glazed. They clung to Rafe as his fingers clung to the edge.

Rafe laughed. But the wound in his side burnt him and the blood, checked by the salty water, ran again. He caught Madrone's wrist.

"You surely do not like sea water. What's to prevent my knocking you on the head with my paddle until you drown? Here, give me your hand."

Madrone came aboard, tumbling sidelong in.

"Very clever sailor," he said. He was instantly restored to his normal suavity.

"Now we're quits," said Rafe. "You kept me alive on your island for your purpose and I've refrained from drowning you off my island for my pprpose. Before I'm through with you I want to ask you some questions. I'd like to know what you're planning to do—to Miss Kendall, to me and to the City of Chetteraw. Better come clean, Madrone. I've got you where I want you. Paddle, sea water and snakes. If you fight and we go over, you will drown first."

Madrone to Tell All.

"I have no intention to fight, Courvoisier," Madrone assured him pleasantly. "I will tell you anything you want to know."

"That's everything."

Rafe was puzzled by the look in Madrone's eyes, of gentle watchfulness.

"Everything, then. I will tell you why I am here and why you are here. I will tell you how it happens that Rondo is my man; that Candle Island is peopled with my men. And with my enemies."

Rafe said, "Speak louder, then, will you?"

There was a mist across the sea. Suddenly it seemed wiser to him, while he was listening to the man's confession, to make for shore. He turned the canoe and fell to paddling, with his teeth set into his lip. Madrone seemed to be talking soothingly, but it took all of Rafe's energy now to lift the paddle and to move it through the water that had turned into clinging, molten lead. He thought he heard Madrone whistle. Branches brushed his head. The land stood up and hit him in the eyes. As the boat rushed up against the beach, his paddle dropped. Rafe bent, slid from his seat, and lay prone. He heard men running, felt that he was lifted, carried out, and laid down under the branches. He tried to understand what was said, tried to open his eyes, but found either achievement impossible. Darkness was possible. And surrender. He succeeded in achieving both.

When Rafe regained consciousness he knew instantly what and where he was. He lay on a narrow bed in Mammy Anna's room. Anna had been his mother's mammy and his own. She had been given this room in the second story of the southern wing because of her rheumatism. Before the bare fireplace asleep in a wicker rocking chair sat Madrone.

Rafe had been bandaged and his whole side felt stiff and sore. Now he saw that a glass of milk stood on the table near his bed. After he had drained it, he began to feel stronger. His head cleared so that he began to understand his situation.

Rafe Loses Fear.

In the first place, he realized that, since all his vague apprehensions had sprung into violent life, since Strego had beaten him and Torkwist had rescued and shot him, since he had thrown Madrone into the sea and pulled him out of it, he had lost that slavish and paralyzing fear which had been his torment.

Certainly it was strange to know that he lay here in his beloved boyhood home, a prisoner, at the mercy of outlaws. It was strange and shameful to know that along the lengths of his dear island their greedy feuds and illicit rivalries prowled with guns and knives ready for murder. But as no emotion can be conquered by pure reason, but only by some stronger emotion, so now, after the long and losing battle of his will, that overwhelming fear and hatred he had felt for these men had been completely overcome by a red, clean anger against them and by a love as clean and fiery for some one who was more intimately their victim than himself. In saving her, in saving his island and his house, he would be saving his own birthright, purifying his own blood and redeeming his own soul.

So young Courvoisier began to exercise his reason in a plan for Candle Island's salvation.

He knew that the man sleeping in the chair, the man who thought of Rafe Courvoisier merely as his victim and his convenient tool, was quick to waken. He knew, too, that Madrone's plan, the plan that had brought him back to Chetteraw, had its roots in the past, had been cherished for half a lifetime and would need for its uprooting, dynamitte. "The dynamite, Signor Madrone," Rafe thought, "is in my blood, and by all the Courvoisiers it's going to blow you up."

Considers Problems.

Here Rafe turned his weak but patient and resolute attention to that angle of his problem that was called Randal Crewe. Mr. Jay, it seemed, with Hortense's heroic, sacrificial prompting, had got Randal Crewe nicely sewed up, as he himself would put it, in a carpet-bag. Randy's engagement to an heiress was announced, his outstanding debts had been paid, all orders necessary for the renovation of a bridegroom's home and person had been placed. The mortgage on his estate had been taken over. Randall had certainly sold himself.

Rafe tested his strength by rising to a sitting posture. The room ran about in a circle. He saw Madrone come to stand beside him when he dropped back to his pillows.

"You better? Good."

"Not able to sit up," gasped Rafe, exaggerating a weakness that hardly needed exaggeration.

"Maddalena will bring you breakfast. It's only that you'd been fasting too long and lost too much blood."

"How long have you been occupying this room? Oh, you needn't tell me. I know what night you came here. Miss Dare was wakened."

"So? That's too bad. I am sorry to disturb her."

"I'd like," said Rafe, "to see her. Miss Kendall has discharged me from my job as her boatman, so I don't feel justified in occupying one of her bedrooms secretly. I'd like to account for myself to some responsible member of the household."

Madrone touched Rafe's breast with one finger. "In good time, boy. For the present the household is very busy. There is to be a wedding party."

Rafe pulled himself up again, his heart leaping.

"A . . . wedding . . .?"

Madrone watched him with the eyes of a hunting cat.

"Yes. Mr. Jay wished to be present and can not be away long from the Boston office. It seems that there is no reason for delay. Today is Thursday and on Saturday they will celebrate the wedding. A clergyman arrives today with Mr. Jenkyns. Mr. Crewe, too, will arrive this evening with relations. There will be announcement tonight. Tomorrow celebrating, rehearsal. The day after, Saturday, the wedding ceremony and the couple will no doubt depart. Mr. and Mrs. Randal Crewe, isn't that right? Now, I'm going to get some grub for myself and for you, eh? Forgive me if I lock you in."

Chapter XXII.

Madrone took the key from his pocket, opened the door, went out and locked it. After perhaps 15 minutes it was opened by Maddalena, who carried in a tray. Rafe heard someone turn the key outside. That someone would wait in the hall for Maddalena's exit. Maddalena, her wide face discolored by long weeping, set down the tray in silence.

"Tell me, Maddalena," said Rafe, "is Miss Hortense happy now, or does she cry like you?"

"Madonna mia!" cried Maddalena. She will be married, my young signor, she will go away from me, from my embrace to the arms of an American gentleman who does not love her."

"How can you say that, Maddalena?"

"Don't I see? Can't I understand how he looks at the little signorina? It is the little Miss Dare he loves! . . . Please, sir," she went on with a grave intensity, "I would like you to believe we are good people. We come to America to be good people. Although it is Nino Madrone who have help us. He is our cousin. He is Americano. He make much money in these country. He send the old people back home money to buy a house, a farm, vineyards, pretty goats. And to us many years ago he send the beautiful American lady, Mrs. Kendall, with her little baby, new born on the sea. And it was Nino Madrone, signor, that recommend us to Signor Jay to come here with Miss Hortense to work for her and to take care. You see we owe so much to this Nino Madrone. He was good boy at home. Nevertheless, even if we begin to understand that Nino is not so good, still we must love him. Pst!"

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If March 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 to 7 a. m., from 4 to 5 p. m. and from 10:30 to 11:30 p. m.

If March 9 is your natal day, Aurora, the goddess of morning, must have transmitted a ray of her sunshine into your being the day you were born. You radiate a warmth of loving kindliness, which helps make the world a brighter abiding place for weary mortals. Courageous, with an indomitable will to accomplish whatever you undertake, you have the reincarnated spirit the Spartan parents transmitted to their offsprings, which resulted in a fearless race worthy to perpetuate their characteristics through their progeny. Married life is essential for your happiness, and will be the medium through which you can give joy to those fortunate enough to share your home. You believe in the motto, "While I breathe, I hope," and it is your unbounding faith which will carry you triumphantly through the trials and tribulations most of us have to pass through before we can succeed.

The children born on March 9 usually inherit their parents' principal characteristics to a marked degree. The child whose birthday is March 9 is exceptionally mentally alert and of an extremely affectionate disposition. It takes a great deal to make children, born on this date, angry. Once aroused, however, they have highly explosive tempers, which they bring under quick control.

People born on March 9 are great lovers of nature. Flowers have a remarkable influence over them, soothing their ruffled feelings as music will other peoples.

Do You Know As Much As Your Cat?

She's a knowing cat.

She asks for little—just her meals, a saucer of milk and a place in the sun. She gets plenty of sleep and exercise. She never worries, never frets. What is the result? Such vitality and resistance that we say, "Cats have nine lives."

What does your cat do when she is not well? She eats catnip, if she can find it. She eats grass and certain green plants to which her instinct leads her.

Your cat takes herbs for a tonic.

Did you ever stop to think that Old Mother Nature, who supplies the herbs necessary to your cat's health, has also provided the herbs necessary to your own well-being?

You don't have to hunt for them as the cat does. The herbs you need are skillfully blended and compounded in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, an old fashioned tonic that will help to restore your strength and energy.

Blonde Policelady Praises the Spunk Of Girl "Rebels."

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

Strangely enough, though she carries a police badge in her purse and brings many women criminals to face the law, Capt. Rhoda Milliken of the Women's Bureau of the District Police wears no uniform. Capt. Milliken is slim, small and no more formidable than a housewife who has never had any but her own domestic problems to confront her. When we saw Capt. Milliken she wore a green woolen dress with fullness in the sleeves. The buttons on the green dress are long-shaped, probably a Schiaparelli inspiration, and not the bold, brass kind that shine from the coats of her men co-workers. The feminine police captain's short blonde locks are permanently waved.

Police women are impractical, financially speaking, for not wearing uniforms, Capt. Milliken said, for there is allowance in the police department budget for clothes for officers.

"It is easier to make arrests in plain clothes," she explained. "And our appearance without uniforms in neighborhoods where we make investigations does not mean disgrace, necessarily, for the persons involved."

"I like most of the young girls who come under arrest," declared the mild-mannered woman officer of the law. "Such girls are merely rebelling against drab, unfortunate circumstances. With spirit enough to rebel they have stamina to overcome their handicaps."

Is mopping and scrubbing a dull job? Against the chorus of housewives' denunciation, Supt. Sims, of the Senate Subway, will say it is not. He likes his job. He uses mops and brooms, dustpans and disinfectants.

But he organizes his dirt-chasing implements on an efficient four-wheeled cart he has built for himself. Just for fun, and to take the dullness out of the looks of a mop cart, he has a shining eagle, a bell and a rear-vision mirror perched above the buckets and brooms. A red paper whirligig serves for the cart's tail-light.

Even a coal-oil lantern painted bright red adds to the ensemble. "So," as Sims of the Subway, says, "when dese here subway lights goes out—as dey of'n does for 20 minutes or mo,' ah kin go on scrubbin' just de same"

Another story from the inimitable Robert Lincoln O'Brien comes out of the Tariff Commission's annual dinner dance at the Mayflower last night. Gen. Ulysses 'S. Grant once stopped for a short time in Abington, Mass., halfway between Boston and Plymouth, where Mr. O'Brien lived as a small boy. The town tried to rally as many as it could of its few hundred inhabitants to greet the famous man. Even the entire citizenry wouldn't have made a throng for greeting Gen. Grant, so an enterprising fellow about town marshalled the handshaking population. He told them to pass again and again past the receiving line to make the crowd seem larger.

"But about the fifth time I managed to offer my hand to the great general he gave me a cold stare that I shall never forget," said O'Brien."

When a Chevy Chase family became possessed of two cars, the shiny new small car of the two vehicles was appropriated by the father of the family for his strictly personal use.

No groceries were to be hauled in the new car, the paternal parent ruled. No muddy feet were to soil the floor and cushions. Rather than expose the treasure to the snowy streets of February, the father rode the buses and left his car in the garage.

One snowy night, however, the garage door and the new car's door were inadvertently left open. And when father next wanted to use his own special motor car he found cat and nine very new kittens! snuggled in the back seat a mother

Smoke Menace Kills Millions, Club Is Told

Miss Harlean James Cites Cause of Disease and Economic Waste.

"The American people are breathing themselves to death," declared Miss Harlean James, executive secretary of the American Civic Association, speaking yesterday before the civic section of the Twentieth Century Club.

"Millions of Americans die yearly from diseases caused by the smoky atmosphere of cities," said Miss James. "Some trees have developed smoke resistance, but people have not done so. Not only respiratory diseases, but skin cancers and rickets are the result of excess smoke in the air. For sunlight, with its health-giving violet rays, can not penetrate a dense fog of smoke. And the smoke that collects on window panes also prevents sunlight from entering."

The smoke menace in New York City alone costs $960,000,000 a year, according to Miss James. In Pittsburgh, the cost is more than $10,000,000 yearly and in other large cities, including Washington, it runs well into the millions.

Items of Smoke Waste.

This cost includes unnecessary laundry, dry cleaning and the constant refurnishing of homes. Spoiled merchandise and devaluation of real estate also contribute to the cost.

"But while our buildings and household furnishings can be cleaned, unfortunately our lungs can not," Miss James said. "And the number of deaths resulting from this evil is constantly increasing.

"The amazing thing is that the greatest volume of smoke does not come from large factories, but from private homes and apartment houses.

"Much of this smoke is needless and comes from improper furnace firing and use of the wrong kinds of fuel and heating methods."

Problem for Individuals.

Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, made a short talk following Miss James' speech. She declared that the smoky condition should be cleared up as a matter of civic pride.

"Do not wait for legislation," she enjoined her audience. "The American people have begun to depend too much upon thou shalt and thou shalt nots. It is up to you as individuals." Besides costing human lives and destroying millions of dollars' worth of property, useless smoke is a waste because it represents unconsumed heat units. I repeat that it is a matter of individual responsibility, and of civic pride."

Mrs. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the civic section of the club, introduced the speakers.

The City Club recommended to the Board of the Twentieth Century Club that an effort be made by the club to provide adequately for smoke abatement in Washington. The recommendation includes a request to the appropriate committees of Congress for their help in making such changes in the law if necessary and for such provisions as may be deemed adequate for the abatement.

Jurist Opposes Child Labor Ban

Amendment Would Give Congress Unlimited Power, He Says.

Syracuse, N. Y., March 8 (U.P.).—Opposition to the proposed child labor amendment on the ground it would grant Congress unlimited powers to dictate the activities and education of children was made today by William S. Andrews, former judge of the Court of Appeals, in a statement in the Syracuse Post-Standard.

The jurist pointed out that the provisions of the proposed amendment might allow the appointment of "inspectors to search our homes lest the rules of the bureau (Children's Bureau) be broken."

"Still worse, a girl working at home a boy helping his father on the farm, all this might be prohibited."

"It might," he continued, "do a hundred other things. The Soviet goes no further."

Andrews charged that "anybody, be it Congress or bureau, once intrusted with a power, seeks to extend it."

The only safety lies "in refusing to grant power which the people do not wish to be exercised."

There are thousands of children between 14 and 18 years of age who can not or will not remain in school. If these minors do not remain in school, the child labor law would make parents or the State support them "in idleness," Andrews charged.

Woman Made Justice.

Grafton, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—The feminine sex again has been recognized in West Virginia official life, Mrs. Mabel Powell Smith, of here, having been appointed a justice of the peace for Fetterman magisterial district by the Taylor County Court.

The glad girl heroine of the prewar decade, whose love scenes were sweet and tepid, was succeeded by the postwar flapper, whose fervor made the pages of the best sellers fairly sizzle.

War's Backwash Lost Sweet Heroines in Cloud of Jazz

Elinor Glyn Built Fire Under Stilted Formality of Love Scenes, and Shock-Appeals Novels Substituted "It" for Intelligence.

A love scene in a best seller may mean only a thrill to the feminine reader. But to the historian, it is a barometer of social and economic progress.

How fictional love ran the gamut from the lukewarm to the boiling stage during the first quarter of the twentieth century is related in the following article, which is the fifth in a series tracing changing styles in best-seller heroes and heroines.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Pollyanna was a delightful creature whom all women—and alas many men—tried to emulate. But she was a washout in love scenes. Small wonder, then, that the flapper and the sheik crowded her from the fictional spotlight.

It was fitting that the halcyon prewar decade should have produced Pollyanna, Rebecca, Daddy Long Legs, Laddie, and Harold Bell Wright's wholesome open-shirted he-men.

Equally fitting was it that the postwar period should have created the Sheik, Cary Scott of "Flaming Youth," and F. Scott Fitzgerald's reckless, hard-boiled beauties.

The course of fictional love did not change, however, until after the first decade of the twentieth century. From 1900 to 1910, heroines still talked as if they had swallowed dictionaries, fell in love with firm-chinned heroes, and remained as pure as if they had been wrapped in cellophane. Villains hissed, threatened to foreclose the mortgage, and tried to do wrong by Nell.

Pollyanna Has Her Day.

Writers continued to give their readers old-fashioned romance by the truckload. Many a housewife recalls missing a few heartbeats over "The Shepherd of the Hills," the story of Sammy Lane and Young Matt, which abounded in such passages as:

"And this way runs the trail that lies along the higher, sunlit hills, where those who journey see afar and the light lingers even when day is done."

Thus the way was cleared for the grand debut of Pollyanna.

She appeared in 1913, the product of Eleanor Porter's mind, and immediately "All's right with the world" became the watch-cry of fiction. Glad heroines went smirking through the pages of books and engaged in tepid love scenes with optimistic young men.

While all this was taking place, the way was being paved surreptitiously for the post-war sex novels.

The herald of the new era was Elinor Glyn. Her nation-stirring "Three Weeks" was published around 1910 but did not come into immediate popularity. It was condemned publicly and read privately. Dealing with a heroine who succumbed to temptation, it was considered presumptuous, daring and immoral.

But it remained for the after-the-war decade to bring sex in fiction into the open. Thus, the wanton pictures of wanton heroines were, in reality, the after-effects of the austerities of the world conflict. By 1920, writers had felt the pulse of fiction readers and had prescribed jazz and sex in large doses.

Sex Stories Rampant.

Consequently, heroines of the 20's escaped the inevitable penalties of their forerunners who stooped to folly. A girl who wasn't insulted at least once in the course of the novel was something of a failure as a heroine. The double standard had made a final nose-dive into obscurity, and the flapper with her short skirts, frizzled hair, and dazed mind went in for experience above everything else. Fortunately, however, she was usually saved from destruction when some broad-minded male stepped in at the crucial moment.

Preservation of chastity was completely turned over to the sophisticated middle-aged man who meted out reform in small but attractive doses and invariably fell in love with the flapper he was trying to reform. If he chanced to be married already, it made no difference either to him or to the sweet young thing whose heart he had won.

Warner Fabian's "Flaming Youth" was the epitome of postwar fictional love. It synchronized with the jazz age as perfectly as did its timely title. Patricia Fentress, the heroine, was a typical twentieth century girl who became precociously (though vicariously) wise in matters of sex.

Answer to Flapper's Prayer.

While she wavered on the brink of complete ruin, Carey Scott, a middle-aged married man, came to her rescue. Starting as a friendly adviser, he eventually became her lover and finally proved to be her safe haven, as the narrative closed on a frivolous note, as follows:

"——Oh Cary, darling!" Her eyes darkened, brooded, dreamed, grew somber, subtle, prophetic, as she gave voice to her warning. 'As a husband you'll have to be a terribly on-the-job lover. There are so many men in the world!"

"Flaming Youth" was a sensation. Its only rival for fictional attention was "The Sheik," which glorified the foreign caveman and brought the Valentino flavor into romance.

Every young woman of the day—and many an old one—read and visualized herself as Diana Mayo, fortunate enough to be captured by an Arab chieftain. The widespread popularity of "The Sheik" annoyed the older generation and the critics, who branded it as "vicious" and "poisonous in conception." But it was the answer to the flapper's prayer and, as such, its success was overwhelming.

Scott Fitzgerald may be credited with successfully developing the gin school of fiction. His "This Side of Paradise," "The Beautiful and the Damned," and "Tales of a Jazz Age" were the most realistic reflections of the spirit of the era. His pictures of reckless, rudderless young people—soft at heart but hard on the exterior—were prototypes of the younger generation which was more interested in "it" than intelligence. His heroines raveled in luxury and fast living and went from love affair into love affair with a regularity that threatened to become boring.

Flippancy, flirting, and giggling—generously punctuated with highballs—took the younger generation by storm. Accordingly, 18-year-old heroines and their middle-aged protectors held the spot-light against all other literary contenders until the late 20's. Then the pendulum, swinging back with surprising rapidity, portended the flapper's death knell. The heroine who delighted in frivolity was destined to give place to an older, more sophisticated woman who, in her own vernacular, would "go clever" and concentrate her efforts toward achieving a glamorous effect.

Woman Composer Still Finds Joy in Pursuing Art at 70

Mrs. Frances Grant, Busy Creating Music and Giving Recitals, "Overwhelmed" at Knowledge She Yet Hopes to Master.

Few persons cleave so tightly to a vocation that marriage, children and the passage of years does not weaken their hold.

But Mrs. Frances Grant, 70, musician and composer, has since she was 9 years old kept a firm grasp on her musical muse.

She sat in front of the large open fireplace at 2205 Wisconsin avenue, the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ross A. Collins, wife of Representative Collins, of Mississippi, and spoke modestly of her quiet career.

"I've never done anything big," she said, "just written a few songs, mostly ballads and church music."

She did not include in the enumeration her musical melodrama "The Last Stand of the Biloxi," which won National acclaim at the time it was presented before the National Federation of Music Clubs in Birmingham.

Questioned about it, she remarked:

"Why it wasn't particularly outstanding. I just took an old Mississippi legend, versified it, and put it to music."

Studied After Marriage.

Asked whether she had ever come close to deserting her muse, Mrs. Grant admitted that for the first ten years after she was married she found very little time for music.

"I was very young at the time, and so was my husband," she said. "We were intent on home-making, and then it was during that time my children arrived on the scene so I had plenty to occupy my time. Of course I continued to practice some, but undoubtedly my music would have slipped from me if it hadn't been for an old teacher of mine in Chicago.

"She persuaded me to keep on studying. My husband was entirely sympathetic and encouraged me to go the Europe and study there. From that time on I've 'kept at it'!"

Mrs. Grant said that she had arrived at the stage when she was overwhelmed by all that she had to learn.

"But I love it!" she declared, "and I shall continue to study, to practice and to compose the rest of my life."

Greatest Compensations.

"You see, I feel that music is the one great compensation for loneliness. It expresses emotions, and at the same time soothes them.

"Perhaps not the one great compensation, though," she added thoughtfully, "because one's children are that, too. It's both, children and music, the real compensations for anything!"

Besides being a devotee to music, Mrs. Grant spends much time reading and writing.

"I'm very inconsistent at them both," she said. "One day I'll read something like 'Anthony Adverse,' and the next day I'll dive into a detective novel."

"As for writing, I really do very little of it, just a poem now and then. I know scarcely anything about verse technique. I simply write because I feel it!"

Morning Inspires Verse.

On a recent morning, Mrs. Grant said, she awoke early and, feeling a desire to write, composed virtually offhand the following verses:

"The darkness is my house.
We go inside, my soul and I, and shut the door.
We do not need a light,
For we have been there oft before.

"We talk things over, soul and I.
I do not need to see his face.
I tell him all the things I've done—
He never blames, but comforts me with silence.

"The air about us throbs and beats
Like giant waves against a shore;
Soul comes to me and takes my hand,
The dawn is here—throws wide
the door.
Then down the well-trod paths
we go
Calmed and rested, the night is o'er.

Flame.

By Katherine Smith.

When flame is new and burning brightly
Lifted shafts of light pierce through
The sky above them, sending nightly
Symbols of my love to you.

My thoughts are yours; my heart remembers
Things that love has glorified.
When flame becomes but quiet embers
Is the glowing warmth denied?

Fashion Makes New Footwear Go Windblown

Perforation and Stitching Designs Express Motion.

The windblown silhouette has descended to shoes.

Lines known as windswept characterize the new spring models by the use of cut-outs, stitching, perforations, and ingenious color combinations. Undulating lines of stitching, which flow from heel to toe, express motion. Curved arcs of perforations give the same effect, while cut-outs in graduated sizes on the vamp and quarter carry out the windblown idea by allowing air to blow through the shoe.

The well-dressed woman will have at least four types of footwear in her wardrobe this spring, according to a prominent stylist. A sturdy oxford or tie slipper will accompany her strictly tailored morning suit. For afternoon she will find that a tie or pump adds the right note to her costume. An elaborate sandal or pump is suitable for the cocktail or dinner hour. A formal sandal is the appropriate slipper for evening wear.

Kidskin, in a new crushed version, is being used for the tailored oxford or tie. The sensation for sportswear is white Yukon calf, a new leather that is washable, soft, and pliable. Reptiles, especially the fine-grained ones, are in favor for early spring, but will probably give way to kidskin later in the season.

As a result of the Tyrolian, Chinese, and Mexican influence in fashion, colored shoes are coming back. Brilliant red, blue, green, or yellow slippers will accompany neutral-toned costumes as well as matching ensembles.

These gay-colored slippers will be worn extensively in the evening with gowns in white or off-white shades. Glimpsed recently at a rendezvous of the smart set was a delectable, full-skirted gown of white mousseline de soie, embroidered with matching velvet dots, and accompanied by emerald green sash and pumps.

Release of Austrian Leader Sought by Women's Groups

Efforts to free Frau Freundlich, noted feminist leader and Socialist member of the Austrian Parliament, now in preventive custody in Vienna, are being made by the International Alliance of Women for Suffrage and Equal Citizenship. Other women's international organizations are joining in the appeal, which is being made to the Austrian government.

As president of the International Cooperative Women's Guild, Frau Freundlich is widely known internationally and has worked in close touch with other women's international organizations, notably in connection with the International Women's Disarmament Committee in Geneva.

She was the first woman to hold a ministerial post, as Director of the Food Ministry in Austria, in the last critical days of the war. She was a delegate from her government to the World Economic Conference in 1927, being the only woman appointed a vice president of that conference.

Cultural Camp Helps Artists To Avoid Narrow Viewpoint

Girl Musicians Taught Appreciation of Creative Pursuits and Given Opportunity for Athletic Activities at Hill Colony in New Hampshire.

Musicians who know only sharps and flats; painters to whom art means a canvas and paint brush, and poets whose artistic world is bounded by figures of speech and the latest in sonnet sequences have become numerous in this age of specialists.

High up in the New Hampshire hills is a camp designed to help artists to avoid the pitfall of the single-track mind. There musician, painter and poet meet in happy harmony and depart at the end of the summer with an appreciative knowledge of one another's art. In this "cultural camp," Beethoven and Shakespeare outrank tennis and swimming, and the campers prefer an evening musical and poetry recital to a golf tournament.

The campers, however, are in no sense a crowd of weaklings. They practice their outdoor sports with gusto. But they have discovered that athletic and artistic pursuits can be combined with stimulating effect.

The Norfleet Camp.

The camp is run by the members of the Norfleet Trio and is known as Norfleet Camp. It is near the famous MacDowell camp for creative artists at Peterboro. Miss Helen Norfleet, one of the founders, is visiting at the home of Mrs. Charles Holman, 2700 Connecticut avenue.

"The camp grew out of our years of experience in giving concerts," said Miss Norfleet yesterday. "In almost every town we visited, teachers would bring their talented pupils to us and ask us to hear them play. In talking to these pupils, we found one condition almost universal. The children had good teachers and excellent technique, but almost none of them had any knowledge of the cultural arts, or knew anything about music outside of their own lines of study.

"In our camp we combine the pleasures and benefits of camp life with the artistic environment that permits the girls to grow in their knowledge of the arts.

Art and Athletics Blend.

"The camp is limited to 30 girls because we want the atmosphere to be that of a happy family. We have 12 instructors, who are chosen for their artistic ability and their personality."

None of the camp activities are compulsory, according to Miss Norfleet, as the whole purpose of the camp is to make the study of the arts a joyous, pleasant experience.

"Every morning after breakfast the girls meet on the porch and sing together," she said. "During the summer they learn to sing in four or five languages. The songs are classical and folk songs of all nationalities. In this way the girls become familiar with the music of all countries, and when the summer is over they can place any song by its national characteristics.

"When the singing is over the girls break up into little groups, according to the degree of advancement in their music, and practice with an instructor. The afternoons are devoted to sports. In the evenings the girls listen to concert or music, or any other instrument they prefer."

Her Camp Mingles Culture With Native

Miss Helen Norfleet is one of the founders of a cultural camp in New Hampshire, at which musicians are assisted in developing a sympathetic interest in the arts outside of their own sphere.

Seal Warrant Charges Fraud In Jobless Fees

Counsel Defies Efforts of F. G. Gardner's Friends to Hush Up Case.

F. G. Gardner, former New York State senator and reported to be a frequenter of the rooms of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee, was being sought last night on a warrant charging him with receiving money for promising employment to jobless persons without having a license.

The warrant was sworn to by Assistant Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal

Seal charges that in spite of the protest of Albert A. Grorud, special assistant to the Indian Affairs Committee, that prosecution of Gardner would embarrass Senator Lynn J. Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, the warrant was obtained by Seal.

The prosecutor also charged that both Grorud and J. M. Baer, a former Representative from North Dakota, sought to have the prosecution stifled. Seal said he refused to accede to their requests, and Baer told Seal, according to the prosecutor, he would appeal to Commissioner George E. Allen.

Allen is reported to have refused him an audience.

$175 in Fees Charged.

Gardner was accused by Seal of having received $100 from W. E. Hawks, of 540 B street northeast, and $75 from Mrs. Henrietta Moore, of 1328 Park road northwest, by promising to secure positions for them. Gardner was reported to have resided at the Cavalier Hotel.

Seal charged that Gardner is alleged to have first approached Mrs. Moore, and for the sum of $75 agreed to have her son's driving permit returned to him. It had been suspended for a Baltimore traffic violation.

When he was unsuccessful, he referred her to F. Hunter Creech, a local attorney, to whom she asserted she paid $25 for services; but he, too, was unsuccessful, Seal quoted Mrs. Moore as saying. Then Gardner promised to secure a position for either her or her son in return for the $75. Neither of them secured a job, she charged.

Hawks, according to Seal, said he was referred to the "Senator," as Gardner is known to them, by Mrs. Moore. Hawks charged that Mrs. Moore referred to Gardner as "some one with influence." After payment of the money, Hawks said, he did not receive a position.

Both Paid by Check.

Hawks said he paid Gardner by check on December 17, 1932, and Mrs. Moore's check was dated January 28, 1932, according to Seal.

Seal yesterday went to the office of Senator Frazier and he asserted he was informed by Frazier he knew Gardner, but Gardner had never attempted to secure a job through him. "The prosecution of Gardner," Senator Frazier said, "would not embarrass me in the slightest."

Baer, who is now employed as a cartoonist for a labor paper, told Seal he was afraid the prosecution of Gardner might involve him, because he had indorsed one of the checks and requested Seal not proceed with the case because it might "involve some one on the Hill," according to Seal.

Both Grorud and Baer, according to Seal, wanted permission granted Gardner to repay the money he had received, but Seal refused. When Gardner appeared at Seal's office, he declared he had never received any money from Hawks. Rather, he said, he had loaned him $100.

Allen for Clean-up.

Then Seal exhibited a check, payable to Gardner and signed by Hawks, for $100. Confronted with this, Gardner said: "I forgot I had received any money from him," Seal declared.

Grorud represented to Seal that Gardner was a "particular friend of Senator Frazier, but the Senato denied this.

"Regardless of whose friend he might be, I don't see why any mercy should be shown to any one who takes such fees from any one in these times when poor persons are grasping at anything to obtain work," Seal said.

Seal has been designated by Commissioner Allen to investigate employment agencies. The Commissioner is determined to wipe out all agencies which receive registration fees from unemployed when they have no jobs to offer.

ginal requirements, and some changes in the section requiring segregation of broker and trading activities.

He would give no detailed information about the changes proposed in the marginal requirements, but said the bill would be modified to require quarterly instead of monthly reports from listing corporations, with audits once or twice a year instead of quarterly.

Responding to requests of Senators Goldsborough (Republican), Maryland, and Kean (Republican), New Jersey, however, Fletcher said the committee probably would call Eugene Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Board; representatives of the New York, Chicago and Philadelphia Clearing Houses, and one or two New York bankers.

Stamp Rush

St. Mary's City Expecting 10,000 Philatelists.

Leonardtown, Md., March 8 (Spl.).—Stamp collectors are besieging the tiny postoffice at St. Marys City, presided over for ten years by Postmistress Ethel Goddard, for information on the special tercentenary stamp, scheduled for sale March 23.

It is estimated that 10,000 stamp collectors will storm the building on that date, since the St. Marys City postoffice will be the first to offer the stamps.

Postoffice officials are reported to have engaged the music hall of St. Mary's Seminary to facilitate handling of the crowds. An electric canceling machine will replace the small hand machine ordinary used.

Group to Hear Of Army Auto Buying Today

MacArthur First Witness as Inquiry Shifts From Planes.

The purchase of trucks by the War Department, subject of a District grand jury inquiry for more than a month, will be taken up by the House Military Affairs special investigating committee today, with Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Chief of Staff, as the first witness.

Turning its attention temporarily from procurement of airplanes, the committee, of which Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, is chairman, will question Gen. MacArthur concerning other Army purchases, with particular attention to motorized equipment bought through the office of Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring.

The grand jury, having heard some 50 witnesses on the subject of recent War Department business methods, was reported yesterday to be deliberating its findings, from which a number of indictments are expected.

The Associated Press reported last night that the grand jury "learned during the day that leads which investigators had followed in Kansas apparently were fruitless."

Rogers said yesterday his committee, which has been devoting its attention to aircraft procurement, "is going into all these other purchases, trucks included."

The committee yesterday heard Alexander E. de Seversky, airplane builder, protest against War Department procurement methods. De Seversky, a naturalized American of Russian birth, claimed that if competitive bidding had been in effect, he could have provided the Army with a plane far superior to anything now being flown in the United States.

Ship Is Loading Junk for Japan

Norfolk Vessel Takes on Scrap Iron at Huge Price Increase.

Newport News, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Loading about 2,000 tons of scrap steel here, the Norwegian steamer Ortwo will move to Norfolk tomorrow to load an additional 6,000 tons. All of it will be delivered in Japan.

It was stated by Ortwo officers that Japan is buying scrap iron and steel all over America and that large quantities will be shipped to Norfolk and Newport News to be loaded.

Included in what the Ortwo will load will be metal from 1,800 discarded freight and coal cars purchased from the Norfolk Southern Railroad. These cars are now being scrapped at Berkley.

Since Japan has been in the market for all kinds of metal, the price of old iron and steel has advanced almost 200 per cent, it was stated here today. Japan is paying $12 a ton for the junk which a few months ago was selling for about $3.

It was reported here that the wholesale purchase of scrap metal by Japan has attracted attention in Washington.

$10,000 Lent Postoffice Aid By Henderson

Gove's Note Torn Up, Air Transport Operator Tells Inquiry.

Association. A telegram addressed to President Roosevelt by David L. Behncke, president of the association, said that the pilots considered his proposals as "the soundest and most constructive move yet taken in the entire history of air commerce in this country."

Henderson explained his loan to Gove as the result of a long, intimate friendship. Gove was in trouble because of heavy stock losses, and, through a series of loans, Henderson helped him out to the extent of $10,000 for which he took Gove's note.

The loans were made late in 1930, a few months after the United had secured several route certificates as a result of the meetings of operators held in May and June, 1930.

Knew He'd Pay it Back.

Early in 1931, said Henderson, Gove protested with tears in his eyes that he planned to get a second mortgage on his house, the only thing he had left, in order to meet the note his friend held.

"But I told him not to do anything like that. I said I knew he would pay it if he got the money, and to show my faith in him I tore the note up.

"I don't think it was improper to lend him the money under the circumstances."

Except for Christmas presents of cigars and wine to various Postoffice officials, Henderson said this was the only gift he had ever made to any member of the department.

Henderson, asked about the President's proposals for air-mail legislation, said he was opposed to the three-year limitation that the President would place on all contracts, and also the proposal to eliminate from rebidding those officials who had previously secured contracts.

"It would mean that we would be deprived of the right to bid in order to use our property, consisting of 100 planes which cost $300,000,000."

Criticizing the plan to allow bidders six months in which to qualify under the new requirements, Henderson said:

Couldn't Prepare System.

"It would take a great deal longer than six months for any newcomer in this business to procure his planes and pilots."

Asked by Chairman Black whether he approved of the proposed divorce of operating companies from manufacturing subsidiaries, the witness replied:

"I think that it is a very wise provision. But it is going to be difficult. If United Aircraft tried to sepatrate the Pratt & Whitney (motor) manufacturing company from the operating company, it would be like trying to make a poached egg out of an omelette."

Col. Brittin, who told the committee he had lost his job with Northwest Airways when he was sentenced for contempt of the Senate for destruction of air-mail correspondence under subpena by the Black committee, related in detail the events of the 1930 conference.

Brittin seemed much surer of himself yesterday than on the occasion of his last appearance before the committee which resulted with such dramatic suddenness in his sojourn in the District Jail.

Just Sought Agreement.

"Postmaster General Brown had determined that there were 12 routes in question," he said, "and he asked the operators to agree as to who should receive these lines. That was the sole object of the mass meeting as far as I could tell.

"The fact that all this was legal or not did not concern us. We were there to follow out the plan of the Postmaster General. We were to reach an agreement about who was to get the lines. He made the rules and we weren't in a position to question him. After all, he was the Postmaster General."

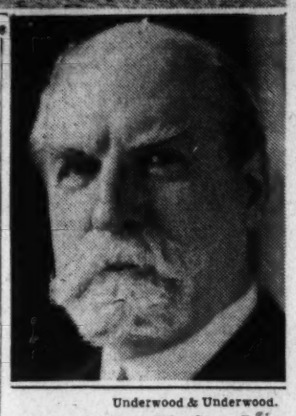
He said his company secured a contract for the Milwaukee-Detroit route over Lake Michigan, but sublet it immediately "under definite instructions from the PMG" to the Kohler Aviation Corporation.

Black introduced a telegram sent by Brittin to his secretary in Minneapolis in which he suggested that news of the operators' meetings in Washington be kept confidential.

"If it becomes common property, the PMG would get sore and probably take it out on us," concluded the message.

He concluded his testimony with a recital of the Christmas gifts he had presented to Postoffice officials. They included $300 worth of wolfskins, tanned and decorated with the air mail map, and $300 worth of fine handkerchiefs monogrammed with the air mail insignia.

The committee adjourned until next week.



Underwood & Underwood.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes yesterday cited valued collections in the Freer Gallery (above), which might be added to if the Capital possessed a National Museum of Fine Arts. He called the present conditions "crowded and unsuitable."

Justice Hughes Urges National Arts' Gallery

Need for Adequate Show Quarters Impressed Upon Regents.

Chief Justice of the United States Charles Evans Hughes, as chancellor of the Smithsonian Institution, alluding to the "crowded condition and unsuitable character" of present provisions for housing the Nation's art, yesterday gave his complete indorsement to the proposal for an adequate National Museum of Fine Arts.

Commenting on the fact that in recent years discriminating patrons of art possessing priceless collections have been reluctant to support a National Museum where virtually no satisfying facilities exist for their display, the Chief Justice said:

"Many collections of rare importance and great value now in the hands of private American collectors would undoubtedly be speedily added to those already in the custody of the institution, should a suitable building be provided in which they may be appropriately shown.

Treasures Would Grow.

"In this way," he continued, "the Nation may hope in time to gather a collection of art treasures second to none.

"The regents (of the Smithsonian Institution) have attempted at various times to obtain a suitable building for the National Gallery of Art," he said, "and have had plans for such a building prepared by Mr. Charles A. Platt, the eminent New York architect, who designed the Freer Gallery. The funds for its erection have not been forthcoming. Mr. Platt made an extensive study of European art galleries in order to embody in his plans their best features."

As chancellor of the Board of Regents, the body vested with the destiny and supervision of whatever art collections the present National Art Gallery now has, Justice Hughes has been in touch with its peculiar problems for decades.

"Congress," he explained, "in the act establishing the Smithsonian Institution, August 10, 1846, provided that it should, among other features, have a gallery of art.

Works Worth Millions.

"In consequence of its distinctive standing," he continued, "there have come to the Smithsonian Institution in the past important art collections, in addition to the great Freer Art Gallery, valued at many millions of dollars, but, owing to the crowded conditions and unsuitable character of the building in which they are housed, these accretions have now practically ceased."

This, rather succinctly put, is the situation as it now stands. The status now allotted to our National art reputation, called "disgraceful" by many leaders in art circles, has been brought to the attention of directors and heads of the Nation's most important art museums. Their feelings in the matter have been aptly summed up by Herbert E. Winlock, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, who said fine art collections at the National Museum here have been heretofore treated as a "mere department," without "separate individuality."

Virginia Senate Passes School Term Measure

Pay Is Assured in Plan Urged by Peery; Lift Income Tax.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, March 8.—A minimum eight-month school term throughout Virginia was assured today when the Senate concurred in House passage of the Hall-Staples bill.

Gov. Peery said the measure would assure school teachers against working without pay by guaranteeing State salaries of $475 a year in addition to compensation received from counties and cities.

"This is a most important bill and I'm highly gratified to have it passed," the governor declared. "I will sign the law as soon as it is printed."

The Hall-Staples bill imposed $1,211,000 in new taxes, $711,000 recommended by Gov. Peery and the remainder by former Gov. Pollard. Included were revised merchants' taxes and increased levies on gross receipts of public utility corporations.

Tax Bracket Widened.

Income tax exemptions for married men were lowered from $2,800 to $2,000, and those for single persons from $1,250 to $1,000. Deductions for dependents were cut from $400 to $200 each.

Senators voting for passage: Apperson, Battle, Connor, Dickinson, East, Eggleston, Ferguson, Fuller, Gilliam, Hilliard Layman, Miller, Montague, Moseley, Robinette, Rogers, Rust, Saunders, Shumate, Staples, Vaden, Walter, Wicker, Wickham, Wright. Total, 25.

Against—Burks, Cather, Chase, Garrett, Holland, Holt, Smith, Thompson, Tuck, Vaughan, Weaver and Woodson. Total, 12.

Not voting—Lesner, Norris and Watson

A move by Senator Weaver, Front Royal, to have the State borrow $1,000,000 for schools instead of imposing new taxes was defeated, 23 to 16.

Snce the Hall-Staples proposal will not apply to school funds for the current fiscal year, the House passed a bill by Delegate Hall, Leesburg, to permit counties and cities to finance eight-month terms this year by borrowing from the State literary fund.

Judge Bill Defeated.

A bill by Senator Smith, Louisa, to prohibit the Governor from filling circuit court judgeship vacancies during the legislative recess was killed, 40 to 38, in the House. Backers protested the measure would enable consolidation of judicial districts later by the Assembly without legislating judges out of office.

The House approved a Senate proposal for a new Staunton city charter. Outstanding provisions included that the council was to consist of five members unless the people vote at a special election for a governing body of either seven or nine; the council to fill vacancies in elective offices, with approval of the corporation court judge; the council and the State fee commission to fix the pay of the commissioner of revenue and treasurer, any disagreement to be settled by the corporation judge; the commissioner of revenue to name his own assistants and the council to limit the number of aids.

The biennial budget will be considered tomorrow by the Senate. The measure was passed by the House a fortnight ago.

Arlington Acts To Alter Street Names in April

College Girls' Clubs Stage Play for Patients at Walter Reed.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Advertising this week of the ordinance providing for renaming streets in Arlington County will permit the inauguration of the system early in April, County Manager Roy S. Braden announced yesterday. The law required that the ordinance be advertised for two weeks.

Proposed changes in street names will be of special value to the postal authorities as well as to fire departments, Braden says.

Ignoring inclement weather, members of the Glee Club and the dramatic and dancing clubs of Arlington Hall, Junior College for Girls, visited Walter Reed Hospital last night and presented a program of entertainment for the patients.

The program, in charge of Mme. Regina Vicarino, included solos by Josephine Carter and Thelma Troxler and a one-act play.

Meeting tonight in the Clarendon offices of A. L. Kelley, president of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, the membership committee, of which William E. Robey is chairman, will complete plans for a membership drive.

The Boys' Columbus Club will meet tonight in the Knights of Columbus Hall in Clarendon.

The Boy Scout Troop, No. 103, of Lyon Village will meet tonight in the James Monroe School, Aurora Heights.

Housewives in Arlington County are warned of thieves of they leave clothes hanging in their yards.

It was revealed yesterday that one Clarendon family left a number of blankets on the line to dry and when the family returned the blankets were gone.

executing such a law as this—and I want to express my admiration of the executive skill you have demonstrated.

Criticizes Policy.

"My criticism, however, is directed to your policy, as I have observed it in operation, of allowing big business to go its way unchecked and of failing to protect the rights of the little business man, the consumers and workers.

"The fact that labor is represented, as I am told, on less than 10 out of the 300 or 400 code authorities that have already been signed and that consumer representation is also absent from the majority of them, would seem enough to condemn your present set-up—for, as you know, the code authorities are the bodies to whom violation of the rights of the workers are sent by your State compliance directors.

"To put the matter in a nutshell, can you name me more than one town in Pennsylvania, with more than a dozen factories, where the NRA is not being violated 50 per cent or worse? I would appreciate an answer and not a wise-crack."

and waiting, he met Shoemaker in front of his apartment, Thirteenth and Clifton streets.

They conversed at length. Truscott told him about the warrant and Shoemaker said he already knew about it. They tried to reach an agreement, and finally it was decided to meet in court tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Shoemaker said he would be there "if he wasn't too busy."

"If I can't make it I'll call the District Attorney," he said.

Preferred to Notify Him.

It was only after two attempts to have the warrant withdrawn that Shoemaker was given official notice. Previously United States Attorney Garnett had ordered an "immediate arrest," but police apparently preferred to "notify" him of the warrant.

When reports reached Garnett that no attempt had been made to arrest Shoemaker, he communicated with Maj. Brown and demanded immediate action.

A few hours after Shoemaker learned the warrant had been issued on Tuesday, he thundered into Garnett's office and loudly denounced everything and everyone.

"I won't be prosecuted," he said.

Garnett calmly replied that he would, and told Shoemaker:

"There are enough policemen in town to arrest you and you will be prosecuted if I have to do it myself."

Shoemaker, when questioned yesterday afternoon, charged "the whole thing is backed by a couple of cheap officials seeking publicity."

He also re-announced intention to obtain perjury warrants against the taxi driver and his witnesses.

Fascist Threat Seen: Officers Join NRA

Gen. Johnson's advisers since before the birth of the Blue Eagle did not quiet their fears.

Swope was expressing his enthusiasm at the cooperation of the 5,000 business leaders and members of code authorities who came to Washington for the code authority meetings this week.

"It was the first meeting of its kind that's ever been held—except perhaps in Italy," said the industrialist.

Italy, it is recalled, is the birthplace of Fascism.

In his address opening the code conference last Monday, the President specifically denied that NRA was Fascism or anything like it. Secretary of Commerce Roper reiterated this denial in his speech when the conference closed Wednesday. Gen. Johnson, however, remarked: "I am a soldier by training and inclination."

There have been soldiers serving under him in scattered posts during his adminstraton of NRA. The use of Army officers dd not becomc a definite policy, however, until recently. It was noticed that this development has taken place simultaneously with the general's revelation to code authorities that up to now he had been gentle in "cracking down" on noncompliers.

"You ain't heard nothin' yet," he told the code authority members Wednesday night.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Goes Goose Hunting

AFTER Blackie's experience with Ram Sheep, he thought and thought and thought where he could go and get a good dinner without getting into trouble. After thinking over a whole lot of things, he decided that it wouldn't be much trouble to catch a goose, since they can't run fast and can't fly but a little way at a time. Besides, when a goose goes to sleep, she covers up her eyes and ears, so it is mighty hard to wake her up.

Blackie Bear knew this, and he knew where a flock of geese slept every night, so he made up his mind to have a good, fat goose for his supper. But he didn't know that geese have policemen that watch over the flock at night, just as the policemen in the towns watch over the other people while they sleep, but they do. These watchmen are ganders, the daddy geese. One of them stays awake every night to watch over all the others, and to wake them up if anything is about to trouble them.

He Hollers for Help.

If he hears any noise that he doesn't like, he raises his head as high as he can and hollers, "quack, quack, quack," so loud that he wakes up all the other geese, and then they are ready for a fight.

Well, this night that we are talking about, when Blackie went for his goose supper, he thought that they were all fast asleep, and that he could walk right up and pick out a good, fat goose and run away with her. Just as he got most to the flock and was picking out the biggest goose in the lot, the old police gander screamed out "quack, quack, quack," so loud that in a minute every single one of the geese were awake and "quacking," too.

This surprised Blackie so that he didn't know what to do, so he stood right still for a minute. It isn't good for anybody to stand still when trouble is coming to him, and it wasn't good for Blackie, for while he was just standing there, the policeman flew up on his back and grabbed Blackie's ear in his beak and bit down on it as hard as he could. Then old Mother Goose left her six little baby goslings in the bed and jumped for Blackie's sore nose and bit it till it bled.

Policeman Rides on Neck.

That was too much for Blackie, so he turned around and started for home as fast as he could gallop, but the policeman was right straddle of his neck and still had Blackie's ear in his mouth, and was holding on hard. Blackie ran mighty fast, but he couldn't get Daddy Gander off till he got to the woods and ran through some bushes. He didn't even stop funning when he got the goose off of his back, but kept right on running and "woofing" 'til he got home, and then he jumped in his house and slammed the door and put up the bar.

Blackie didn't get any supper at all that night, and he had another lot of mighty bad dreams. It looked to him like he would have to go to eating grass, like Mrs. Moo Cow, for he seemed to get the worst of it every time he tried to get any sort of meat for his dinner. After thinking it over for a while, he decided to go fishing tomorrow, for he was sure a fish could not hurt his sore nose, and he liked fish, anyway.

Taxi, Private Auto Insuring Bills Backed

Cab Liability Plan Is Indorsed by Large Operators.

Discourtesy of Drivers Is Attacked Before House Group.

The automobile liability insurance bills, one for taxicabs and one for the private car owner, were indorsed generally yesterday at a hearing conducted by a sub-committee of the House District Committee.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer indorsed both bills as did representatives of the United States and Washington Chambers of Commerce, the Board of Trade and the American Automobile Association.

Discourtesy of taxicab drivers was denounced by Representative Withrow (Republican), of Wisconsin, during the hearing. He said that the only time taxi drivers are courteous is when "you're in their cabs."

The taxicab liability bill was approved by the Independent Taxi Owners Association, which operates the Diamond cabs, and the Blue Light Cab Co.

Counsel for the latter recommended that the bill specify the amount of liability insurance or bond, while Ringgold Hart, representing the Diamond Association, suggested that determination of the amount be left to the Public Utilities Commission.

T. F. Beehler, in behalf of the A. A. A., said that only about 700 auto owners in the District are without liability insurance and that these are often involved in accidents. He said the legislation would be an incentive to more careful driving.

Death of Jett Basis of Suit

$25,000 Damages Asked by Two Brothers of Deceased.

Suit for $25,000 was filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Earl E. Jett, 3573 Warder street northwest, and Charles C. Jett, 1716 Irving street northwest, because of the death of their brother, Wilmer Lee Jett, whose body was found on the tracks of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. near Glen Echo, Md., last July.

The brothers claimed Jett had been killed through the negligent operation of a street car. The Capital Transit Co. was named defendant.

Jett's death brought about an investigation by Maryland police, who feared that he had met with foul play. It was learned that he had attended a party in a cabin near the place where his body was found, but the investigation failed to disclose any criminality.

Senate Unit Backs Rail Electrification

Bill for District Project Reported Favorably.

Electrification of the lies of steam railroads within the District is authorized under a bill favorably reported yesterday by the Senate District Committee.

The bill was drafted to permit completion of the electrification of the Pennsylvania Railroad lines between Washington and New York. The road was alloted $77,000,000 for this by the Public Works Administration and work already has been begun.

Electrification of the Potomac yards and the lines leading into Washington is a part of the program. Favorable report on the measure was made by the District Commissioners.

Rescue Squad Meets.

The Prince Georges County (Md.) Rescue Squad will meet tonight in the Bladensburg Fire House for the annual election of officers. Committee reports will be heard.

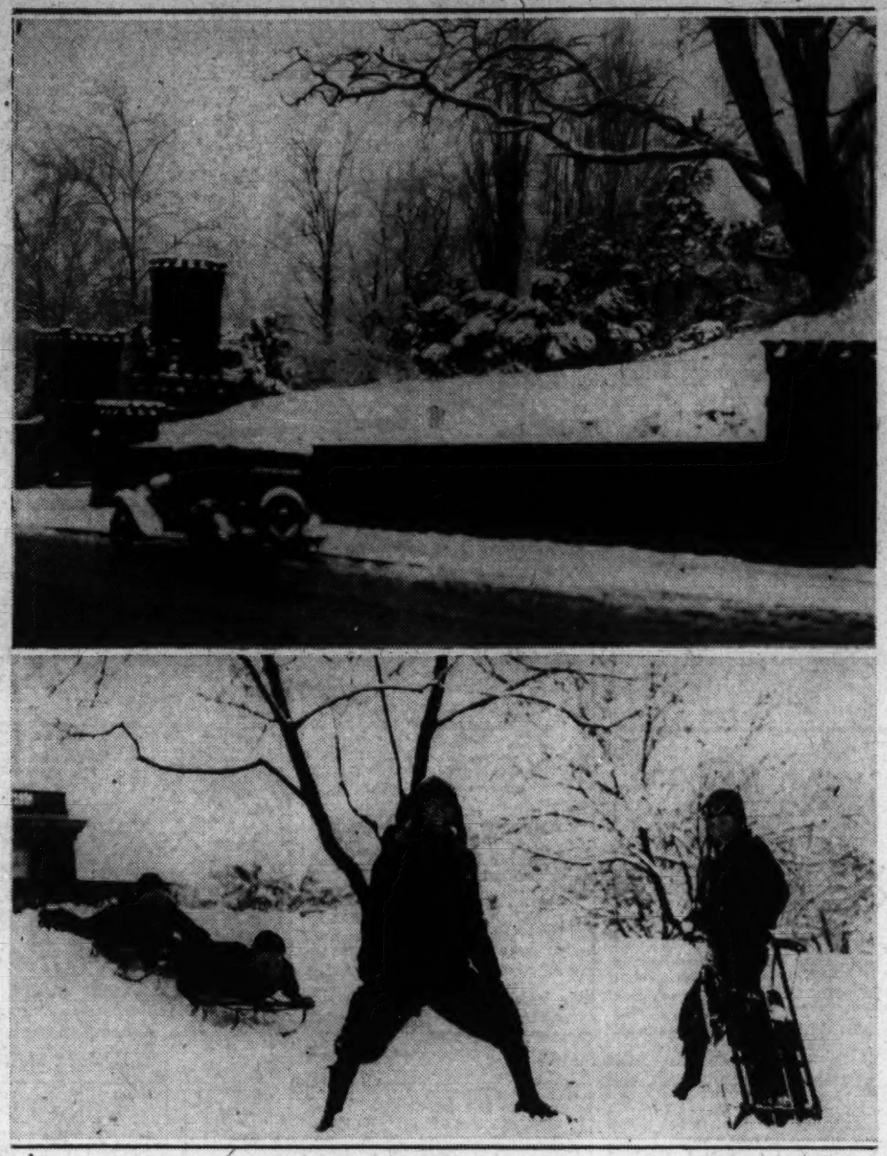
Snow Snaps Symptoms of Spring



Post Staff Photos.

Winter, supposed to make its official exodus in two weeks, has plenty of sting left, as these pictures made during yesterday's snowfall indicate. One is a weather study at Henderson Castle, Sixteenth street and Florida avenue. The other shows Billy and Borden Leane, brothers, about to coast through James Haire, the human bridge, while Dick Bean looks on. This photo was taken on Walter Reed Hospital grounds.

4-Inch Snow Ends "Spring" In Washington

Street Car Service Kept at Normal; Slush Causes Accidents.

Washington's first taste of spring weather was abruptly ended yesterday by a drenching snowfall, which gave the weather man another setback, turned the city's streets and sidewalks into perilous slush pools and caused a number of traffic accidents.

The forecast for yesterday was "mostly cloudy and slightly colder." That was correct, so far as it went, but no mention was made of snow, of which there was about four inches.

Todays' prediction is "fair with not much change in temperature." But just in case of another mix-up, the city refuse division will have 1,00 men available this morning for snow removal worfl. At 6 p. m. yesterday 800 reported for duty, relieving 200 "white wings" who had been on the job since morning.

Street-car service was kept up to normal during the day while 300 men, 38 sweepers and 16 scrapers were keeping the tracks clear. Probably the most serious mishap was the breaking of one car's contact bar, caused by ice in the slot, whic hheld up 1,000 employes of the Bureau of Engraving and printing for 20 minutes during the rush hour.

While the District's plows and flushers were cleaning downtown streets, Corporation Counsel William W. Bride was recommending that the Commissioners draft an enforceable law compelling property owners to clear their sidewalks of snow.

At present, the only recourse the city has against those who fail to do so is to have the snow removed by the street cleaning department and then sue the home owner to recover the cost. Such action has never been taken while he was in office, the outgoing corporation counsel said last night.

He urged that snow removal fees be assessed against property owners in the form of a tax similar to the real estate taxes and providing the same penalties for failure to pay.

After hearing Bride's criticism, the Senate District Committee called on the Commissioners to draft a measure which would require property owners to remove snow from sidewalks.

Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, has pending a bill providing a $5 fine for failure to clean sidewalks.

The snowfall sent the Potomac a little higher, but there is no danger, said Harbor Precinct police.

2 Women Claim $20,000 in Jewels, Have Same Names

Miami, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Jewelry valued at $20,000 was locked in the vault of the United States marshal here today while two women, each named Ruby Ridgeway, had until April 2 to present the Federal Court their claims of ownership.

The jewelry was surrendered to the marshal, on replevin order, by Miss Ruby Ridgeway, Miami teacher. Federal authorities said she understood d ocuments were coming here from Oklahoma to substantiate the claim of Mrs. Ruby Ridgeway, visitor here from Tulsa.

The jewelry was sent by registered mail on January 23 by a Tulsa bank to Ruby Ridgeway, in care of a Miami bank. The postoffice notified Miss Ridgeway of the package's arrival and she accepted it.

She believed it had been sent by her father, who had lived near Tulsa., about the same time a claim was filed by Mrs. Ridgeway with an insurance company to cover the loss.

Police Judge Named For Prince Georges

Justice of the Peace Thomas D. Griffith, of Forestville, Md., yesterday afternoon was appointed acting police court magistrate for Prince Georges County by Judge Joseph G. Mattingly, associate justice of the Seventh Judicial District of Maryland.

Griffith will serve during the absence of Judge J. Chew Sheriff, who is ill. He will take over his new duties tomorrow at Upper Marlboro. All cases yesterday in Police Court at Capitol Heights were continued until next week.

Virginia Plant In Bankruptcy, Suspends Work

Petition Claims Quarry Is Insolvent; 500 Are Out of Jobs.

Charlottesville, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—The Virginia-Alberene Corporation, one of the largest soapstone manufacturing concerns in the world, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the Charlottesville office of the United States District Court of Western Virginia late this afternoon.

Filing of the petition by Wirt P. Marks, jr., of Richmond, followed closing of the company's huge quarries and plant at Schuyler, in Nelson County. The first announcement here today was that a receivership would be sought.

A schedule of liabilities and assets did not accompany the petition, but Mr. Marks said that this would be filed within ten days.

Col. William Sage, manager of the soapstone works and a leading citizen of Albemarle, today confirmed the report that the compauy would seek receivership.

There are 110,000 outstanding shares of common stock without par value and 55,000 preferred shares.

Charlottesville financiers said the receivership was necessitated by inability to meet operating debts around $500,000. Bonds amounting to $1,500,000 have been in default a year and a half.

Closing of the soapstone plant, which has been operated for more than half a century affects 500 skilled laborers, who have been limited to part-time employment for more than a year.

Rapid Weather Changes Cause Heavy Damage on Coast Lines

Atlantic Seaboard Shifts in Last Few Months Above Normal.

Radical changes in the Atlantic coast line, particularly where beaches and summer resorts are located, have developed as the result of extreme weather conditions during the last seven or eight months.

Rapid and extensive temperature changes during the winter followed the heavy rains and semihurricane winds of late summer to produce what is probably the greatest degree of change in a similar period within the past half century.

These facts, based upon observations and experiences of Coast and Geodetic Survey experts, were revealed yesterday in connection with early studies of the damage that has been done.

It was pointed out that rapid alternates of warm weather and low temperatures loosened the shoreline earth structure in many places. This has been caused by the freezing of water that earlier seeped into the ground, with the resulting expansion causing "spreads" of earth along the shore. Loosened, the earth will open to erosive forces when heavy summer storms and tidal action attack it.

Storms last August, which resulted directly in a large amount of erosion and collapse of shore, also helped to make it easier for recent freezes to produce destructive expansions, it was indicated.

Floodwaters descending streams that empty into the ocean possibly will bring dangers of further erosion where the mouths of streams are located near sand bars and loose shore formations.

3 Mapes Tax Bills Revived By Blanton

Texan, 30-Cent Slash Advocate, Now Sees a 90-Cent Cut.

Commissioners to Confer On Supplemental Items Today.

Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, who confidently predicts he will bring about a 30-cent reduction in the District tax rate, yesterday proposed revival of three of the pigeonholed Mapes tax bills in explaining his plan to the House Appropriations sub-committee.

Blanton stated that if the District adopted income, an inheritance and automobile weight taxes, the local rate may be reduced even as low as 90 cents.

He had placed in the record tabulations revealing how many department executive salaries have increased within recent years.

A good share of the savings which would make the cut in the tax rate possible, however, has already been effected by the Budget Bureau, Blanton revealed.

Surplus for Realty Cut.

Blanton said he does not expect the Budget Bureau to approve any considerable amount of the supplemental estimates which have been submitted by the Commissioners; consequently, he believes that the greater share of the surplus, now estimated at $3,300,000, will be available for the realty tax reduction.

The surplus anticipated at the end of the fiscal year, 1935, was at first estimated at $5,000,000, but in view of the almost certain approval of the 5-and-5 pay restoration plan, District officials have been forced to lop off $1,700,000, of which $500,000 would take care of the 5 per cent from February 1 to June 30, of this year.

The District Commissioners will have a hearing today at the Budget Bureau on the supplemental items which they are proposing to utilize the surplus.

The committee this morning will take up Public Utilities Commission estimates.

While the majority party on the committee has indicated that it has no intention of proposing an increase in the Federal contribution of $5,700,000 as carried in the 1935 estimates, the Commissioners are making a plea at every opportunity for an increase because of the loss of more taxable property to the Federal Government.

A Permanent Adjustment.

The District heads have told the committee they believe a permanent adjustment in the fiscal relations policy between the District and Federal Governments should be adopted, so as to remove the uncertainty which confronts Commissioners in drafting the budget each year.

They indicated they favored the proposal of Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate Appropriations sub-committee, that a percentage figure be adopted as a permanent plan.

Chairman Cannon of the House sub-committee, has expressed his personal opposition to the proposal, and Representative Blanton has said that he would oppose any change in the $5,700,000 contribution unless it were downward.

"Idle Speech" Bishop's Topic

West Virginia Prelate Is Heard at Church of Epiphany.

The Right Rev. R. E. L. Strider, Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of West Virginia, spoke yesterday at the Church of the Epiphany on "Idle Speech." His talk was one of a series of Lenten sermons.

"Jesus is very explicit in telling us that we shall have to give account for our idle speech," Bishop Strider stated, "and by idle speech He means speech which is lazy, unthoughtful and indiscriminating. It does not necessarily mean deliberately malicious or untrue speech.

"There can be no doubt but that some of the problems of our day are due to irresponsible speech on the part of all of us. The clergy, the high-pressure salesman, the oily-tongued promoters and the ballyhoo specialists all are more or less guilty. Our civilization is answering in grim and ghastly fashion for its idle words."

Lorton Graft Quiz To Continue Today

Col. Peak to Appear as Query Witness.

The investigation of charges of graft and favoritism to wealthy prisoners at the Lorton Reformatory will be resumed this afternoon at the District Building when Col. William L. Peak, superintendent of the institution is expected to refute charges against his administration by Representative Shoemaker, of Minnesota.

Other witnesses to be called are Marion C. Hargroves, District purchasing officer, and a representative of the auditor's office. They are expected to testify to the manner of awarding contracts.

Elizabeth Newton Scheduled First Woman Patent Officer

Roper Due to Nominate Engine Authority as Commissioner.

Elizabeth Jane Newton, the Gibson, N. C., girl who made good as an authority on internal combustion motors, is expected to be recommended Monday as assistant patent commissioner, it was learned yesterday.

Secretary of Commerce Roper plans to send her name to the White House, making her the first woman commissioner of patents. Miss Newton now is an associate examiner.

The expected nomination will come within a week after another precedent for women office holders—appointment of Judge Florence E. Allen to the Federal bench. Miss Newton also has the distinction of being the first North Carolina woman admitted to plead before the United States Supreme Court.

Still in her early thirties, she is a former high school principal and holder of numerous degrees. Nor has she neglected her piano playing, golf, cooking or social obligations.

A native of Newtonville, S. C., Miss Newton moved to Gibson before she finished high school. After receiving an A. B. from Duke University she taught mathematics and was principal of a Concord, N. C., high school.

Coming to Washington for a visit, she stayed to earn three more degrees and join the Patent Office as an assistant examiner.

As a sort of composite inventor, lawyer and mathematician, Miss Newton passes on dozens of abstruse applications every week. She started with agricultural and dairying appliances. Later she was moved to fire extinguishers, book making and curtains. Now she is "on" technical motors and power plants, her favorite study.

Nor should it be forgotten that she is a descendant of the gentleman who discovered the laws of gravity after an experience with an apple—Sir Isaac Newton.

Woodside Pupils Give "Pied Piper" Tonight

The pupils of the Woodside School of Silver Spring, Md., will present as their spring play tonight at 8 o'clock "The Pied Piper of Hamelin." Mrs. Helen Lines and Miss Eugenie Hardy are directing the play. The scenery is under the direction of Mrs. Charles Zeller and is being made by Faith Wilson, Betty Rogers and John McQueen, pupils.

The cast consists of Ruth Buchanan, Philip Seltzer George Harmon, Maryann Reynolds, John Morton, Betty Birgfeld, Eugenie Dunn, with William Miller as the piper. Betty Mills and Dorothy Marsonelli give the prologue with James Bacon giving the epilogue.

Virginia Birds' Society Meets At Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Virginia Society of Ornithology will open its fourth annual convention at 2 p. m. today in the George Mason Hotel, presided over by Dr. Ruskin S. Freer, Lynchburg College, Va., president; Charles O. Handley, Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, Richmond, is vice president; Dr. Florence S. Hague, Sweet Briar College, Va., secretary; and John B. Lewis, Amelia, Va., treasurer. The Rev. Dr. William B. McIlwaine and Mrs. Robert Miller Reese are in charge of local arrangements.

One of the main objects of the organization is gathering data for a book on Birds of Virginia, which work has progressed so far that the manuscript is being prepared by Dr. J. J. Murray, editor of the society's official organ, The Raven.

The meeting from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. is open to the public. Papers to be read are "The Bob-White and Some of its Habits," by Charles O. Handley; "Some Literary Aspects of Ornithology," Martin Curtler, Charlottesville, Va.; "The Relation of Bounties on Hawks and Owls to Mouse Injury Increase to Apple Trees," M. G. Lewis, Salem, Va.; "A Day at the Nest of a Caroline Junco," J. J. Murray, of Lexington, Va.; "Adaptation in Birds," R. S. Freer, Lynchburg.

The annual banquet will be at 7 p. m. in the George Mason Hotel, followed by a session at 8.30 p. m. in the Westminster Building. Speakers will be Dr. H. C. Oberholser, of the Biological Survey, Washington, and Arthur H. Howell, of the same society.

The funeral of Wilfred N. Smith, aged 61, who died Wednesday at his home in Washington, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from the Cunningham Funeral Home, 809 Cameron street, Alexandria. The Rev. George S. Vest, rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, will conduct the services, and burial will be in Union Cemetery.

The deceased was a son of the late Samuel and Georgie Smith, of Alexandria, and he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Susie Padgett, of Braddock, Alexandria.

Members of Columbia Engine and Motor Company, No. 4, of the Alexandria Fire Department, will hold a meeting at 7:30 p. m. in observance of the sixty-third anniversary of the founding if the company.

Representative Howard W. Smith, of the Eighth Virginia Congressional District, has taken up with the Secretary of the Interior the matter of nearby grade crossing in answer to the request if the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce.

P. W. Thornton, of Culpeper, has been appointed deputy United States marshal for the Eastern District of Virginia, to take the place of W. S. Schoeni, who has held the position for 21 years.

Red Cross to Cease Giving Needy Cotton

Distribution of cotton cloth to the needy in Prince Georges County, Md., by the Red Cross will cease shortly, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. James Severe, chairman in charge of production for the county relief unit.

Cotton supplies were built up in 1932 by the Government's program of relief buying of the raw staple. This policy now has ended, it was pointed out by Mrs. Severe.

Milk Probe Over Nation Is Demanded

Recommendation Given Senate by McCarran With D. C. Report.

Seal Proposed for Post on National Board to Seek Facts.

National investigation of the milk industry was recommended to the Senate yesterday by the District Committee.

The recommendation was made in a report of an investigation of conditions in the local milk industry made by a special sub-committee over several months.

Senator McCarran (Democrat) Nevada, member of the investigating sub-committee, was author of the recommendation for a National investigation. A resolution providing for such an investigation, introduced by Senator McCarran, is pending before the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Favorable report on the resolution is expected by its backers, which include Senators from milk and dairy sections of the country from New England to the West.

$100,000 Provided.

The resolution provides $100,000 for the investigation and authorizes employment of special assistants by the investigating committee. Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel who conducted the local milk investigation, has been proposed by Senator McCarran to direct the National investigation.

Inclusion of the recommendation for the National investigation in the report on the local situation was sought by Senator McCarran and Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, to strengthen their arguments for the National resolution. The local inquiry, it was said, disclosed many inequalities in the local milkshed and disclosed evidence that similar conditions existed elsewhere.

No Legislation.

The report contained no recommendation for legislation, but Senator McCarran said he would submit later a measure designed to correct conditions. Wasteful overlapping of milk routes in the city were criticized as costly and without benefit to producer or consumer.

Control of shipments of cream from the Northwest into Washington for use in ice cream was recommended. This control could be exercised through health department regulations, which could be promulgated under existing law, the report said.

Submission of the report ends the local milk inquiry except for legislation which may later be drafted on the basis of facts disclosed during its progress and the possibilities of the National investigation recommended.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Dead Outlaw.

There is an end to Wilbur Underhill; they've planted him upon a windswept hill, his form so full of shot and slugs of lead he weighed a ton, the undertakers said. If he's remembered in the coming time, 'twill be because he waded deep in crime, and men will shudder when they view his grave, and say, "There sleeps a most outrageous knave." He was a man of most commanding gifts; he did not need to live by sinful shifts; he had it in him to be great and wise, a bright example to all other guys. His mind was keen, high courage filled his heart, he might have triumphed in the busy mart, or been a leader in some worthy cause, and gained, instead of shame, the world's applause. He was equipped for noble deeds and great, but he disliked whatever course was straight; the path of virtue offered him no thrills; it followed vales, he climbed adventure's hills. He might have mingled with the good and great, but he preferred the base and vicious skate, walked arm in arm with murderers and bums, and left green fields to wander in the slums. He trained with wolves and gained a wolf's renown, and like a wolf at last was hunted down, and it is sad when one of shining gifts from usefulness to degradation drifts, a fugitive from justice and from jail, to point a moral and adorn a tale.

Nats' Bosses Cast Hopeful Eye on Ray Prim, Screw-Ball Rookie

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

BILOXI, Miss., March 8.—C. C. Griffith, who holds the purse strings of the Washington baseball club, feels no disposition to tempt Catcher Cliff Bolton from his High Point (N. C.) home with an offer commensurate with Bolton's esteem of his worth, and there the matter rests.

Moreover, Griffith terms Bolton an ungrateful young man who actually was overpaid for services performed last year, and adds that he would not mind if Bolton carried the salary case to Commissioner Landis, who has authority to adjudicate such matters.

"He would not have an argument to stand on if the case were put up to Landis," said Griffith. "I'm paying him a better than fair salary and he forgets the $3,000 extra he made in the world series. Bolton, of all persons, has no complaint. He can take the case to Landis if he likes."

No Chance With Landis.

It's all right with me, too, Griffith, but I pity Bolton if he does lay his complaint before Landis. I happen to know that the club owners, not the ball players, pay Landis his salary of 40 grand a year, and, dear readers, you can draw your own conclusion when it comes to a decision by the commissioner.

Under the feudal arrangement of players' contracts, the ballplayer must accept what he is offered and like it, or retire from baseball. The option clause gives the club owner, who had the player under contract the preceding year, exclusive rights to his service.

What takes place if a player refuses to rejoin the club that has him under contract is a virtual boycott that excludes him from baseball. The option clause was sustained by the U. S. Supreme Court in 1914 during the days of the Federal League controversy, despite admission that baseball was interstate commerce and the option clause was interpreted as a measure in restraint of trade, but organized baseball realizes that another court decision might not be favorable and the creed of club owners now is "Keep baseball out of the courts."

Laugh of the Week.

The laugh of the week was the announcement from Fort Myers, Fla., that Connie Mack was training his anemic-hitting outfielder Finney, to play first base in lieu of Jimmy Foxx, who is making serious holdout gestures.

Foxx is in a position to be the first real big league holdout since Eddie Rousch retired temporarily in 1917. Unless Connie Mack meets Foxx's demands, Foxx can retire with the knowledge that only a concrete cellar will keep the Athletics in the league at all.

The spectacle of the Athletics attempting to win ball games with the light hitting Finney playing first base in place of Foxx would be laughable. With Mack having traded off Grove, Walberg, Earnshaw, Bishop and Cochrane, he has no more need for Foxx than he has for oxygen.

Foxx Real Holdout.

Foxx is carrying along his battle for a respectable wage from the vantage point of a tidy sum of earnings in the bank, a vast paid-up farm in Southern Maryland, and attractive offers to turn his talents into other fields, so the Foxx-Mack controversy bears all the earmarks of a nice, drawn-out engagement.

The former Maryland ploughboy has already indicated high feeling in the matter by his statement that Mack signed him at the age of 16 and has been taking advantage of him ever since, in a contract way. His pet peeve is his reward for leading the league in hitting last season and enjoying the best year of his career—the reward being a $6,000 salary slash in his $16,000 contract.

Foxx is demanding $20,000, no less, and he is cheap at the price, if I am being asked.

Princeton Nine Visits Bridgewater April 4-5

Bridgewater Va., March 8 (Spl.). Princeton University baseballers will play here on April 4 and 5 as the feature of the 15-game schedule of the Bridgewater College Eagles. This will be the first time a member of the Big Three has appeared on the Bridgewater field.

Springfield College opens the season here with games on March 29 and 30.

The Eagles will play their namesake, Bridgewater College, of Massachusetts, here on April 20.

Battery candidates already are working out indoors under the direction of Coach Stanley Houser. Indications are that the Eagles will be weak on the mound, but will be strong in other departments.

The schedule:

March 29-30, Springfield.
April 4-5, Princeton; 9-10, Hampden-Sydney; 13-14, Randolph-Macon; 20, Bridgewater, of Massachusetts; 24-25, Hampden-Sydney, there; 26, Virginia Medical, at Richmond; 27-28, Randolph-Macon, at Ashland.
May 5, Virginia Medical.

Ross Gets $35,000 Title Battle Offer

Sought for Klick Fight on Coast July 4.

Oakland, Calif., March 8 (AP).—An offer of a $35,000 guarantee to Barney Ross, of Chicago, to defend his world's lightweight championship against Frankie Klick, San Francisco, in a 10-round bout here July 4 was made today by Ora Forman, local promoter.

Forman expressed belief such a fight would draw gate receipts of $60,000.

Ross' managers said they would consider the offer.

Klick fought a draw with Ross in San Francisco last Monday. The lightweight title was not at stake.

$75,000 Cub Rookie Hurt In Drill

Stainback Fractures His Ankle; Other National League Camp News.

AVALON, Santa Catalina Island, Calif., March 8 (AP).—George ("Tuk") Stainback, rookie outfielder purchased by the Chicago Cubs for $75,000 from Los Angeles, of the Coast League, suffered a slight ankle fracture in training today.

Manager Charlie Grimm said loss of Stainback would be a severe blow to the Cubs. Stainback has been showing excellent form in practice and Grimm was seriously considering him for a regular berth in the outfield.

Orsatti in Conference.

Bradenton, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Ernie Orsatti, one of the Cardinals' four holdouts, conferred with President Sam Breadon here today and later said he was confident an agreement would be reached.

Orsatti said he was willing to take a cut, but considered too drastic the reduction proposed by the club.

Manager Frankie Frisch sent his pitchers, catchers and infielders through two long drills today, stressing the run-up play with runners on first and third.

Reds in Peppery Drill.

Tampa, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Aggression jutting out all over the place, the Cincinnati Reds pounded through batting practice today—pitchers as diligently as the rest—while vowing to carry the winning spirit even into the exhibition games to come.

Tony Piet and Adam Comorosky, acquisitions from the Pittsburgh Pirates, breezed through their first workouts as blithely as the rest. George Wise, shortstop from Topeka, arrived for a try-out.

Portner's Fights Will Be Continued

Ryan's Fund Withdrawal Not to Affect Cards.

Weekly boxing programs will continue to be presented at Portner's Arena, despite the withdrawal of financial support given the club by Charles (Buzzer) Ryan, local sports figure, it was announced last night.

Officials of the Alexandria Day Nursery, which sponsors the weekly bouts, stated that they believed Bill Moses, also a financial backer, would continue to underwrite the club, but in the event he withdrew they were prepared and in a position to continue operation.

Norfolk May Have Baseball at Night

Norfolk, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Night baseball probably will be tried out in Norfolk by the local club in the Piedmont League during the coming season, it was announced here today by H. P. Dawson, business manager for the New York Yankees.

The Yanks will control the Norfolk Team this year and in order to compete with North Carolina, which permits Sunday baseball, it is proposed to play the game under lights in this city.

George Weiss, who has charge of the Yankees' minor league farms, will talk about night baseball here next week when he comes down to look over some of the material sent here to be developed for the Ruppert organization.

The Virginia Legislature having killed a bill permitting Sunday baseball, Dawson figures that night games here would draw capacity crowds. He says only about two night games would be played in any one week.

Giants' Head Spikes Sale Rumors

Stoneham Says Offers Not Received and Club Not on Market.

Reveals Rickard Made Bid of $2,500,000 10 Years Ago.

NEW YORK, March 8 (AP).—Regardless of rumors that have flown thick and fast since the death of John J. McGraw, the New York Giants are not for sale, never have been on the market, and will not be unless some extraordinary, unrefusable offer comes along.

"We might just as well get this straight now," said Charles A. Stoneham, president and majority stockholder of the world champions, in an exclusive interview with the Associated Press today. "No offers have been made me. I expect none. I would not consider selling the Giants unless so much money were offered that no sensible man could refuse."

Many Are Mentioned.

Rumors that the Giants had been sold have for years been a regular spring, summer, fall and winter feature on the baseball calendar. There have been tales of former Mayor Jimmy Walker dickering for control, George M. Cohan, of Broadway; syndicates of various kinds, and this year C. V. Whitney and even the former heavyweight champion, Gene Tunney, have been mentioned as possible purchasers of the world championship property.

"Actually," said Stoneham, "just one legitimate offer has been made me for the club since 1919, when McGraw pursuaded me to purchase control. About ten years ago Tex Rickard made me a proposition of $2,500,000 for 51 per cent of the stock.

Interest Secondary.

"I refused it, because his interest in baseball was secondary. He wanted control of the Polo Grounds so that he could change the stands and the field around to make it a perfect place for boxing for Madison Square Garden. I couldn't agree to that.

"About three months ago a group of men sounded me out again, the first time I had been approached since the Rickard deal. I looked up their financial standings and immediately dropped the matter.

"As for Tunney, I haven't seen or heard from him for four or five years."

No Directorate Change.

There nas been no change in the situation surrounding the directorate of the club since the death of McGraw, manager of the team for 31 years, who with Francis X. McQuade, controlled the minority shares of stock. It has been commonly understood that an agreement existed between Stoneham, McGraw and McQuade, the latter at odds for years with the first two, that the unanimous consent of all three was necessary to dispose of any stock.

"Mrs. McGraw," Stoneham said, "is anxious to retain her share of the property and continue as we did in the past. She will take no active part in the club affairs, however. It is very valuable property, with the team holding the world championship and the Polo Grounds bringing in considerable additional revenue in rentals for boxing matches and professional football games. We would be foolish to dispose of it for anything but a tremendous offer."

Lease Polo Grounds.

Despite Rickard's offer of $2,500,000, which was turned down, the sum frequently mentioned today as the one Stoneham would consider irresistible is $1,800,000. This would buy only the players and National League franchise. The Giants lease the Polo Grounds from the Coogan estate.

Stoneham laughed at the new conception of the Giants' value.

"No one has heard of that kind of money for many years," he said.

Rifle Match Is Won By Greenbrier Team

Lewisburg, W. Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Word was received here from headquarters of the Fifth Corps Area today that Greenbrier Military School is the winner of the corps area rifle match, with a total of 7,494 points of a possible 8,000. Greenbrier had a margin of 209 points over Gary High School, of Indiana, second-place winner.

Bill Preston, captain of the team was high-point man with 770 points of a possible 800.

LEXINGTON, Va., March 8 (Spl.).—Washington's first entry, Emerson Institute, in the South Atlantis Interscholastic basket ball tournament to go on the boards of the Doremus gymnasium at Washington and Lee University here tonight, came through with a crushing victory over the Greenville High School, champions of South Carolina, by a score of 36-27.

Emerson will meet Greenbrier Military Academy, of Lewisburg, W. Va., in the quarter-final round of the tournament tomorrow afternoon. Greenbrier defeated Augusta Military Academy this afternoon in two extra periods, 34-33.

Emerson led all during the first half, due to the stellar shooting of Eddy and the defensive work of Tipton. The first half ended, 16-11, after Greenville had staged a comeback in the final minutes. Cogar opened the game with a field goal, and he was quickly followed by Teammates Tipton, A. Fenlon and Lee Fenlon.

The second half witnessed a strong Greenville comeback that almost tied the score at one point, when Emerson had to cling doggedly to a 2-point margin, but after Cogar sank a pair of free throws, Greenville never again seriously threatened. Wheeler, Cogar and Tipton added the final baskets to clinch Emerson's hold on the quarter-finals.

Following the game, Coach W. P. Sanborn expressed his belief that once past Greenville his team would go on through to the finals.

Greenbriar Wins Thriller.

In the most brilliant game of the afternoon, Greenbriar Military Academy, a seeded team, was forced into two extra periods today to defeat the plucky quint of Augusta Military Academy, 34-33.

The game ended at 30-all when Frank Swink sank a long field goal from the center of the floor just as the final whistle was blowing. George Conley, of Greenbrier, opened the first extra period with ar overhead shot into the basket, but Augusta tied the score a moment later when Frank Valentine dropped both of his free shots. The extra period ended 32-all.

Arthur Sneed draws credit for the victory in the second extra period when he flipped in a field goal after a hard dribble down the length of the court. Dawson Mack was fouled and lined up to sink two free throws; only one went in and Greenbrier was victor in the closely contested game.

Greenbrier will meet the winner of the Emerson-Greenville game in the quarter-finals tomorrow afternoon.

Johnny Ahern led Thomas Jefferson High School, of Richmond, to a close victory in an extra-period game when it defeated the runner-up in the South Carolina State Championship, Spartanburg, by a score of 22-18.

Ahern sank the tying basket with only 20 seconds left to play, and came back fast in the extra period to sink another field goal and virtually win the game single-handed. Billie Matthews added another field goal shortly afterward to put the game on ice.

Charlotte Barely Wins.

A fighting team from the suburbs of Richmond—Ashland High—fought a closely contested game with the champions of North Carolina this afternoon, Charlotte, and barely managed to lose in the closing seconds by a 21-to-20 score.

Charlotte will meet the winner of the McKinley Tech-Jefferson High, Roanoke, game in the quarter-finals of the South Atlantic Interscholastic basket ball tournament tomorrow night.

Charlotte, seeded in the upper four of the tournament, started off with great fervor to send the small suburban team back to Ashland in quick order, and the favorites succeeded in pushing the play during the first three quarters. Four successive field goals by Ashland men brought new life to the Virginia squad after the final period opened and the score stood deadlocked at 19-19, with two minutes to play. Clyde Mullis, one of the smallest men in the tourney, put the game on ice a minute later with a spiralling basket which he threw while lying down.

Durham High Triumphs.

With a first-quarter lead that was never once threatened, Durham (N. C.) High School, easily defeated Massanutten Military Academy here this afternoon, 20-13, in the most loosely fought contest of the entire afternoon. This game followed three others that saw 1-point victories.

The first half ended, 9-7, the closest that Massanutten came to breaking the substantial lead held by the North Carolinians during the entire play. Edmund Swindell, forward of Durham, led the day's scoring with 7 points, while Ed Hale, of Massanutten, was runner-up with 6 points. The defense work of Elmos Hackney, Durham guard, and Vance Sykes, his runner-up mate, featured the Carolina victory.

Athletes Favored At V.P.I., Charged

Coach Redd Denies Editorial in School Paper.

Roanoke, Va., March 8 (AP).—Henry B. (Puss) Redd, head coach of football at Virginia Tech, today branded as false charges of favoritism made against the coaching staff in an editorial in The Virginia Tech, student paper.

The mentor, one of the trio of alumni coaches who took over the coaching tasks in 1932, said, "there's not a word of truth in the charges."

Coach Redd indicated that the editorial, which appeared in the issue of the Tech, published yesterday, was printed without the knowledge and sanction of the editor, C. P. Cabell, although the article stated that a survey had been conducted among the athletes and non-athletic students of the Tech corps. The editorial charged students who came here with records for previous athletic accomplishments were given preferred treatment.

Replying to a charge that athletes had left school because of the alleged "favoritism," Coach Redd said that the only men who had resigned from the corps did so because of domestic reasons or were asked to leave because of the violations of disciplinary rules.

Post's A. A. U. Title Tourney Schedules 9 Games Tonight

NINE games, bringing into action two unlimited teams, four 130-pound quintets, six in the 115-pound class and six in the 100-pound division, will be presented tonight in the District A. A. U. basket ball tournament which The Washington Post is sponsoring.

In the most pretentious single night program since the opening of the annual games, three battles will be waged at the Roosevelt High School gymnasium, while six others will be fought on the boys' and girls' courts of Macfarland Junior High School, situated just about a good long field goal from Roosevelt.

Rockville A. C., which annually walks off with honors in Montgomery County and which is reputed to have its best team in years, will engage the District Fire Department outfit at 9:30 o'clock at Roosevelt in the lone unlimited game. Through Marty Welsh, the team's guiding spirit, Rockville let it be known yesterday that it has a few surprises in store for some of the better-known unlimited foes, if and when they clash. Paul Farmer, Isadore Steinberg, Karl Becker, Paul Anders and John Pitzers are some of the chaps Rockville will throw into action.

Losing but few games this year, the Firemen hope to extinguish Rockville in short order, placing much faith in the ability of David and Henry Galotta, Bernard Essex and his brother, Eddie Moeller and Dave Painter to produce plenty of field goals.

The 130-pound scraps at Roosevelt are those between Bovello Plumbers and Washington Grays at 7:30, and the crack Boys' Club Fyfes, league winners, and Takoma-Silver Spring High at 8:30.

Panther A. C. and Georgetown Boys' Club are expected to furnish a hot tussle at 7:30 in their 100-pound game at Macfarland, while on the same court the Tip-Top Flashes will test the "Y" Hawks, and Baptist Boys' Home will engage Northeast Boys' Club, all in the 100-pound class. The 115-pound games are those between Boys' Club of Washington and Hoover Playground, Ebel's Grill and Potomac Boat Club Juniors, and Northeast Boy's Club and Savoy Theater.

Admission fee to Roosevelt is 25 cents; that to Macfarland, 10 cents. The kids weigh in at 7 p. m. promptly.

Handley High Matmen Seeking New Laurels

Winchester, Va., March 8 (Spl.). The wrestling team of Handley High School, of this city, claimant of the Virginia high school mat championship, will strive to add another State title to its record tomorrow night, when it tangles with the Weston High grapplers, of West Virginia, high school champions of the neighboring State.

Those who will represent the local school are Charlie Lillis, Marvin Haines, Charlie Johnson, Halsey Greene, J. B. Redmond, Howdie Garber and Larrie Fries. Under the tutelage of Coach J. B. Yates, the Handley wrestlers have reached the proverbial peak and are primed to defend the scholastic mat honors of the Old Dominion. The interstate flavor attached to tonight's matches has aroused considerable added interest.

Albany May Schedule Roanoke College Nine

Martinsville, Va., March 7 (Spl.). Tentative arrangements have been made for a baseball game on Saturday, April 14, at Roanoke between the Albany Club, of the International League and Roanoke College, of Salem, Va. Negotiations are being carried on between representatives here of Joseph Cambria, owner of the Albany Senators and the Roanoke College athletic authorities.

The Albany Club will hold a three-week spring training camp in Martinsville beginning about March 25. Exhibition games are being arranged with other college, independent and professional clubs in this section.

Biloxi Drill Is Stopped By Rain

Hurler Is Remembered for Game With A's; Lost, 3-0, in 11th.

Chapman's Back Sore; Bolton Unsigned, With Catcher Shortage.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

BILOXI, Miss., March 8 (Spl.). The shifting of rookie pitchers goes on apace at the Nats' training camp, with Prospectors Griffith and Cronin now secretly hoping to strike pay dirt in the presence at least of Ray Prim, who escaped from Joe Cambria's Albany club late last season.

Covert glances at Prim as he uncoiled his long left arm in the casual pitching practice represent the only outward display of enthusiasm by Cronin and Griffith toward the former Albany southpaw, but there is no mistaking the opinions of Coaches Altrock and Schacht, who are staking their official heads on the ability of Prim to become a valuable adjunct to the Nats' pitching staff.

The Jackson, Ala., boy tasted of big league warfare on October 1, 1933, when he received his pitching baptism against the Athletics at Griffith Stadium and did better than tolerably well. With the pennant won, Cronin sent Prim out to pitch, with Johnny Kerr playing second base, Dave Harris playing first, Travis on third, Berg catching and Cliff Bolton in right field.

Beaten in Eleventh, 3-0.

For ten innings Prim was headed toward fame, shutting the Athletics out, but the Nats found Rube Walberg pitching his best game of the season and were equally unfortunate in run-scoring. In the eleventh a barrage of singles crashed down about Prim's ears and he lost the game, 3 to 0, but he gained a heap of prestige.

His fast ball was burning past the A's hitters and he was serving up a bit of a screw ball that helped keep him out of trouble, and it is this latter item that he has set about to perfect in the training season here.

Prim is one of the million players sent up to the majors by Cambria, the horse trader of baseball who, at the end of last season, had disposed of all but four of the players he had under contract.

Never Became Rusty.

Cambria's players, according to Frim, never become rusty from inaction. When he wasn't pitching he was pinch-hitting, but when he wasn't pitching it was an open date on the schedule. Between July 1 and September 1, he started 18 ball games and finished up with a record of winning 14 and losing 10 with a seventh-place club.

For the second consecutive day the Washington club was forced to abbreviate its practice session today when the condensed atmosphere of the Biloxi Chamber of Commerce, rain we call it in Washington, descended in buckets while a recalcitrant sun was playing tag with ominous dark clouds.

After sticking it out on the field through a light drizzle, the squad was finally forced to make a run for it when the clouds disgorged their water cargo. Five minutes after the players had dressed, the sun was shining again in its ironic splendor and Chamber of Commerce officials shed their sad pans.

Chapman's Back Sore.

The serenity of the training program was interrupted by the absence from practice of Pitcher Ed Chapman, who reported a sore back, which Trainer Mike Martin promptly diagnosed as a sore back. Chapman reported at the park in mufti, but is expected to report tomorrow in uniform with Martin giving personal attention to his progress.

Chief among the day's developments was the private discovery of Al Crowder, who gleefully seized upon Tiny Mills, the 6-foot-5-inch recruit from Mobile, as a member of his volley ball team. Crowder stationed Mills at the net and the big boy was having a time of it before the Biloxi fog drowned out the proceedings. Mills will be retained on the squad at least until camp is broken, unless Capt. Crowder loses interest in his volley ball team.

Hargaden, G. U., Named All-Star

Hilltop Ace Is Forward on Conference Five.

For the second consecutive year Ed Hargaden, Georgetown's clever forward, has been honored with a position on the all-star team selected by coaches of teams in the Eastern Conference and selected from league players. Jack Crowley, Hargaden's teammate, has been awarded a guard berth on the second team.

Two Pitt men, and one each from Georgetown, Temple and West Virginia, comprise the first team. Five clubs are represented on the second.

Paired with Hargaden at forward is West Virginia's center, Joe Stydahar, a ponderous fellow who developed into one of the league's most formidable players. Stydahar did not compare favorably with Claire Cribbs, Pitt's great center, but so great was his value to the Mountaineers that the coaches felt justified in putting him at forward.

Russ Ochsenhirt, who never touched a basket ball before entering Pitt, and Harold Rosan, of Temple, make a great defensive pair and also could be counted on to supply their share of points. Rosan led the conference in scoring last season.

Irish Name Manager.

South Bend, Ind., March 8 (AP). George T. Demetrio, of New Haven, Conn., was named senior manager of football at the Notre Dame manager's dinner today. His assistant will be Thomas W. Thompson, Detroit.

Captain at Illinois.

Champaign, Ill., March 8 (AP). Frank Froschauer, of Lincoln, Ill., a four-letter winner, today was named captain of the University of Illinois 1934-35 basket ball team.

Monel Sets Hialeah Record, But Is Disqualified and Purse Given to Quel Jeu

Officials Deal Suspension To Balaski

Flying Sailor Is Placed Second and Hokuao Is Rated Third.

Jockey Walls Fined $50; Meade Takes Double; Tutticurio Wins.

HIALEAH PARK, March 8 (AP).—Slyvester W. Labrot, Maryland sportsman, and the New Orleans jockey, Lester Balaski, were justly deprived of a double here this afternoon when Monel, after establishing a new track record of 1:35 3-5 for a mile, was disqualified by the stewards. The full sister to Red Avon finished a head in front of the Arden Farms' Quel Jeu, even-money favorite. The latter was awarded the purse, beating A. A. Baroni's Flying Sailor by a length. Hokuao, winner of six straight, was placed third, five lengths farther back.

Balaski, who has been under suspension before this winter for rough riding, was suspended the remainder of the meeting by the stewards, who have been very alert lately in cases of foul riding. There was considerable booing mixed with the cheering, although Quel Jeu was confidently backed, but the ruling of the officials appeared a just one. Balaski bothered Quel Jeu all through the stretch, shaking his whip carelessly on three different occasions.

Springsteel's Record.

Strangely enough, it was Springsteel, a stablemate of Monel's, that recently ran a mile in 1:35 4-5, Monel's time clipping a fifth of a second off that mark.

Monel's high speed carried her into a long lead. Flying Sailor was closest in pursuit until Quel Jeu, was sent up fast at the tip of the stretch. The three horses entered the final furlong closely aligned and Monel, after interfering with Quel Jeu, held on gamely. Flying Sailor weakened in the final drive.

Toytime spilled the beans in the first race when she proved a handy winner by a length and a half over the heavily backed Bartering Kate. Try Fair was third all the way. Toytime paid $9.80.

Tutticurio Scores.

Tutticurio was best of the 16 maiden 2-year-olds competing in the second dash. Breaking with the first flight, the Son of Tutti Frutti lost no time working his way into a safe lead. Lee Humphries hustled the youngster along and he scored by three lengths to pay $16.10. Polly Hundred provided a thrill for long-shot players, racing close to the leader from the start and saving the place by a head at $68.90. Hardatit, a newcomer grouped in the field, was heavily supported and finished third.

The veteran Pete Walls rode in top form and hung it on Jimmy Hunter to win the third purse astride Dark Conquest, $5.60 choice, which beat Style Corner by a head. In High cut out most of the running and, though tiring, held on well to save third money from Meloy, the one to force the early pace. Jockey Walls was suspended three days by the starter for misbehavior at the post. The penalty on Walls was changed from three days' suspension by the starter to a fine of $50.

My Purchase Impressive.

Platers of the older division clashed in the fourth, a mile test, with the 4-to-1 shot, My Purchase, scoring impressively in the fast time of 1:36 3-5 under Bobby Jones. Pardee, the favorite, was a tired second, a length and a half back and the same distance before Integrity. The latter, lightly regarded in the betting, might have been best. He was the victim of weird handling and was running very fast in the final furlong when it was too late. Pardee led into the stretch, but My Purchase, reserved off the pace in the early running, ran over the leader in the last sixteenth.

Don Meade made it two straight in the sixth event, booting Primute home by a length in handy fashion to return $9.30. Boy Crazy, carrying most of the support, drove to the place, two spans clear of the slow-starting Lone Hand.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Strange as it seems, science has found a new kind of water—costly and rare, no one can be quite sure what this new water can best be used for, but scientists are busy finding out. It is explained that the ordinary water is composed of two atoms of hydrogen and one of oxygen. The new water has the same composition, except that the hydrogen atom is twice as heavy as it should be.

The strange water was first discovered three years ago at Columbia University. Later investigations undertaken at Princeton resulted in the manufacture of the compound at $660,000 a quart. Since then, however, the bottom has dropped out of the price, and by a newer method it costs only $66,000 to make a quart of the heavy water.

Arturo Toscanini, master conductor of symphony orchestras, does all his conducting from memory. His mastery of masterpieces of music is so complete, according to an estimate by James Francis Cooke, editor of The Etude, that he could conduct a two-hour concert every day for a year without referring to the written music.

Hell's Angel, a famous bucking horse owned by Col. W. T. Johnson, San Antonio, Tex., has been a big attraction at rodeos for three years because nobody can ride him. The horse, strange as it seems, seems to know what is expected of him—he is gentle until the chute gate is opened, then he promptly throws his rider.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, March 8.

Thanks to the splurge of disqualifications that has developed here, Bennings, Inc., can report that it had a winner today. Except for the fact that Monel's No. 7 was taken down and Quel Jeu's No. 5 was hung instead, we were taking a beating all along the line. However, we had only one horse to finish last, Moralist, and he was in front most of the way. Jockey Balaski was the latest to feel the warmth of the stewards. His fouling on Monel ended the hope of the Labrot Stable for a double. Toytime won for that outfit in the opener. Clocker Mike rushed back to the hotel from the track tonight and dove into the speed books, determined to help me make it a winning day tomorrow. BILL.

First race—Happy Scot has been close of late and needs only a hustling ride to get home ahead of these. Periodical to take care of the place. Ondott has beaten fair fields at times and will be dangerous.

Second race—I'm giving Little Dinah another changce. This one needed education last out and we may see a real race today. The daughter of Dinah Did Upset is a sizzling worker. Candy Prince has been tipped hereabouts. Try Sympathy for the rest.

Third race—Parity, with Johnny Gilbert in the saddle, will do a lot of running in this field and anything that beats this one will know it has been in a hoss race. Village Vamp and Bright Bubble to gain the place and show.

Fourth race—James River seems best suited of this group trying a mile. Dornoch jumped out of the course last out. A stronger rider today would make a whale of a difference. Chastity for the third award.

Fifth race—Time Clock is the logical choice here. The Kentucky Derby hope has worked well and should score. Flint Shot is as shrap as recent efforts indicate. Boy Valet to complete the money circle.

Sixth race—Olamay gets a promising spot here and has Just Remember as a chief rival. Both are in excellent shape. Billies Orphan may surprise by making a battle of it.

Seventh race—Arab showed that he is good now when he came through with a fine effort the other day. Fort Dearborn and Darkling appear to have the edge on the others.

The Post's Consensus at Hialeah Park

Elkton, Skyland In CCC Semifinal

Running into the final rounds of the basket ball tournament being conducted by the Eleventh sub-district CCC, Virginia, two teams representing Companies Nos. 1387, Camp SNP-3, Elkton, Va., and 334, Camp SNP-1, Skyland, Va., are hotly contesting for the honor of meeting the team from the 289th Company, Camp P-66, Happy Creek, Va., for the sub-district championship. The teams from Companies Nos. 1387 and 334 have both lost one game to each other, while the team from Happy Creek, Va., goes into the finals undefeated.

The game between the 1387th Company and the 334th Company to decide which will meet the undefeated team from the 289th Company will take place in Harrisonburg tonight. A handsome silver cup will be awarded the sub-district champions by public spirited merchants in this area. The sub-district champions will immediately enter into a tournament to determine the championship of the Virginia District, which is composed of approximately 90 CCC camps.

The final play-off between tonight's winner and the Happy Creek Team will be played next week.

Brustigert Easily Wins Feature at New Orleans

New Orleans, March 8 (AP).—Brustigert, a 3-year-old son of Donnacona from the Devereaux Brothers Stable, spread-eagled his field today in winning the 6-furlong claiming feature at the Fair Grounds.

Jumping to the front at the rise of the barrer, Brustigert quickly opened up daylight advantage, slowed down until he had only a half-length lead over R. L. Jordan's Almadel Jr. at the head of the stretch and then opened up again. He crossed the finish line with four lengths to spare over Almadel Jr., with Petite Julie third in the field of five.

Well fancied, by reasons of good performances the last two times out, the winner paid $7.00 for $2 after running the three-quarters of a mile in 1:13 3-5.

Hagerstown Park Leased.

Hagerstown, Md., March 8 (Spl.). The municipal stadium has been leased to the Washington County Baseball League for the 1934 season, the Hagerstown Field Athletic Association announced.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOYTIME, $9.80, $3.80, $3.10; BARTERING KATE, $2.90, $2.50; TRY FAIR, $6.80.

TOYTIME, going in improved form, followed fast early pace, finally raced BARTERING KATE down, and then drew away, winning nicely in hand. BARTERING KATE broke fast, displayed a world of speed, but weakened in last sixteenth. TRY FAIR, well up all the way, ran a fair race. BARKANTINE made a game effort. PIETY was on the outside for entire trip.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs (straightaway), nursery course. Purse, $700; claiming price, $2,500. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:45½. Off at 2:53½. Winner, Brandon Biable's ch. c. (4), by Tutti Frutti—Curiosity Box. Trained by F. M. Bray. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:34 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TUTTICURIO, $16.10, $7.80, $5.20; POLLY HUNDRED, $68.90, $15.40; HARDATIT (field), $3.70.

TUTTICURIO got away fast, was sent to the front, and drew away easily in final furlong. POLLY HUNDRED stood long drive samely and just lasted to save the place. HARDATIT broke well, but swerved out and was bothered some just after the start. She closed very fast and is worth watching. She can win races. MY SELECTION, well up all the way, ran good race. GOBET, very rank at the start, broke slow, but closed some ground. EVER TRUE made a game effort.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start fair. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:25½. Off at 3:28. Winner, Fair Fields Stable's ch. g. (4), by Traumer—Sun Vive. Trained by J. Whyte. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK CONQUEST, $5.60, $3.80, $3.30; STYLE CORNER, $3.30, $3.80; IN HIGH, $4.30.

DARK CONQUEST got away well, was taken to outside, where he would be clear of interference, closed with a rush in stretch, and won going away. STYLE CORNER moved up gamely in stretch and held on well. IN HIGH displayed keen speed, saved ground and was kept on the inside all the way. MELOY was kept on the inside all the way, made a game effort. CHAIN lacked speed and never was prominent. QUORUM was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming price, $2,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:58. Off at 3:59½. Winner, Mrs. M. Stock Rallies Score Gains in Late Trading Control Bill Outlook Aids Recovery; Sales Total 1,716,980 Shares.

New York, March 8 (AP).—Stocks had a last-hour rally today which converted earlier irregularity into general net gains of fractions to more than 2 points.

The market's late recovery coincided with intimations from Washington sources that the exchange control bill, as now drafted would be changed before it gets Congressional sanction.

Specifically, the upturn started when financial news tickers published word that Chairman Fletcher had indicated his willingness to consider certain alterations in the measure.

Proposals for Changes.

Among the provisions mentioned as candidates for possible revision included some to which the strongest objections have been raised in committee hearings, notably those dealing with margin requirements, quarterly periodic audited reports by listing corporations and provisions covering specialists.

How far any changes might go was not revealed, but Wall street gained the impression that the whole bill might be made more flexible.

The rally served to lift some of the gloom which recently had settled over the financial districts; it was fairly brisk for a time and the ticker fell 2 or 3 minutes in arrears.

Chart Is Cheered.

Previously, stocks had sagged in spots and firmed in others, with trading light, and the final decision to move upward cheered the chart followers who have been watching rather anxiously for support levels. Sales totaled 1,716,980 shares.

International Nickel was strong all day, accompanied by reports of foreign buying. It closed more than 2 points higher.

Montgomery Ward, more in a mood to recognize its latest sales report, also moved up a couple of points. Commercial Credit was another favorite, while American Telephone, helped by a good January earnings statement published late yesterday, moved among the leaders.

Motor Issues Improve.

Motor issues improved, partly in response to news that President Green of the American Federation of Labor had asked workers to be represented at next week's Washington conference on the Michigan situation.

General Motors' sales increased sharply last month. Metal stocks, led by a 6-point rise in U. S. Smelting, strengthened, probably because of reports that action on a silver bill was imminent.

Steel and merchandising equities, as well as many rails, did reasonably well. Aircrafts, up 1 to 3 at the best, responded to the President's plan for private air-mail operation.

Money markets drew some attention because of the reduction in bankers' acceptance yield rates. This cut, which virtually restored the low levels existing in January, 1933, reflected the small supply of bills and was presumably designed to attract offerings from bank portfolios. The asking rate on short term paper of this description is now one-quarter of 1 per cent against the New York Reserve Bank's 1½ per cent rediscount figure.

Goods Markets.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—Cotton goods were firmer today without much change in actual sales. Some sales of fall men's-wear suiting worsted have been made at prices generally 10 per cent lower than the peak prices of spring, although the markets are not yet formally open for the new season. Rayon yarns continue firm and quiet. Silk piece dyes and prints are doing somewhat better for spring. Burlaps were unchanged.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Main Issue on Security Exchange Regulation Now Is Whether Fletcher-Rayburn Bill Should Not Be Thrown Overboard and a New Start Made.

By Ralph West Robey.

In view of President Roosevelt's statement there perhaps is little reason to doubt that some kind of security exchange regulation will be enacted by the present session of Congress. The President is reported as being "confident" that there will be such legislation. This assurance, however, throws no light on the problem of how drastic the legislation will be. More specifically, it leaves us just as much in the dark as ever on whether we are to have something along the lines of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill or a measure that more nearly will follow the suggestions of the interdepartmental committee appointed by the President that made a report some time ago.

In the latter case quite a new bill would have to be introduced, for it simply would be impossible to modify the Fletcher-Rayburn measure sufficiently to reduce it to a mere regulatory act such as the Dickenson report advised. There is much ground, however, for believing that this would be a wise course. In other words, it is quite possible that the public interest would be served better by throwing the whole Fletcher-Rayburn bill overboard and making new start.

Would Not Involve Giving Up Idea of Regulation.

Such a discarding of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill would not involve an abandonment of the idea of getting an effective regulation of the security exchanges. Rather it would mean merely that the bill would be designed with a view of reforming the exchanges in such manner as to assure the greatest possible benefit of society from such organized markets. More bluntly, it would mean that the problem would be approached from a sympathetic point of view.

That the Fletcher-Rayburn bill reflects a genuine antagonism and basic questioning of the possible benefit of organized exchanges, scarcely is open to doubt. From the bill itself, in fact, one could make out a fairly strong case that those who drafted the measure must have desired the virtual elimination of security exchanges in this country. If this is true, they must not have appreciated the significance of various of the provisions included, for it is quite clear from the testimony that has been offered in the hearings that enactment of the bill as it was introduced in Congress would result in wholesale limitation of security trading.

Virtual Elimination May Be the Aim.

It is possible, of course, that the Administration and Congress may desire such a limitation of trading. They may not be satisfied with a mere reform of the security exchanges and regulation of capital issues. They seriously may want to make it impossible for private trading in securities to continue.

Personally, however, I do not believe that this is the case. I believe even less that this is the desire of the public at large. Accordingingly, I do not think that the Flecher-Rayburn bill is suited to the needs of our present problem. It may not be desirable to go so far as to discard the measure completely, but nothing less than a more or less complete redrafting can make of it an act that will regulate and reform, rather than destroy.

Federal Bonds Give Market Forward Push

Minor Changes in Rails; Sales Volume Rises to $14,870,000.

New York, March 8 (AP).—Strength of U. S. Government securities gave the bond market a rather pleasing appearance today, despite the mildly irregular tendencies displayed by corporation issues.

The day's turnover amounted to $14,870,000, par value, against $13,888 000 yesterday.

The average for 60 domestic corporate loans eased one-tenth of a point.

Federal Loan Upturn.

The upturn in the Government section was attributed largely to the favorable implications of the Treasury's March 15, financing, which, much to the surprise of most of the financial district, is to be confined to the refunding of some $460,000,000 of certificates. Estimates of the March offering had ranged from $1,000,000,000 to $1,500,000,000.

The inference drawn by some bankers from the modest new offering of four-year 3 per cent Treasury notes was that an advantageous exchange plan would be proposed to holders of the $1 000,000,000 called Liberty four 4¼s, which fall due next month.

The revival of interest in the listed Governments was reflected in the expanded volume of trading in this section. Some $3,500,000 of these loans changed hands compared with $1,800,000 yesterday. Gains ranged from two thirty-seconds to fourteen thirty-seconds of a point. The called Liberty issue advanced five thirty-seconds to 100.21.

Changes in Rails.

Minor changes were the rule in the rail, utility and industrial divisions, Alleghany Corporation Liens dropped a point or more, after the moderate recovery of the previous session. Great Northern bonds, however, gained as much.

New Orleans Public Service bonds were down 2 to 3 points following orders for rate reductions by the Louisiana State commission. Tennessee Electric 6s, on the other hand, advanced 2½ points. Laclede Gas 5s lost 2½. Prime investment loans generally were steady to firm.

Foreign obligations were quiet and slightly mixed. The Argentines rallied a point or more. Silesia 6s dropped 2⅜ points. Unimportant fluctuations were the rule elsewhere in this division.

Bonds—Federal loans strengthened the market and advances averaged one-tenth of a point. There were minor changes in rails. Sales volume increased to $14,870,000.

Curb—Trading lethargy was broken and the list of leaders closed higher. Late buying lifted prices. Sales volume declined to 271,000 shares.

Wheat—Prices rebounded from the downward trend and closed practically at the top of rallies. News of heavy buying in Winnipeg aided in restoring strength. May wheat sold at 86⅝; July at 86.

Cotton—Prices advanced after reactions in early trading. May sold at 12.25. The general market climbed 15 to 24 points. March sold at 12.13.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed steady, 11 to 15 points higher. March sold at 10.90; May, at 11.08.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.20; refined sold at 4.50.

Coffee—Spot coffee demand was firm. Santos No. 5 sold at 11¾; Rio No. 7, at 11¼.

Silver—Bar silver was steady. It sold in New York ⅛ higher, at 46⅛ cents per ounce.

Gold—Bar gold in the United States sold at $35 per ounce. It sold in London at 136 shillings and 8 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was steady on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.07⅛ to the English pound; 6.58 cents to the French franc, and 39.66 cents to the German mark.

Curb Breaks Lethargy to Stage Upturn

Leading Issues Close Higher as Sales Decline to 271,000 Shares.

New York, March 8 (AP).—The curb market threw off its lethargy and moved briskly forward in the last hour today. The closing tone was firm, many leading issues finishing with net advances of fractions to more than a point.

Quotations were steady at the opening, but a dribbling of offerings followed and irregularity prevailed until the late buying flurry lifted the list. Oils alone failed to show improvement.

Aircraft shares were higher in sympathy with an active demand for that group on the big board. Aluminum Co. of America and Singer Manufacturing rose 3 points each in light transfers. Issues showing advances of major fractions to around 2 points included American Gas & Electric, Bliss Corporation, Distillers Corporation - Seagrams, Electric Bond & Share, Hiram Walker, Hudson Bay Mining, Pan-American Airways, Waco Aircraft, Schiff Co. and A. O. Smith.

Gulf and Humble Oils were unchanged. Swift & Co. improved slightly, but Dow Chemical reacted a point.

Transfers approximated 271,000 shares, compared with 303,000 yesterday.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Chain store sales—February volume of 20 chain stores and mail order companies aggregated $134,829,267, against $100,775,818 in the same month last year.

Worsteds—It is reported in the trade that a number of mills are showing fall suitings and that some have booked moderate initial business. It is understood that prices show a 10 per cent decline from the opening spring levels.

Copper—The domestic market is showing a bit more life although demand is still below anything which the trade would call active. It is said that a fair amount of metal has been booked for delivery from March through June.

Chemicals—The fertilizer branch of the market is showing more activity, a normal seasonal development. Dealers are looking for a considerable expansion in their trade over the next few weeks.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Profit-taking and lack of fresh buying orders caused irregularity to continue on the Stock Exchange today, especially in gilt-edged securities, home rails, industrials and speculative shares, which declined, but closed above their lowest levels. Argentine rails and some gold-mining issues firmed up in the afternoon. The market closed undecided.

Paris—The further decline in Citroen shares and the continued weakness in Rio Tintos lowered other issues on the Bourse, with the exception of rentes. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—After opening dull, trading on the Boerse was stimulated by the demand for dye shares. The market closed irregular.

A. T. & T. Net Is Boosted by Longer Lines

Hershey Chocolate's Profit in 1933 Reduced to $4,246,034.

New York, March 8 (AP).—A further gain in the long lines business of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in January was indicated by the report for that month filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. Gross income for the month was $7,747,893 against $6,651,153 in the same month last year. Net operating income was $1,168,512 against $459,497.

Hershey Chocolate Corp. reports 1933 net profit of $4,246,034 compared with $4,737,765 in 1932.

Graham-Paige Motors Corp. had net profit of $66,997 last year against loss of $2,810,852 in 1932.

Beneficial Industrial Loan Corp. and subsidiary corporations report consolidated net earnings for the year ended December 31, 1933, after interest, amortization charges and provision for minority interests and Federal taxes, of $4,317,176.55. After payment of dividends on preferred stock, series A, net income applicable to the common stock amounted to $3,563,199.05, equivalent to $1.70 per share on the 2,092,444 shares outstanding December 31, 1933.

Directors of the United Carbon Co. today declared a dividend of 43 cents on the common stock, payable April 2 to stock of record March 17. Three months ago the company ordered a payment of 40 cents against 25 cents declared six months ago.

Directors of Selected Industries, Inc., have declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.375 a share on the $5.50 dividend prior stock, payable April 1 to stockholders of record March 17.

Reporting improved business since May of 1933, the International Harvester Co. ended its 1933 business year with a net loss of $1,886,000, as compared to a loss of $7,582,000 in 1932, according to its annual report made public today.

"The first indications of a revival in trade were noted in May, 1933, the report said, "and the improvement continued throughout the remainder of the year. Sales throughout the world were slightly more than 5 per cent greater in 1933 than in 1932. Economies in operating and distribution costs largely account for the company's improved showing."

U. S. Dollar Steady On Foreign Marts

(Associated Press.)

Foreign exchange markets were inactive and changes narrow today. The dollar was steady in terms of other currencies, and the British pound sterling advanced slightly in terms of the French franc.

In London the dollar lost ¼ of a cent to close at 5.08¼ to the pound after opening at 5.08¾ and declining to 5.09 in early trading. In New York sterling lost 1¼ cents in later trading at 5.07¼.

The dollar was unchanged in Paris at an equivalent of 6.57 cents to the franc. In New York francs also were unchanged at 6.58 cents in later trading.

Speculative interests were believed the purchasers of gold valued at $3,027,062 in the London open mraket, as reports again were circulated that an increase in the price of the metal was expected to be announced by the United States Treasury in the near future.

At the present levels exchanges it is unprofitbale to ship gold to America at the stipulated price of $35 an ounce now being paid.

Wheat Renews Climb on Drop In Liquidation

Prices Close Near Top of Rally; Winnipeg Buying Aids.

Chicago, March 8 (AP).—Rebounding from downturns that earlier had taken wheat and oats to fresh bottom levels for the current movement, grain values scored fractional advances late today.

Trade observers said the rally was largely due to the fact that there had been a four-day decline and that as a result the markets were in an oversold condition.

May wheat at extreme low point today, 85½ cents, showed an overnight fall of nearly a cent to a new minimum since January 12, and May oats yielded almost as much, descending to 32¾ cents, the lowest figures since last October.

Wheat Closes Unsettled.

With at least a temporary let-up in May wheat and oats liquidation toward the last, wheat closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅞ of a cent higher; corn, ⅛ to ⅜ up; oats, at ¼ decline to ¾ advance, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2 cents.

The first indications of latent power to rally developed when the wheat market on its early downward course reached 85⅞ cents for May contracts. This had been a recent resistance point, and standing orders to purchase were encountered again, but the buying support at times proved inadequate in subsequent dealings, and it was not until 85½ had been touched that upturns in earnest began.

Final transactions, however, were at virtually the day's top.

Sales at Winnipeg.

Helping to restore comparative strength to prices late were estimates that upward of a million bushels of wheat futures had been bought yesterday at Winnipeg against flour and wheat sales for export. Bulls emphasized also that unfavorable crop advices were coming forward in regard to winter wheat in Ohio and Indiana.

On the other hand, snowfalls beneficial to crops in Kansas and elsewhere Southwest attracted little notice.

Corn displayed relative firmness most of the time as compared with wheat and oats. Spread trading between oats and corn was a feature. Provisions were easy in the absence of any aggressive demand.

Soviet Industry Found Driving To Prosperity

Akron, Ohio, March 8.—Economic progress in Russia, marked by unusual industrial activity, is apparent, according to V. I. Montenyohl, treasurer of the B. F. Goodrich Co., who with S. M. Jett, Goodrich secretary, has just returned to Akron following a business trip abroad.

"While our stay in Russia was limited, we had opportunities to visit a number of manufacturing plants in and near Moscow and were impressed by their size and efficiency," the Goodrich official said.

"There is no question that the present industrial order there is producing satisfactory results. Contentment of the people is obvious even to the lay observer.

"We were well received and found that Russian business men were informed and keenly interested in the operation of NRA and other governmental agencies and measures in this country.

"Recovery from depression seems to be somewhat further advanced in England than in any European country we traveled through. The British Goodrich factory at Leyland reported improving business, better general conditions and a satisfactory outlook for most industry.

"It is our belief that there has been economic improvement in Europe during the past year in spite of political difficulties in many of the nations."

The Akron men were accompanied on part of their trip by D. M. Goodrich, chairman of the Goodrich board of directors.

General Motors' Sales Rise to 58,911 Cars

New York, March 8 (AP).—Sales of General Motors Corporation cars and trucks to consumers in the United States in February totaled 58,911 units, compared with 23,438 in January and 42,280 in February a year ago.

Railways Net $30,931,205 In January

Earnings for Month at Rate of 2.16 Per Cent on Investments.

The net railway operating income of the Class I railroads in January amounted to $30,931,205, which for that month was at the annual rate of return of 2.16 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics, and made public yesterday.

In January, 1933, their net railway operating income amounted to $13,585,010, or 0.94 per cent on their property investment.

Property investment is the value of road and equipment as shown by the books of the railways, including materials, supplies and cash. The net railway operating income is what is left after the payment of operating expenses, taxes and equipment rentals, but before interest and other fixed charges are paid.

Lonaconing Girls Win League Upset

Lonaconing, Md., March 8 (Spl.).—Central High School's sextet knocked the dope in the Western Maryland Interscholastic League championship race by taking the measure of the Pennsylvania Avenue High School by the score of 32 to 24, and throwing the race for the girls' title into a tie between Penn Avenue and Allegany, both Cumberland teams.

Penn's defeat, coupled with Allegany's victory over Barton in Cumberland, deadlocked the Queen City teams for first place, each having won eight games, lost one and tied one.

Penn's boys gained the right to battle it out with the Allegany High School quintet for the championship by scoring its eleventh victory in 12 starts. Central finished on the short end of a 58-to-27 score.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WE are entering the season of the big sun spots, a fine howdydo for people who have just sunk a lot of money into one of those new all-wave receivers in anticipation of some impressive long-distance listening.

They're in for a bad time of it, according to Dr. Orestes Caldwell, a former radio commissioner and a member of the committee of the new Planetarium of the Astronomers Association of the American Museum of Natural History. It seems that sun spots are bad for the radio reflecting mirror; and without the radio reflecting mirror in condition you're lucky if you can get Cincinnati.

For the past year or so sun spots have been undergoing one of their "lows," a situation which they have to put up with periodically. But in a few months they will be coming into their own again, breaking out all over the face of the sun like measles, sending forth all manner of ultra violet rays to roughen the now smooth reflecting mirror. Dr. Caldwell says a rough reflecting mirror jumbles radio signals in such a manner that they can't get anywhere at all.

THE last season of the big sun spots was in 1928 and 1929, and any one who stayed up until 4 o'clock in the morning to hear Los Angeles in those years knows it would have been much better to have gone to bed. Already Dr. Caldwell has observed a spot near one of the sun's poles. It is only a small one and you wouldn't think to look at it that it was going to amount to much. But before you know it will have grown up and there will be a lot of little sun spots all around it.

It's a bad situation, but about all you can do is to wait until the spots get round to having one of their cyclical "lows" again. It will probably take three or four years, so you might want to go to the Metropolitan Museum in New York and check up on the sun spots in ancient Egypt. It seems that the effect of sun spots are written in tree rings for thousands of years back, the greater tree growth in some years reflecting periods of greater ultra-violet radiation, or more sun spots. The Metropolitan has a number of wooden caskets and statues with pretty well defined rings 2,000 years old which should help you kill time.

On the evening of March 18, 1919, four young men played "ragtime" for a campus party at Penn State College. They called themselves the Waring-McClintock Snap Orchestra—two banjos, a piano and drums, Fred and Tom Waring, Poley McClintock and a young man whose name doesn't matter. All but the unnamed young man survive as Warings Pennsylvanians, finishing their fifteenth year of music-making on a Columbia program a week from Sunday.

The evolution of the Pennsylvanians is a long one and involves such all but forgotten organizations as Waring's Pep, Waring's Banjazztra and the equally snappy Waring's Banjo Orchestra. In those days folks came to hear Poley McClintock's "frog voice," and the boys got as much as $65 for a full evening's dance engagement and charged $2.50 more if you wanted an extra saxophone player. Then came 1921 and another University of Michigan Jay Hop, where, as the Pennsylvanians, they stole the show from two of the most famous dance organizations in the land. A vaudeville tour and an engagement at Les Ambassadeurs in Paris quickly followed.

Today the Pennsylvanians' annual earnings run well into six figures and their headquarters occupy an entire floor in a New York office building. Fred and Tom have private offices and secretaries. In 1919 four young men "practiced" in a Penn State fraternity house. Now the Waring organization—25 musicians, a glee club and two sets of female singers—rehearse in a hall of their own.

After years of radio reporting—the arrival of Lindbergh, the Tunney-Dempsey fight, World Series—Graham McNamee is making his first personal appearance this week in a Broadway movie house. The Pickens Sisters, the Sisters of the Skillet, Eddie East and Ralph Dumke and Don Bestor's Orchestra, all radio performers, are on the same bill.

WMAL'S long-awaited Announcers Frolic has been programmed for 10 tonight. All the boys will be there in costume for a version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" that will sound more like "Diamond Lil" than anything else.

Ridgewood
A blended whiskey, favored by those who like a fine product at a low price. Straight, 4-year-old whiskey, aged in wood, is the base of this blend.

MeadowBrook
A reasonably priced blend—smooth and mellow. As in all Hiram Walker blends, a straight, 4-year-old whiskey, aged in wood, is the base.

BlackHawk
One of the most popular brands offered by this famous house. A generous amount of straight, 4-year-old whiskey, aged in wood, is used in the blending.

Three Fine Whiskies

. . . FROM THE FAMOUS HOUSE OF

Hiram Walker

For more than three generations, the world has looked to Hiram Walker & Sons for quality and purity in every product sold under that old and respected name.

Now this famous house offers three of the finest blends that skill and experience can produce . . . blends that are so rich and mellow, so carefully and expertly blended, that they appeal to the most exacting taste.

The straight whiskey used is more than four years old—distilled by Hiram Walker & Sons, and drawn from extensive stocks aged in wood at our Canadian plants. You will find the price of these excellent brands very reasonable, too.

If you prefer a fine bonded whiskey, you will like Hiram Walker's "Canadian Club" or Hiram Walker's American Rye or Bourbon. They are aged in wood over six years, as the Canadian government's stamp, affixed to each bottle, attests.

London Dry Gin

Have you ever tried Hiram Walker's London Dry Gin? Like every other Hiram Walker product, it is distinguished for its quality and purity. It is triple distilled, and greatly in demand for cocktails and other mixed drinks.
